a girls school in Chelsea and then ignored for two centuries until 1895, commemorating the bicentennial of Purcell's death.

Jommelli set the story three times, twice with Pietro Metastasio's opera librettos in the mid-18th century and once as a cantata whose libretto was written by an anonymous poet. "Didone abbandonata" was composed circa 1750 and generally believed to be written between two operas. Jommelli was regarded as one of the leaders of operatic change in the 18th century with his dramatic recitatives and his expressive melodies and "Didone abbandonata" clearly illustrates the power of Jommelli's compositional style.

Concertmaster Paul Sonner and Kaylee Erlewein are on violins, Margaret Beck plays viola, Marga Eickholt is on cello, Charisse Tietjen is bass and Robert Pattengale performs on harpsichord.

Guided tours of Castle Farms are available before the music starts, beginning at 2:30 p.m. and the cost for the tours is $10 per person. Tours may be arranged by calling the Castle at (231) 237-0884.

CHARLEVOIX — It's been five years since the Charlevoix football team made its way into style.

The Rayders would do just that on Friday, as they concluded the regular season with a 31-0 win over Northern Michigan Football League I rival, Harbor Springs.

"It was a game the kids really wanted to win, motivated for the playoffs," Charlevoix coach Ron Bindi said.

Charlevoix ends the regular season 6-3 overall, 4-1 in their first season in the NMFL I. The Rayders would win four straight games to end the year, a streak that would include three defensive shutouts, allowing just six points in four games.

WILLIAMSBURG — While Boyne City had a great day on the boys' side, in the girls' race it was all Amber Way.

Competing against a field that included four of the five fastest runners in Division 3 this season, Charlevoix's Way defended her regional crown, leading from start to finish and winning in a season best time of 17:51.61.

Facing off for the second time this season against Traverse City St. Francis junior and elite runner Holly Bullough, Way took a big lead early and used that distance to hold off Bullough and her mighty kick down the stretch for the victory.

"I used the same strategy today that I did at the conference championship: get out fast and build a lead, surge when I can surge and use every corner to my advantage," Way said. "It's my last regional meet, so I wanted to go for it and do what I can do."

As a team, the Rayders finished seventh. Also contributing was Anna Zahner (21:33, 28th), Katie Mousseau (23:11, 48th), Kourtney Putnam (23:17, 49th), Rachel Nesburg (23:34, 52nd), Ali Schwein (23:56, 60th) and Ellie Way (25:08, 68th).

Charlevoix sophomore Luke Buday made a big surge on the homestretch to earn the 15th and final individual qualifying spot at Saturday's Division 3 cross-country regional at Grand Traverse Resort.

Buday finished with a time of 17:37, and will compete at the Division 3 state final Saturday, Nov. 1 at Michigan International Speedway.

As a team, the Charlevoix boys finished fourth, 12 points behind Mason County-Central for the final team qualifying spot.

Also competing for the Rayders was Noah Jeakle (17:41, 17th), Lucas VonLau (18:09, 22nd), Nicholas Plude (18:30, 27th), Micah Peebles (19:09, 44th), Brendan Gregory (19:33, 48th) and Jonathan Pischner (19:36, 50th).

The Boyne City boys finished second and qualified for the finals as a team.

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 · jgensterblum@schurz.com

NORTHPORT — The Charlevoix volleyball team gave the top-ranked team in the state a good fight in a Oct. 23 tri-match at Northport.

But, when push came to shove, the Rayders couldn't find the extra gear it needed to pull the upset over Leland, the top-ranked team in Class D in the most recent coaches poll.

The Comets dominated the first set, taking an early lead and never looking back in a 25-13 victory.

In the second set, Charlevoix came back with a spirited effort, playing Leland to an 18-18 standstill before the Comets closed out the set and the match with five straight points for a 25-20 victory.

"The first set, Leland blew by us, and I think we were all a little disappointed with the way we let ourselves down (in that set)," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "We played at a better level in the second set, and stayed with them for most of it."

The Rayders dispatched host Northport 25-8, 25-13 in its other match to finish 1-1 in the tri.

Maddie Boss led Charlevoix with 20 kills, four blocks, three aces and 15 digs, and Gloria Greene chipped in 12 kills, two blocks, one ace and 10 digs.

Olivia Storm initiated the offense for the Rayders with 33 assists to go along with two aces and eight digs, and libero Alexis Tribelfner added three aces and 11 digs.

the year that was not the case for us," added Bindi. "They are learning to work together, several kids are stepping up and taking charge on both sides of the ball."

The Rayders will put that defense to the test week one of the playoffs this week, hosting a Negaunee team that enters the matchup at 5-4 overall, but a team that averaged 33 points a game in those five wins.

The game will take place at 7 p.m. Friday.

Against the Rams, it would take a quarter for that excitement to show on the Rayders sidelines and in the box score, with the first quarter coming to a close at 8-0 after an 11 yard touchdown run by quarterback Nate Moon.

The second quarter would be a totally different story for the Rayders.

Moon scored on a 37 yard run, 80 yard punt return and threw a 22 yard touchdown to Will Telgenhof.

Ben Boss would add a 46 yard touchdown run and Austin Putman, a 15 yard touchdown run.

By halftime, the Rayders held a 40-0 lead.

"As an offensive unit, we are feeling more comfortable running the triple option, which is good for Charlevoix football," said Bindi.

Forrest Noirot would add a 14 yard touchdown run in the third quarter, then Malcom Williams a 21 yard touchdown in the fourth, capped by a Truman Left interception returned for a score.

Moon finished the game with 80 yards on 4-for-9 passing, while adding 52 yards rushing. Williams had 83 yards on the ground, Ben Boss, 72 yards and Noirot, 50 yards.

While they'll take the late season confidence boost, Bindi knows the Miners and others in the playoffs will certainly give them a better game.

"Every team now becomes a quality team and we have to step up to the plate and play our best," he said.

Trick or treat?

Area teams hoping for sweet Halloween success

This Friday, you can trick or treat, you can trunk or treat, or you can be treated to some good playoff football one of four area towns hosting playoff games on Halloween.

Or, if you are at Curtis Field in Petoskey, you can do all three.

Jeremy Speer

According to the Petoskey Northmen Football page on Facebook, the resourceful Northmen fans known for their fun pre-game tailgate, are stepping it up a notch.

There will be candy and snacks for the kids, coupled with decorated vehicles for the adults. It will all add to the festive atmosphere which will culminate with the Northmen's 7 p.m. kickoff against Bay City John Glenn in the opening game of the Division 3 playoffs.

In the spirit of Halloween, here is the "treat," that will be doled out to each of the local playoff teams:

Pay Day — Petoskey

The Northmen earned their first trip to the playoffs since 2011 and cashed in on some good fortune by winding up as the No. 1 seed in a very manageable bracket.

It will not be easy — any of the four teams in this quad could become district champs, but the road will go through Petoskey. Bay City John Glenn is a solid, if not spectacular team, as is Marquette and Mount Pleasant, the other two district opponents for the Northmen.

100 Grand — Boyne City

100 Grand is what the attendance might seem like at Boyne City, where the community has gotten behind their beloved Ramblers like never before. Coupled with a charged-up stampede of Elk Rapids fans, and you'd better get there early if you want a seat.

While Boyne City will come in humming the sweet tune of a perfect 9-0 record, Kii Kat will be the familiar refrain of the Elks, as in "gimine a break." Boyne City narrowly escaped with a 28-23 victory against the Elks on Oct. 17, a game that ended in a way we could go 100,000 years without seeing again. The Elks were driving with a chance to stun the Ramblers before a fumble on an attempted spike caused chaos and a swelling of Boyne City pride.

Elk Rapids wasn't happy with the way that game ended and will look to take out their frustration this week. If you are looking for fireworks on Halloween, Boyne City might be your place.

Sweet treats — Charlevoix

What's the sweetest candy you can think of? Candy corn and Peeps both made the list, but let's go with the candy that has "sweet" in its name.

That's how sweet it will be for Charlevoix Friday, when the Rayders host Negaunee in their first playoff game since 2009.

Charlevoix had to scratch and claw its way into the second season. The Rayders, who were once 2-3, won their last four games to make it into the Division 6 field. They were rewarded with a home game, albeit against a traditional power in Negaunee, who had an uncharacteristic 5-4 regular season.

What would be sweeter than simply making the dance? Winning a playoff game for the first time in school history. The playoffs have been tart to Charlevoix, who is 0-6 all-time in the second season.

Snickers — Johannesburg-Louisian

"Snickers" may have been the audible sound coming out of Johannesburg Sunday, as the nutty playoff pairings surprised almost every so-called "expert," who had the Cardinals facing a much easier road.

We thought the Cardinals had earned the No. 1 seed and would play in a bracket that featured Central Lake, Hillman and, say, Frankfort.

But instead, J-L finds itself in the same sweet spot as No. 1 seed Beal City, who has played in the past two state championship games.

It's not all evil for coach Joe Smokevitch and his Cardinals. This is one of the best J-L teams in a recent run of excellent success, so expect the Cardinals to beat orange (pumpkin)-clad Hillman before giving Beal City a true run for its money. No joke.

3 Musketeers — Inland Lakes

The real 3 Musketeers — at least those from literature — traveled across Europe in the 17th century.

While Inland Lakes may not traverse Europe, the Bulldogs will cross the Mackinac Bridge and play at the Upper Peninsula's Munising. It's been said that when a Lower Peninsula team crosses the Mighty Mac, they immediately fall behind 10 points. That may or may not be true, but it is a fact that L.P. teams struggle when playing in the land of the Yoopers.

If Inland Lakes is to pull off this Division 7 upset, the Bulldogs will have to rely on its "4 Musketeers," halfbacks Daniel Flowers and Garrett Key, fullback Ryan Howery and quarterback Ethan Jankowiak, to swash-buckle their way to success.

Rayders take on tough test at Leland Invite

(231) 439-9345 - dkuchanik@petoskeynews.com

LELAND — The Charlevoix volleyball team hasn't been one to back down to a challenge, something they'd get plenty of on Saturday.

The Rayders headed to the Leland tournament with matchups against two of the area's top programs in Traverse City St. Francis and host Leland.

And while they wouldn't come out with the tournament win, they would find success along the way.

"The girls really had a great day and as a coach I saw some exceptional focus, hunger and poise in their play today," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said.

In those pool play games, Charlevoix would earn wins of 25-11 and 25-15 against Frankfort, then 25-14 and 25-16 over Northport.

They'd get their first chance at St. Francis in pool play, falling the first match 25-22, but would then pull in a 27-25 win.

"The match would be exciting from start to finish," said Randall. "Both sets incredibly close and no clear winner until the final two points of each set."

The split with St. Francis would push Charlevoix into the tougher pathway to a championship.

Charlevoix would first play Bellaire, beating the Eagles, 25-17 and 25-17, but would then be put in a matchup with Leland, who they would fall to, 25-20 and then 25-11.

Madeline Boss led Charlevoix with 66 kills, 37 digs, six blocks and four aces, proving once again to be the Rayders leader.

"She is quite a leader on the floor and didn't disappoint us today," added Randall.

Olivia Storm finished with 98 assists, 100 percent on serving and 20 digs; Alexis Trihelfner had a team high 50 digs and seven aces.

Gloria Greene had 32 kills, a team high of nine aces, 30 digs and 5 blocks; Hannah Zipp had six aces, seven digs, four kills and 5 five blocks, while Becca Moon had eight kills, one block and six digs.

The Rayders are now 34-7-5 overall and 10-2 in the Lake Michigan Conference.

with four kills, two aces and seven digs as well for Charlevoix, and Hannah Zipp added two kills, two blocks and four digs.

Charlevoix (32-7-4) can get another crack at Leland on Saturday, Oct. 25, with a good showing at the host Comets' own invite, starting at 8:30 a.m.

"I really thought our players went play for play with (Leland) for most of the match; we were just a little slow starting," Randall said. "We can meet up with them again at the Leland Tourney, and possibly get a second opportunity."

The Rayders open Class C district play Monday, Nov. 3 against Rogers City at Inland Lakes.

JV FOOTBALL

NOAH CERTA
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

CHARLEVOIX — What started in August has come to an end for the Charlevoix Rayder junior varsity football team.

The Rayders capped the season off on a high note with a 36-0 victory against Harbor Springs Oct. 23 at Ottawa Stadium.

Charlevoix finished the season with an 8-1 record.

"This was another game controlled by our offensive line," Rayder coach Todd Klinger said. "The group consisting of freshmen Ray Cunningham, Colin Davis, Jake Cox, Jacob Petrosky along with sophomores Jake Mitchell, Joe McCraney and Caleb Hart was outstanding again. They have really developed in a cohesive group."

The Rayders started the scoring in the first quarter when sophomore quarterback Brad Klinger ran 15 yards to put the Rayders up early, 8-0.

They extended their scoring when Klinger found sophomore Camden Alden for a 24-yard touchdown pass to extend their lead to 15-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Klinger had yet another rushing touchdown to make the score 23-0 at the start of the second quarter.

Alden's second receiving touchdown of the night put the Rayders up 29-0. Caleb Hart had the last touchdown of the game, and ultimately the season with his 14 yard rush to make the final score 36-0.

Klinger finished the game with five completions for 125 yards and two touchdowns. He also had 69 yards rushing on nine carries along with two touchdowns. Alden racked up 102 yards receiving on three catches. Hart got in on the action with a rushing touchdown of his own.

"Defensively, we were able to shut down Harbor's offense," coach Klinger noted. "Cam Alden, Tyler McCallum, Jake Mitchell and Cam Musilek led a very aggressive defense."

The Rams' offense was shut down with the relentless play of the Rayder defense. Alden had double digit tackles with eleven to lead the defense. Klinger had an interception. Freshman Tre Hart recovered a fumble.

"This completes a fantastic season," Klinger said. "On the season, our team outscored our opponents 456-60 with four shutouts. The best aspect of the greatness of this team is that they are better young men than they are football players. Each and every kid is a classy young man, and I look forward to them representing Charlevoix in the future."

Season ends for Pop Warner Teams

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Pop Warner Pee Wee division team ended the season on a tough note. The Pee Wees lost to the Petoskey Spartans 8-0.

Neither offense could get their footing in the cold and wet conditions, until Petoskey got loose around the edge for the only score of the game. The Rayders were led off-sively by some tough running from Will Glass, Dmitri Bell, Issak Moar and Max Ostrum.

Defensively, the stingy Rayders made plenty of plays led by Spencer Weher, Cole McArthur, Ostrum, Moar, Glass and Bell.

Coaches Corey Ostrum, Scott Nickel and Rob McArthur were very proud of a young, small group for playing for each other and beyond expectations en route to a 5-2 record on the season.

The Charlevoix Midgets played in an offensive shootout against Mancelona on Oct. 18. The young Rayders opened the scoring on a 48 yard touchdown run by Jake Snyder. Mancelona returned the favor by scoring on their next possession.

The Rayders opened their air attack and completed multiple passes. Cole Wright connected with Tony Illenden for two touchdowns of 24 and 41 yards. Tyler Ostrum completed a 30 yard fullback pass during one of the drives to Illenden which later led to a touchdown. But, Mancelona countered Charlevoix's attack, and won the game 30-22.

Hayes defeats Kur in circuit court judge race

STEVE ZUCKER
(231) 439-9346 - szucker@peloskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — In what was perhaps the most contentious local races in this year's general election, Charlevoix attorney Roy C. "Joe" Hayes III defeated fellow Charlevoix attorney and former county prosecutor Mary Beth Kur by a nearly 1,800 vote margin in the race for 33rd Circuit Court Judge.

The final vote tally was Hayes with 5,904 votes to Kur's 4,114 making for a margin of 59 percent to 41 percent.

For Hayes, the win means that he will succeed current 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas when his term expires on Dec. 31. Pajtas has served in the post since 1985. Judge Pajtas is barred from seeking re-election by a state law that prohibits a person more than 70 years old from being elected to a judge's post.

Hayes

Tuesday night Hayes said he was happy with the outcome of the race.

"It's been a tough couple of months," Hayes said. "I'm glad all the hard work paid off."

Hayes said he didn't know what to expect as the voters headed to the polls Tuesday.

"There was a lot of contentiousness, but I had a lot of positive feedback where people told me that the negative campaigning wasn't working," Hayes said.

Hayes comments referred to the acrimony that made its way into the race as Kur highlighted a federal withholding tax lien filed against the law firm in which Hayes was formerly a stockholder several years ago. Kur also called out three other liens that were filed in error against the firm, and Hayes' answer on a media questionnaire.

In response, Hayes pointed to Kur's own tumultuous past with lawsuits stemming from her time serving as the elected county prosecutor.

Aside from the issues in the candidates' past the balance of the race centered around the candidates' respective experience. Kur held out her extensive jury trial experience — especially in her time serving as county prosecutor, while Hayes claimed to have a more diverse background in law practice.

In an email to the News-Review about an hour before the final results were in, Kur said she called Hayes and offered her congratulations to him.

"I'm disappointed, but the voters have spoken. Congratulations to our soon to be Judge Roy C. Hayes III. I wish him the best and I sincerely thank everyone who supported me," Kur wrote.

Hayes said he understands the important role he will now play in Charlevoix County.

"It's a huge deal. For my entire 20-year career, (Judge Pajtas) has been the guy who has presided over the big cases. He's the one who makes the important decisions. It's a huge responsibility."

Hayes said he's relieved that the campaign is over, thanked those who supported him and added that he's "going to work hard to make the voters happy with their decision."

Challengers Supernaw, Kurtz, Campbell win Charlevoix council, mayor seats

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 439-9397 - jspence@peloskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — The two incumbent city council candidates for Wards 1 and 2 have lost to their challengers.

Bill Supernaw won with 175 votes compared to Peggy Brennan's 127 votes for Ward 2.

Luther Kurtz won the Ward 1 seat with 250 votes, compared to 118 for Mary Eveleigh and 56 for Lyle Gennett. These numbers are according to unofficial results. Official results haven't been released at press time.

Longtime Charlevoix mayor Norman "Boogie" Carlson lost to challenger Glenn Campbell with Campbell receiving 597 votes compared to Carlson's 534 votes.

Campbell said he's happy and excited for the win, and wants the council to come together for some direction.

Campbell said he thinks he won mostly because nobody was paying attention to what the people want, in particular to the marina expansion.

"I think we've done all the marina we need," Campbell said. "I think we have a beautiful marina and I don't think we need to add anything more to it."

For his first days in office, Campbell said he wants to have everyone on the same page and to work together.

Fisherman's Island management planning process begins

MARK JOHNSON
(989) 732-1111
mjohnson4@gaylordheraldtimes.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) began its general management planning process for Fisherman's Island with an informational meeting where members of the public could learn more.

Approximately 30 people attended the meeting at the Charlevoix Public Library on Monday afternoon, while DNR representatives and others went through the planning process and gathered feedback from attendees.

Richard Hill, district supervisor for the DNR Parks and Recreation Division, said this meeting was scheduled to provide an overview of the management planning process as an opportunity for residents and others to ask questions and learn more about the overall process itself.

Generally, Hill said the DNR does not usually host these types of "kickoff" meetings, but extensive public interest in the park over the past few months led them to believe this meeting would be worthwhile.

Before the meeting began, however, Hill made it clear that the focus would not be on recent talks of a land swap between Fisherman's Island State Park and nearby St. Marys Cement.

"Talk of the land swap is probably why so many people are here," Hill said. "Today's meeting is not about that. There is not a proposal that has been made to the department. When there is, it will go through a very thorough review."

Debbie Jensen, DNR park management plan administrator, talks about the general management planning process for Fisherman's Island at a public information meeting Nov. 3 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

These types of plans are used to help create a long-term management and planning strategy for each state park and recreation area it covers.

Hill went on to explain they wanted to make sure the public was aware that the general management planning process for Fisherman's Island State Park was not immediately connected with the possibility of a land swap.

One person who attended because of the land swap talks was Rick Beemon, a resident of Charlevoix.

He shared a number of ideas that could improve the park and also said he was pleased that the management planning process did not look to be connected with the possible land swap.

"I came to see what planning had to do with the land swap," Beemon said. "I got the impression that they were not relevant to each other."

The planning process is expected to take 9 to 12 months with Debbie Jensen, DNR park management plan administrator, expecting the plan to be completed in September 2015 and, if all goes according to plan, approved in October 2015.

During this time, Hill and Jensen agreed it is very important to gather as much public input as they can. To help with this task, multiple opportunities have been made available for public comment, including an online public input survey available in April or May 2015 and a public meeting in July 2015.

There will also be a stakeholder meeting held in June 2015.

Dates will be circulated by the DNR before these meetings.

"We started using this particular planning model back between 2002 and 2004, and it is a really comprehensive and an overall really good system," Hill said. "We are really looking forward to (implementing it again)."

Though some in attendance, like Beemon, had ideas for improvement, including the park continuing to stay rustic and not being made into something it is not, Hill urged that this particular planning process is not focused on making those types of decisions.

"This process is not designed to make a decision," Hill said. "This process is more broad-based, to look at the parts and the overall future and what the management looks like."

Jensen said funding for this project, which comes from various DNR funds, is estimated somewhere between $40,000 and $50,000.

Tom Copenhagen, park supervisor for Fisherman's Island State Park, said the park has a budget of $23,000.

The DNR has a number of steps to follow for this process, with the next being to launch a project website, set up for both public and planning team only access.

STURGEON RIVER POTTERY

ARTFULLY GROWING SINCE 2000

When my parents first opened Sturgeon River Pottery, they were building a business who realized they needed to expand beyond their own work. They became a retail establishment and business grew like a weed. The Bank of Northern Michigan was integral during that time—giving advice, access to capital, and even opening to grand openings. When I took over the family business, it was clear our bankers could handle anything from a warm-and-pop shop to a multi-million dollar business. They've helped us grow to the next level, here and there again. After years of knowing them, personally and professionally, there's no question our business and our bank are better together.

EMMET COUNTY

Emmet County cottonwood tree is biggest in Michigan

MARK JOHNSON

(989) 732-1111

mjohnson@charlevoixcourier.com

EMMET COUNTY — A piece of land is for sale in Emmet County for approximately $1.15 million, which features an enormous tree featured in the record books.

According to Andy Sawyer, volunteer Big Tree Coordinator for the Michigan Big Tree Register, the Eastern Cottonwood tree is currently the State Champion, or the largest Eastern Cottonwood tree in the state, based on measurements collected in 2012.

These measurements include a girth of 26.25 feet, height of 101 feet and a crown average of 84 feet. The Michigan Big Tree Register uses a point system based on measurements, with the measurements of this tree scoring 437 points.

"I knew it was the biggest tree in Michigan for 20 years," said Dick Bare, former owner of the property. "It's amazing how fast it has grown and how large the circumference has become."

Bill Winslow, Managing Broker and Realtor for Coldwell Banker Schmidt Realtors in Upper Bay Shore Road in Emmet County, is helping to sell the property, just off of Old US-31, between Petoskey and Charlevoix.

Bare was forced to move from his home on the property after it burned down in an arson case around five years ago. The base of the house still remains on the property, as does the enormous tree.

Bare said his father-in-law planted the tree, along with two other cottonwood trees, which were cut down a very long time ago. He believes the tree to be at least 100 years old.

HT - MARK JOHNSON

The width of the cottonwood tree, 26.25 feet, in Emmet County is nearly wider than that of the building next to it, pictured here on Oct. 29.

He said in its prime, the tree would serve as a source of shade for the entire yard. It would also help travelers, as it was used as a point of reference for those traveling on Lake Michigan nearby and plane pilots in the air.

After Bare left the property, the barn was also burned down and since, Winslow said people have been trespassing on the property and vandalizing the area and possibly the tree.

Some residents living nearby have been watching out for the tree, including Sandee Keszo and Jean Wyn.

Wyn first discovered the tree during a hiking trek, while Keszo found it after going to see the old barn on the property before it burned down.

Both were astounded at the sheer size of the tree and eventually both came to believe that the tree must be some kind of record holder.

"That was the biggest tree we had ever seen," Wyn said.

Since they first discovered the tree, both women said there has been instances of vandalism on the property, including what appears to be bullet holes in different spots on the trunk.

According to Wyn and Keszo, the history of vandalism at the property has led local police to monitor the area a little more. Even with extra security, both women still fear for the safety of the tree and cannot comprehend why anyone would want to harm it.

"It is terrible that people would have such a lack of respect for a beautiful farm and tree like this," Wyn said. "I can't understand that."

Keszo and Wyn said they will continue to do whatever they can to protect it and educate people of the record-holding tree.

Some of their plans include making phone calls and seeing if they could get some kind of plaque alerting passerby and tourists.

"It would be nice to have some sort of historical marker to pay tribute to the tree and to the fact that it is so old and so majestic, but still alive," Keszo said.

Bare also said he would appreciate a marker or something to highlight the tree planted by his father-in-law so many years ago.

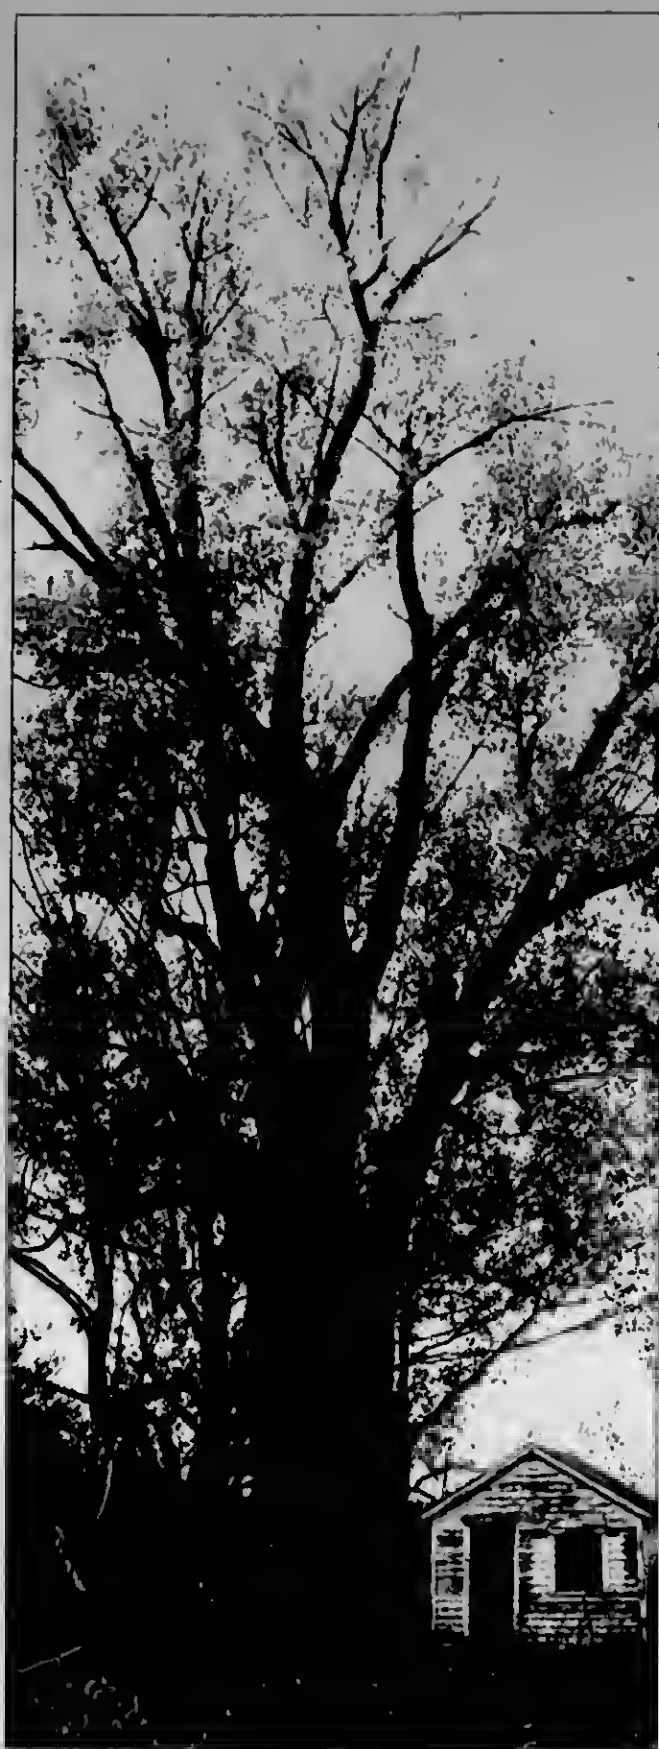

"I would like to see something done," he said. "That would be wonderful."

The largest Eastern Cottonwood tree in the United States is located in Beatrice, Neb., with measurements including a girth of 37.5 feet, height of 88 feet and a crown average of 108 feet, good for a score of 565 points.

CHARLEVOIX

LOOKING BACK...

CHARLEVOIX — When Charlevoix's north Lake Michigan pier was constructed in 1872, it was extended to the length that it is now.

Construction of the south pier began a year later and, for some reason, was constructed in stages. Charlevoix's first lighthouse, an 18 foot high ladder-like scaffold supporting a box at the top in which a lantern was placed, was installed at the end of this shorter pier in May of 1880.

Some of the largest lake vessels of the time were eventually able to access Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix after the widening of the channel in 1882, to its present dimension. This led to the desperate need for a regulation lighthouse.

The city fathers petitioned the federal government for a lighthouse and it finally arrived in the summer of 1885. It is now placed on the end of the north pier and painted white. The south pier light was removed a few years later.

The photo shows what the vacated south pier end looked like, once the light was removed. The blunt vertical end can be seen in the exact center of the photo, taken by professional photographer Daniel S. Way, who was active in Charlevoix from 1890-1895. It is not yet known, exactly when the south pier reached its present length.

The lighthouse was transferred to the south pier in August 1911 and painted red shortly afterward. A tall, openwork metal structure holding a white flashing light 61 feet above the north pier took its place until the 1980s.

Traverse City man makes use of vineyard leftovers

TRAVERSE CITY (AP) — Grapes from Chateau Grand Traverse go through an extra step this season as they travel from vine to compost pile.

The grapes are plucked and pressed and the juice heads toward fermenting tanks, just like it has since the winery launched in the 1970s.

But there's another step this year for the leftover skins and seeds, or pomace. Christoph Milz will step in to intercept the leftover material and use it to make another product — grape seed oil, according to the Traverse City Record-Eagle.

Milz, who owns Traverse City-based Pressmeister Oils, will make grape seed oil from Chateau Grand Traverse grapes.

Winery president Eddie O'Keefe said wine and oil are a natural fit. Sniffing and swilling a spoonful of Milz's cold-pressed oil is like whiffing and sipping a nice wine, and both are made from grapes.

"Wine is considered the ultimate value-added agricultural product," O'Keefe said. "To take it one step further to produce oil is a wonderful thing."

Milz uses machinery he made to clean and press the grapes after Chateau Grand Traverse's winemakers squeeze out the juice. He'll then take the dried seeds back to his press and make varietal oils, such as Chardonnay and Pinot noir.

"You can actually taste the difference," Milz said. "The red grapes taste different than white grapes, and even within the white grapes you taste a difference."

It's not easy to squeeze oil from a tough, drop-sized grape seed. The small brown seeds are hard and don't contain much oil compared to nuts and other seeds, but the oil is valuable, thanks to its high smoke point and popularity.

Grape seeds aren't Milz's only local experiment. He took his equipment to Tandem Ciders in Suttons Bay to intercept the cidery's Macintosh apple pomace after cider makers gathered the juice.

He'll press the seeds to make apple seed oil to send to restaurants around the country, such as Alinea in Chicago.

Charlevoix Performing Arts Program presents 'Alice in Wonderland'

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Performing Arts Program of the Charlevoix Middle School/High School will present "Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass."

Lewis Carroll's compelling work will take spectators on a journey of individual growth and awareness while snug in their cushy chairs at the Charlevoix High School Auditorium, 5200 Marion Center Road, Nov. 7-9.

Jodi Thompson, performing arts director, has chosen to produce the LeGallienne and Frieboes version of Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass." It is one of the most successful dramatic versions of the play, having been originally produced and later revived on Broadway.

The story itself of Alice has been part of many children's lives and though it seems like a simple fairy tale, it goes much deeper than that. Alice is engaged in a quest for her own identity and growth. Each encounter she has with the strange behaviors of the creatures of Wonderland (aka adults and "elements of their deranged habitats") helps her in her progression from childhood to adulthood.

The cast will animate such beloved, misunderstood and sometimes reviled characters as the Cheshire Cat, Mad Hatter, White Rabbit and the Queen of Hearts as they deliver a performance that leads Alice to gain an understanding of logic, rules, the games people play, authority, time and death.

Students from grades 6-12, the youngest is sixth-grader Cam Arnold, will bring the story to life with not only their acting ability but through lots of hard effort in staging, costuming, makeup and set design. This production has given many older performing arts students the ability to fulfill other rolls such as CCHS senior Hero Parker-Drost who has performed on stage with performing arts since her freshman year. This year she is doing a backstage role for this show as stage manager.

"It's amazing to see the chat in everyone from the first few rehearsals to the actual show," Parker-Drost said. "The students work together to make one great performance."

Two different students will play Alice. Senior Taylor Ramage and junior Rachel Thompson will be Alice in their own select performance dates.

It has taken a village to raise this production. Countless hours of volunteer work from community members, parents and the cast who have worked hard to get everything completed on time are given thanks alongside Castle Farms for providing photo location and Christiana Witte from Witte Photography for taking the pictures for preperformance slide show and publicity photos for the show.

Performance dates and times for "Alice in Wonderland" are: 7 p.m., Friday, Nov. 7; 2 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 8; 7 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 8; and 2 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 9. Tickets are available at the door: $7 for adults, $5, students and during the matinee shows family prices are $20 for two adults and two students.

We need to be more aware of lone wolf terrorists

In a speech about a month ago, U.S. Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson warned of the growing threat of "lone wolf" terrorists. He explained some people may not belong to organizations such as the Islamic State or al-Qaida, but may be persuaded to further their causes by making individual terrorist attacks.

Canadians who were aware of Johnson's remarks may consider them prophetic. It appears our neighbors to the north have been victimized by lone wolves.

In separate attacks last week, men known to have converted recently to Islam killed two Canadian soldiers. One assault occurred Monday in Quebec, when a man used his car to run down two soldiers, killing one. Police shot him to death.

Then, on Wednesday, Canada's capital, Ottawa, came under attack. A man shot a soldier guarding a war memorial to death, then stormed into the Parliament building. He, too, was killed by gunfire.

It goes without saying that the overwhelming majority of Americans view terrorist attacks against our friends and neighbors to the north as attacks on us.

But Johnson is right: Lone wolf terrorists are a growing threat. The question is how to deal with people who may have lived in our communities for years but then succumb to Islamic terrorist propaganda and become killers. Clearly, an effective strategy for dealing with them needs to be developed.

Confused about Ebola policy? You bet

If anyone is confused about the U.S. policy concerning health care workers returning to the United States after working in West Africa, he or she has reason to be.

The U.S. policy is a mess.

There are different protocols in place, now, that differentiate between how people are treated coming into different airports, and between civilian and military personnel.

Gen. Martin E. Dempsey, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, recommended to Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel on Tuesday that all members of the armed services working in Ebola-stricken West African countries undergo mandatory 21-day quarantines upon their return to the United States. Hagel is expected to follow that recommendation.

Yet the position of the Centers for Disease Control and that of President Barack Obama is that automatic quarantines are not necessary, but monitoring is. Obama on Tuesday called the new guidelines "sensible, based in science."

Last week, Gov. Chris Christie of New Jersey ordered all people coming into the Newark Airport into a mandatory three-week quarantine. And in New York, Gov. Andrew Cuomo said residents coming into New York also would have to be quarantined for three weeks, but with a caveat. Citizens would get to pick the location of their quarantine, a kind of designer quarantine.

"This is a big moment, and a lot of people are watching carefully," said William Eimicke, professor of public affairs at Columbia University. "It's about balance and judgment, and voters will remember if this was handled well or not."

We agree. So far, just about all the information emanating from the CDC, the White House and state governments has been contradictory.

Actions in our federal and state governments have not instilled much confidence that our health system will get this Ebola controversy right.

At the very least, the president and the Pentagon should be on the same page.

vaccine recommended

Shingles is caused by the same virus that causes chickenpox.

After you've had chickenpox, the virus lies inactive. Years later, the virus may reactivate as shingles, reports Mary Rosner, Public Health Officer for Marinette County Health and Human Services.

"Shingles is a viral infection that causes a painful rash," Rosner said. "The first symptom is often a tingling feeling on the skin, itchiness or a stabbing pain. After several days, a rash appears as a band or patch of raised dots on the side of the trunk or face."

It then develops into small, fluid-filled blisters that dry out and crust over within a few days," she said. The rash and pain usually disappear within three to five weeks. However, about one in five people with shingles will suffer long term nerve damage, which can cause excruciating and unrelenting pain for months and even years.

Shingles is a painful rash that develops on one side of the face or body. The rash forms blisters that typically scab over in 7 to 10 days and clears up within 2 to 4 weeks.

Before the rash develops, people often have pain, itching, or tingling in the area where the rash will develop. This may happen anywhere from 1 to 5 days before the rash appears.

Most commonly, the rash occurs in a single stripe, around either the left or the right side of the body. In other cases, the rash occurs on one side of the face.

In rare cases (usually among people with weakened immune systems), the rash may be more widespread and look similar to a chickenpox rash. Shingles can affect the eye and cause loss of vision.

Other symptoms of shingles can include:

- Fever.
- Headache.
- Chills.
- Upset stomach.

Several antiviral medicines—acyclovir, valacyclovir, and famciclovir—are available to treat shingles, CDC officials said. These medicines will help shorten the length and severity of the illness. But to be effective, they must be started as soon as possible after the rash appears. Thus, people who have or think they might have shingles should call their health care provider as soon as possible to discuss treatment options.

Analgesics (pain medicine) may help relieve the pain caused by shingles. Wet compresses, calamine lotion, and colloidal oatmeal baths may help relieve some of the itching, CDC officials said.

One out of three Americans will have shingles at some time in their lives.

There are an estimated 1 million cases each year in the United States. For people who live to be 85, the lifetime risk of getting shingles is 50 percent.

The risk increases with age.

Some people have a greater risk of getting shingles, reports the CDC. This includes people who:

— Have medical conditions that keep their immune systems from working properly, such as certain cancers like leukemia and lymphoma, and human immunodeficiency virus (HIV)

— Receive immunosuppressive drugs, such as steroids and drugs that given after organ transplantation.

People who develop shingles typically have only one episode in their lifetime. However, a person can have a second or even a third episode, CDC officials said.

The shingles vaccine—Zostavax—protects your body from reactivation of the chickenpox virus.

It isn't 100 percent effective, but it significantly decreases the risk of getting shingles and reduces the pain and complications for cases which still occur.

No serious problems have been identified with shingles vaccine.

The most common side effects in people who got the vaccine were redness, soreness, swelling or itching at the shot site, and headache.

"Those 60 and older should get the vaccine whether you've had chickenpox or not," Rosner said.

New options may help TV viewers 'cut the cord'

With a reputation for poor service, limited choices and a perverse pricing structure that punishes loyal customers, the cable company is the business Americans love to hate. Now some new developments are threatening to overturn the business model that has given the cable companies near monopolistic power for decades. But consumers can't celebrate yet.

One potentially big development came earlier this month when the premium channel HBO announced it would start offering its shows by subscription over the Internet next year. Shortly thereafter, CBS, the epitome of traditional broadcast TV, said it would provide its programs over the Web for $6 a month. If more content providers follow the lead of HBO and CBS, it will threaten the pay-TV industry's longstanding refusal to give customers the "a la carte" service they want. Consumers have been forced to accept packages with dozens of channels they may never watch to get the handful they actually want. HBO's plans are particularly threatening to the cable industry because it's one of the few channels (along with ESPN) that many people buy cable packages specifically to get.

If they can watch HBO for, say, $20 a month (the actual pricing has not been set yet), they may no longer be willing to spend three or four times that much for a high-end TV package.

The recent developments may only accelerate an ongoing trend of consumers, particularly younger ones, "cutting the cord"—the number of consumers who subscribe to cable, satellite or fiber TV services fell by a quarter of a million in 2013 according to the research firm SNL Kagan. Today you can stream movies and original programs from Netflix and watch TV shows online on Hulu, and the number of such services is steadily increasing. (Then there are the frugal few who are rediscovering they can watch TV the way their parents did—with an antenna, for free.)

So does this spell the end of the cable industry monster? Probably not. The reality is that for most people the company you get your TV service through is also the one that connects you to the Internet, and the money (and monopolistic power) they may lose in one business they can make up by raising prices in the other. By manipulating streaming speeds, the big telecom companies could even deny you some of the options now available or soon to come on the market. Earlier this year, Netflix complained that some of its customers were having trouble getting its streaming service through some Internet providers—a problem only solved when Netflix agreed to pay those companies for better connections.

The changing landscape makes it even more important for the Federal Communications Commission to adopt strong "net neutrality" rules that guarantee that broadband companies cannot discriminate against any content providers or offer any entity preferential service. Only if there's a truly level playing field can consumers take advantage of all the new alternatives to the old cable colossus.

DIVORCE

Advice to help you get through the difficult times

BEFORE DIVORCE

Have you tried everything?

When a marriage is failing, the feeling of discouragement can lead to the belief that the only solution is divorce. But this step leaves such a trail of suffering and painful consequences in its wake that it's far better to try everything possible to save the relationship before reaching this drastic decision.

Love is often still felt by both partners but is buried under a mountain of unresolved conflicts, unmentioned sources of friction, and the avoidance of bitter subjects. With their unbiased and objective point of view, marriage counsellors can help to untangle this knot of feelings and allow a couple's love for each other to rise to the surface once more.

Help groups specifically for married couples and books on the subject are other ways of tackling what is going wrong in a relationship; this might include active listening, problem solving, and trying new ways of doing things, especially with communicating, which is the real Achilles' heel of many couples. After this, developing a common interest and setting aside more time to spend together can help keep the flame burning brightly.

Divorce will have to be considered and a lawyer consulted if all your reconciliation efforts have ended in failure because love has truly died or because one spouse no longer wishes to invest in the relationship. In order to make this ordeal as easy as possible, it is possible to go through mediation, a process that allows for a reduction in legal costs and the possibility of negotiating an out-of-court settlement that will be beneficial for all the family.

Because divorce usually leads to a painful mourning period for any children involved, it is recommended that parents ensure their children have access to any resources that might better help them make the transition, such as seeing a counsellor or confiding in a trusted member of the extended family.

It is a good idea to try and save the relationship before resorting to divorce.

Rayders sweep Hurons in district opening game

JAMES GENSTERBLUM

INDIAN RIVER — Mad-die Boss didn't mind if she looked a little strange.

After clinching her team's berth into the district semifinal, Boss was too excited to worry what people thought of her celebration.

"I was high-stepping, just running around like crazy because I was that pumped up," Boss said. "My teammates were laughing, but I was too happy to even care."

Boss powered two kills in a row past Rogers City blockers to give Charlevoix a 27-25 victory in the third set, clinching a 25-19, 25-15, 27-25 sweep of the Hurons Monday at Inland Lakes.

The Charlevoix senior finished with a team-high 21 kills and 23 digs in the match to help the Rayders pull out a victory over a tough Rogers City team that gave Charlevoix a hard fight.

Boss was big for the Rayders, but she got a huge assist from fellow senior Gloria Greene in the victory. Greene finished with 18 kills and 10 digs, and she had two huge solo blocks late in the third set to help Charlevoix rally from a 20-17 deficit to pull out the set and match

"Gloria was amazing at the net tonight, especially in that third set," Boss said. "And behind her, we were all just digging fools tonight, making plays to keep points alive."

The Rayders got off to a slow start on the night, falling behind Rogers City early and struggling to get kill attempts past the Hurons' blockers up front.

"We knew coming in that we were both teams that liked to swing at the ball, and early on we just weren't swinging as hard as them," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "We were a little apprehensive, and when we started gaining confidence and attacking better things started to turn in our favor."

Amber Way finishes runner-up at state final

JAMES GENSTERBLUM

BROOKLYN — It wasn't the ending in her cross country career that Charlevoix runner Amber Way was hoping for.

But, under the circumstances, the ending was still an impressive one.

Racing on a burst bursa sac, Way pulled away from the field at the halfway point in the Division 3 state finals on Saturday at Michigan International Speedway and looked to be well on her way to her first individual cross country state title.

However, on the home stretch Traverse City St. Francis junior Holly Bullough unleashed a monstrous kick to close the gap, catching and passing Way just before the finish line to edge her for the state title by two-tenths of a second, 17:51.3 to 17:51.5.

Bullough and Way had raced against each other several times this season and were familiar with each other's capabilities, Charlevoix coach Mary Plude said.

"We've known all along that Amber doesn't have the quarter-mile speed that Holly does, and we put together a race strategy with that in mind," Plude said. "Our goal was to get out in a good tempo and build a lead early in the race that we could hold through the finish."

"Amber ran a great race, and executed our plan perfectly; she had a great lead heading into the home stretch. It just wasn't quite enough."

Plude said that Way's performance despite the injury to the bursa sac in her knee, which was suffered at last week's regional meet, was amazing.

"She burst it last week at the regional meet and she wasn't sure if she could finish, but she toughed it out that day and today," Plude said. "She wanted to finish

CHARLEVOIX — Untimely injuries, turnovers, penalties and a tough opponent stopped the Charlevoix football team in a home Division 6 playoff game Friday.

Negaunee upended Charlevoix 21-12.

"We played well tonight," Charlevoix coach Ron Bindi said. "We made some big plays, but we also had some key turnovers and penalties that we just could not overcome."

Negaunee (6-4) will advance to the district finals and play Boyne City on Friday, Nov. 7, in Boyne City.

The Rayders (6-4) held the Miners to a quick three-and-out in their first possession. With the wind in their face, Negaunee punted, which resulted in a 18 yard punt and gave Charlevoix the ball at their own 43 yard line.

Starting quarterback, Nate Moon exploded for a 53-yard touchdown run on the second Rayder play from scrimmage.

After a missed extra point, Charlevoix led early, 6-0. The lead would stand as the first quarter would end.

Negaunee would score 14-unanswered points in the second quarter.

Both Miner touchdowns were scored by running back Ryan Bischof, one a 15 yard ramble and the second a 3 yard plunge. At halftime, Negaunee led 14-6.

"We turned the ball over three times in the first half," Bindi said. "They were able to capitalize on two of the lost fumbles, we played better in the second half, but the penalties stopped us."

the second set, combining with Boss to help the Rayders open up a 19-9 lead that gave Charlevoix a 2-0 advantage in the match.

"We love it when Hannah turns it on like that at the service line," said Randall on Zipp, who finished with three aces and seven digs. "She's capable of getting on runs of seven, eight, nine points, and it puts a smile on my face when she does because it's a sign she's locked in and going to have a good night."

Up 2-0 in the match, Charlevoix went to the third set with a chance to close out the victory.

It's a situation that has haunted the Rayders in the past two years, as Charlevoix has lost two straight district finals to Boyne City after going up

2-0 in the match, and the Rayders were determined not to let it happen again:

"We've been in that situation so many times and let it slip away, that I think we all were motivated to make sure it didn't happen again," Boss said. "Everyone was focused and driven to finish it out in three tonight, and I think that's why it was so exciting for us to get it done."

Setter Olivia Storm set up the Charlevoix offense with 39 assists and 12 digs in the win, and libero Alexis Tribfeller added 16 digs and a 97 percent serve-receive rate.

Yogi Hang added 12 digs for Charlevoix, Emily Zabawa chipped in three kills and five digs, and Becca Moon finished with two digs and a block.

Rayders close regular season with sweep of rival Ramblers

JAMES GENSTERBLUM

(231) 439-9343 · jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — The ultimate goal of any high school team is to be playing its best when the playoffs roll around.

The Charlevoix volleyball team appears to have taken that goal to heart.

The Rayders played some of their best volleyball of the season in a dominant sweep of rival Boyne City, 25-11, 25-19, 25-19 Oct. 30 to close out the regular season at home.

Charlevoix jumped out to double digit leads in each set to pull away from the Ramblers, keyed by strong defensive play from its back row and steady, error-free hitting from its front line.

"Our team's play was absolutely wonderful tonight, and it's exactly what we wanted them to do," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "Our goal was to stay focused, get it done in three sets, and avoid errors and letdowns, and they did a great job."

It was the last appearance on home court for Charlevoix's six-player senior class, and that group went out in style, leading the attack for the Rayders.

Senior Madeline Boss led Charlevoix with 19 kills, two aces and 17 digs, and senior Gloria Greene chipped in eight kills, three aces, 12 digs and two blocks as well.

Senior setter Olivia Storm keyed the Rayders' attack with 35 assists to go along with 10 digs, a block and an ace, and senior libero Alexis Tribfeller was perfect in serve-receive and led Charlevoix defensively with 17 digs.

"It was kind of rough at first, playing our last game here tonight, because we're never going to be taking this court again," Boss said. "But once we got going, playing against our rivals got us really pumped to be out there on the court, and to go out with a win like that was a great way to end it."

The Charlevoix starters' only lapse on the night came in the second set, when the Rayders let a 22-10 lead evaporate to a 22-18 edge to give the Ramblers life.

But Charlevoix's seniors seized control back and got the Rayders going again, closing out the last three points to take the set.

"One of our weaknesses this season has been winning the first game, and then kind of sitting back and enjoying the second game a little too much and letting the other team build momentum," Randall said. "When that started to happen tonight, it was good to see our players step up and keep it from costing us."

"It all comes from my seniors, who are definite leaders for us on the court and who'd do a great job of it."

Charlevoix's strong play allowed for the moment that got Rayder fans cheering loudest during the match: the insertion of senior foreign exchange students Oda Folkedal, from Norway, and Thea Ottesen, from Denmark, into the lineup in the third set.

Folkedal and Ottesen, both in their first year of playing volleyball, period, played well, and Folkedal got a kill that sent the Charlevoix student section into a frenzy.

"It's been the coolest thing to watch (Oda and Thea) come in fresh and work hard to learn how to play volleyball," Greene said. "It was awesome to see them get a chance to go out there and show how they've grown as players tonight."

Sophomore Abby Gardner led Boyne City with seven kills and a block, and senior Paige Hornbeck chipped in six kills.

Sophomore Ashlyn Kartes added two kills, one block and 18 assists, and Celena Brzezinski finished with four kills for Boyne City, which can draw some positives from late rallies in both the second and third sets that put pressure on the Rayders.

"We were coming off a loss on the road, and I think that was a factor in us getting off to a slow start," Boyne City coach Evan Chestnutt said. "Charlevoix is a strong team, and they were pumped up to play tonight, but we kept fighting and we had our moments her season as well as she could and was determined to keep competing.

"To run like she did with an injury like that, it was really impressive to watch."

Way, who will run for Michigan State next fall, ends her cross country career with four all-state finishes and two runner-up finishes.

"When she came in as a freshman, we didn't really know that she would end up accomplishing everything that she has," Plude said. "She wasn't thinking about all-state finishes or a DI scholarship, she was just focused on getting better."

"To see her go through everything that she's gone through to make all of this possible, it's really inspiring to all of our runners."

Way wasn't the only all-state runner from the area in the D3 girls race, as East Jordan's Kayla Keane closed out her own storied career with her second all-state finish, in seventh place.

Keane's time of 18:56 was 22 seconds faster than her time of 19:18 at the state meet last season on the way to the honor.

On the boys side, Boyne City wrapped up a storybook season with another first, finishing in the top 20 in the state in the team's first appearance at the state finals in the program's 42-year history.

"Finishing this high in the state wasn't even something we dreamed of at the beginning of the season," Boyne City coach Andy Place said. "We've come a long way this season and the boys stepped up to the challenge."

Senior Kory Skop ran a lifetime best time of 16:45.2 to lead the Ramblers with a 37th place finish, nearly a minute faster than his time on the course as a junior.

Sophomore Ethan Book ran a 17:40 to finish 119th for Boyne City, and Derek Willis ran an 18:08 to finish 155th.

Garrett Fogo (18:19) and Dominic Santina (18:29) ran faster than their regional times for the Ramblers.

"It would have been easy for our guys to let down in the cold and wind today, but three of our runners ran faster here than the regional," Place said. "The state finals was an awesome experience for this team, and I'm very proud of all the team's accomplishments this year."

East Jordan senior Gahe Hawley ran as an individual and finished 51st in the boys race, in 17:01.2, and Charlevoix sophomore Luke Buday finished 149th, running an 18:00.8.

against them.

"I'm really proud of the way our girls never gave up tonight, and that attitude is going to serve us well in districts."

Charlevoix finishes the regular season 35-7-5 overall, and 12-2 in the Lake Michigan Conference, good for second behind Traverse City St. Francis.

Red Devils close out regular season with loss

EAST JORDAN — The East Jordan volleyball team got off to a strong start but couldn't hold on, falling to Elk Rapids 19-25, 25-16, 25-17, 25-17 at home in its final regular season game.

Senior Kirsten Malpass led the Red Devils in her final home game with 11 kills, three blocks and 11 digs, senior Katie Spence chipped in six kills, two aces, a block and seven digs and senior Bailey Sweeney added five digs.

JAMES GENSTERBLUM/COURIER

Charlevoix senior Maddie Boss (5) powers a kill past the block of Boyne City's Carly Kruzel (3) during the Rayders' sweep of the visiting Ramblers Oct. 30.

Rayders to a scoring drive late in the third quarter, with a 60 yard run, and two completions, the second a 15 yard pass to Bryan Noirot in the end zone.

Charlevoix attempted a two-point conversion, and was successful, but a penalty, the fourth of the drive, negated the attempt. The Rayders failed on the second try.

The score at the end of three quarters, 14-12.

Negaunee slowly drove down the field after the kick off, consuming eight minutes of the fourth quarter, and scored on a third Bischof touchdown, a 1 yard run.

The Miners hit the extra point, and led 21-12.

The loss didn't overshadow a strong season for the Rayders, one in which Bindi and the players will build upon. Coupled with a junior varsity team that finished the season 8-1, the future looks bright for Charlevoix.

KURT GRANGOOD/COURIER

"We are going to take this as a good learning lesson for our younger players," Bindi said. "We had several guys that saw substantial time in this game and they played well, and all the guys made great strides this season, trying to get Rayder football back to a higher standard."

Charlevoix library director

rbentley@petoskeynews.com

PETOSKEY — After serving as the Charlevoix Public Library's director since 2001, Valerie Meyerson plans to leave this winter for a similar position at the Petoskey District Library.

The Petoskey library's board firmed up terms for Meyerson's employment during a special meeting Wednesday, board president Christine Gebhard said. Meyerson is expected to start work by Feb. 1 in Petoskey, where she will replace the retiring Karen Sherrard as library director. Meyerson is to receive an $80,000 salary in her new position.

"Certainly, her successful career with the Charlevoix library stands out," Gebhard said. "She is very enthusiastic. She knows our community. She's passionate about her library. All of those things really contribute to her rising to the position."

Meyerson, 51, has 26 years of work experience in the library field and has served in library director positions since 1991. She obtained a master's degree in library science from Wayne State University.

At the Petoskey library, Meyerson saw several opportunities that piqued her interest in the job. "It's a larger library, and there are challenges in regards to funding that I think will be interesting for me," she said.

Township clerk retires after 29 years

JORDAN SPENCE

(231) 439-9397 • jspence@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — There has been a lot Carol Martin has learned during her time as Charlevoix Township clerk.

"My favorite part about the job has been meeting people and learning about the government and the process," she said.

Martin announced recently she's ready to retire after 29 years on the job.

It's been helpful to her to have good people to work with she said, "I have an awesome deputy clerk."

"The people I work with have helped everything," she said. "We all get along and if we disagree about something, we disagree. We're very open with each other and we don't have to battle here."

Martin said she's seen the township grow and change immensely during her tenure.

"With water billing I used to do everything by hand. Now we have a computer program," she said. "When I started here we had 100 customers. Now we have over 700."

Seeing a project being completed has been the most fulfilling part of her job, Martin said.

"It's a great feeling," she said.

JORDAN SPENCE

(231) 439-9397 • jspence@petoskeynews.com

Charlevoix superintendent, Bob Gendron's last day will be Wednesday, Nov. 26.

Gendron has resigned from the position because of health issues and another job opportunity.

Gendron made the announcement Monday during the school district's board meeting.

"I'm going to be moving to Indiana where I can go back to the classroom and back to coaching," he said. "I can go back to my first love and a lot less stress."

Gendron

This leaves the school board about two weeks to find an interim replacement.

"The board has to have a superintendent in place by law," said board president Kevin Pearsall. "It was advised by the Michigan School Board Association to name a short-term interim or suggest a name for an interim position. Then in the spring we'll have the opportunity to find the best candidate."

Pearsall said they have to begin the search immediately because of the short time frame.

The board members all expressed their thanks for Gendron's service including board trustee Mike Pearsall.

"I really hate to see you go because I feel like you did a lot for our schools. I wish you the best in your new adventure," he said.

Another change for Charlevoix Schools includes the addition of three new board members.

Matt Peterson and David Moon are the school members who ran write-in campaigns, said school board vice president Dick Joseph. This leaves one empty slot, he said.

To fill the spot the board will begin the interview process in January, he said.

"It's going to be a really great board," he said.

At the Charlevoix City Council meeting Monday, Nov. 3, the city unanimously agreed to pledge $2,500 to the program. The money will come out of the promotional budget and will be pledged annually for five years.

Pearson said any financial pledge made will only be used if the application is accepted. She added it's hard for her to say exactly where the money is going toward.

"If we get into the program there will be four committees set up: promotions, design, economic and organizational," she said. "We will create a work plan for the year. Depending on the work plan, we will take the work and divvy them up."

More volunteers are still needed, Pearson said. They currently have 50 volunteers and but need 100.

City to host forum to talk outdoor dining

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 438-9387
jpsence@petoskeynews.com

Before making a final decision about outdoor dining, the City of Charlevoix will have a public forum, which will take place at 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 1, in council chambers.

Bethany Pearson, community economic development director with the Charlevoix Downtown Development Association, said after the forum the city has a couple options.

"They can either have another meeting if it's controversial," she said. "If it's not controversial then they might they make their decision right after the forum."

During the summer the DDA formed an outdoor dining subcommittee consisting of DDA board members Todd Wyett and Luther Kurtz; city council members Peggy Brennan, Shirley Gibson and Jeff Porter; and city staff members Bethany Pearson, Rob Straebel and Mike Spencer.

Pearson presented the draft application and ordinance to the city council Monday, Nov. 3.

Applicants must be in the food or beverage industry and the area must be used for the purpose of outdoor seating. No other outdoor merchandise will be allowed.

Some of the guidelines in the draft ordinance include:

— Businesses must maintain a minimum of 6 feet of unobstructed pedestrian walking space and a minimum of 1.5 feet of clearance between their barrier and the curb to allow for car doors to open.

— Businesses must serve within a clearly defined area that is clean, appropriate, safe and incorporate live vegetation.

— Businesses may not operate an outdoor premise between the hours of 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

— Applicants are required to pay a $250 first time fee and a $200 renewal fee.

Council member Porter expressed concerns about the draft ordinance.

"I think there are a few things missing, one being the removal of these chairs and tables in winter," he said.

Pearson said they will address some of those issues and make small adjustments.

OPINIONS yours & ours

The football question

CHARLEVOIX — What are we going to do about football? It has lately been a prominent question, what with the revelation of brain injuries in the NFL and some problems with misbehaving college and university players.

There is, as well, some justified concern about academic integrity in colleges and universities where some athletes register for and receive credit for courses they were never intended to visit.

The problem of brain injury is a serious one, but I am less concerned with professional players, who must pretty much know what risks they are taking. They are paid well for taking those risks.

College and university players, on the other hand, are not compensated very well for their time and effort. And at many universities, injury or other incapacitation is reason for ending an athletic scholarship. The question that needs to be asked about those amateur players is the same as the one for the professionals: "How much brain damage is done by repeated concussions in those players who are 19-25 years old and do not later play professional football?" I keep hoping that some diligent sports reporter will track down a few hundred former college players who never went pro and find out what their mental condition is at age 50 or 60. That kind of information would answer the really big question.

And how about those who played in high school but never played in college? Another worthwhile question that is not currently being asked. Only with that kind of real information could we judge whether the joys and glories of football — which are very real — are worth the cost.

EAR TO THE GROUND

Rober M. Knutson

The aggressive misbehavior of both professional and college athletes is almost surely related to a culture of privilege that can begin in grade school. Coaches and their attitudes are of primary importance here. Ideally, overt aggressive behavior away from the football field should be reason for immediate dismissal from the team. Not a short suspension, but irrevocable removal. In the case of college athletes, this would not involve the loss of scholarship, just the loss of the possibility of playing. But a coach who is paid more than a university president, and is clearly paid for winning, is likely to be less concerned with the personal behavior of his players. Even a diligent coach could be led astray by the very large rewards for winning and the job loss that comes with losing.

The question of academic integrity is one very close to this old professor's heart. It is not really illegal to arrange for a student to get credit for little or no work. I wish it were. Thirty-five years of sweating over what grade to give for what effort and accomplishment cause me to wish that a teacher or administrator arranging credit for work not done could be charged with theft: theft from those students who do work and earn grades and credit. An important athlete who can remain academically eligible is worth a great deal to a major university in television revenues and bowl bids.

Real information about the mental cost of football to amateur athletes, serious and immediate response to off-field aggression and the assurance of academic integrity may make it possible to save football as enjoyable to both spectators and participants. But we do need to do a few things to save it.

CHARLEVOIX — One of 110 44-foot boats built in Maryland for the U. S. Coast Guard, Motor Life Boat 44376 was launched in 1967 and served almost her entire career in Charlevoix.

These workhorse vessels, that carried a crew of four, were some of the toughest ever built. They were the most advanced rescue boats at the time, designed to withstand the harshest maritime conditions met in search and rescue efforts. Self-bailing and self-righting, virtually unsinkable, they went under only if all nine of their watertight compartments were filled with water. If rolled over, less than 30 seconds were needed until they righted themselves again. Not designed for speed, the boats could operate up to 50 miles offshore in waves up to 30 feet and carry 21 survivors below deck over a 200-nautical mile range. These motor life boats were so strong they could tow vessels weighing up to 125 tons. At present, only one of these boats remains in service, the rest having been replaced by new MLB 47-footers. 44376 was transferred up to Marquette for a few years until her engine room flooded and she was decommissioned in 1996. In the photo, the "44-footer," as she was called by her crew, is docked next to the buoy supply depot at the Coast Guard Landings near the present day Charlevoix Coast Guard Station on the upper channel.

COMMUNITY Highlights

Community event introduces 'doulas' family resources

CHARLEVOIX — Families have the opportunity to meet the doulas from Rhythmic Roots Doula and Birth Services as well as be introduced to the many nonprofits, community organizations and businesses that focus on serving women, pregnant mothers, children and families at an upcoming event from 3-6 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 16, in the community room of the Charlevoix Library.

The free open house event is entitled, "What's a Doula? Meet the Doula."

The afternoon begins with a short presentation by Kristin Belfy and Rebekah Moser, founders of Rhythmic Roots. They will discuss the services they offer and show a video explaining what a doula does and why a doula is helpful.

The event will also showcase many resources from throughout the region. Several nonprofit partners that provide services to families and new mothers will be available to share information, including the Great Start Collaborative, the Rebecca Foundation, Community Mental Health, Moms and Tots Center, Early on Northwest and the Women's Resource Center. Others will provide printed materials at the information table. The first 100 families to attend will receive a complimentary bag filled with coupons from local businesses, informational brochures and other gifts.

"Families who attend this event will gain connections, taste local treats and learn about their community," Belfy said.

"We hope people get connected to all of the community resources available to them. This includes nonprofits, restaurants and shops, outreach services, health professionals and alternative health avenues. People can live here their whole lives and not know about some of the wonderful services available to them."

There will be a kids play area, free local organic food donated by local farms, opportunities for people to connect with other families and an information table with literature from community organizations, family-centered stores, OBGYNs, pediatricians and more. Multiple businesses have also donated items to be given away as door prizes, including Gaga for Kids, McLean and Eakin, North Owl Knits, Bearcub Outfitters and VBH photography.

"Our community is so generous," Moser said. "Businesses have donated everything from photography sessions to knitted hats to children's books and kids clothes. The prizes are wonderful."

Children are welcome to play in the kids area, and both children and adults will enjoy puppets from the Cooperly Puppet Troupe who will be mingling in the crowd. Massage therapist Emmie Marigh, of Harmony of Life Massage Center in Petoskey, and massage therapist Jan Merrill, of Charlevoix, will provide free chair massages for adults. Several local farms will supply food for the event.

"We are so excited about this event," Belfy said. "It truly is something for families to enjoy, and an opportunity for everyone to learn more about what their community has to offer."

Kristin Belfy, co-founder of Rhythmic Roots Doula and Birthing Services, provides a lower back massage for contraction discomfort relief of a laboring mother.

Rhythmic Roots currently offers services within a 60-mile radius of Charlevoix, including the Traverse City area and Gaylord all the way north to Petoskey, Harbor Springs and everywhere in between. Belfy has been assisting births for two and a half years in Traverse City, Gaylord, Charlevoix and Alina. This event kicks off the expansion of the business. Within the next year, Rhythmic Roots plans to expand its offerings to include birth education classes, cloth diapering classes, breastfeeding classes, baby food making classes and new sibling classes, as well as lactation consultant services.

"In America, we have really lost the art of helping mothers before and after birth," Moser said. "A doula is trained to be able to offer support to the mother before, during and after one of the most exciting and emotionally and physically intense times of her life. Although family members are often available to help, having someone who is trained in understanding childbirth and all that it entails can be an extra assurance for both the father and the mother."

Doulas meet with the couple before birth to discuss birthing goals and plans and are available during the birth to provide assistance and comfort throughout labor. Postpartum doulas will come to the mother's home after delivery and offer assistance with breastfeeding, housework or preparing meals as needed and determined by the family.

"There are many options for how little or how much a doula can assist," Belfy said. "Our main goal is to be a total support and resource person so that expecting and new mothers and fathers can feel that they are not alone as they face and embrace this major life transition."

Four Girl Scouts receive silver award

CHARLEVOIX — Alexandria Snabes, Grace Ochs, Madison Olach and Megan Streeter, all of Charlevoix Girl Scout Troop 10253 were recently awarded the Girl Scout Silver Award with their project "A Mission That Matters."

The Silver Award is the highest award that a Cadette Girl Scout can earn. In order to earn this award, a Cadette Girl Scout must create a new project that will benefit the community; write a plan and timeline; speak with and coordinate with the recipient of such project; plan, design and implement the project and carry out the project to fruition. In addition, the girls must spend at least 50 hours on the project from creation to completion.

In choosing their project, the girls looked around the community and spoke with local veterinary offices and the Humane Society, and chose to make dog and cat beds and two cat scratching posts. The girls designed the scratching posts, cut the wood and nailed, glued and stapled their way to the finished product. They then created one cat bed and approximately 10 dog beds by choosing fabric, measuring and cutting the fabric and foam, and sewing and putting zippers on them for easy removal of the foam and washing.

They ultimately donated a cat and dog bed to Bay Shore Animal Hospital and the balance of the beds and the cat scratching posts to the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

The girls would like to thank all of those people who donated their time supervising the building and sewing, and donating the items for the project.

"The girls in my troop continue to amaze me with the wonderful example they are setting. Not only are they great scouts, but they are great girls," said Maura Snabes, troop leader of the girls for the past 10 years.

After twenty years in his previous location.

Bernard M. Cannan, 1920-2014

Long-time resident of Charlevoix, Mich., dedicated Lions' Club member, and die-hard Michigan Wolverine, Bernard M. "Bern" Cannan, 94, died Saturday, Nov. 8, 2014, at the Boulder Park Terrace Nursing & Rehabilitation Center in Charlevoix.

Bern was born and raised in Toledo, Ohio. He attended the University of Michigan, graduating from the College of Engineering with a bachelor of science (chemical engineering) degree in 1942.

He began his work life with the Werner G. Smith Company in Wyandotte, Mich., as a chemical engineer. Then in 1947, he joined the family business as vice president of The Cannan Company, a dry cleaning firm founded by his grandfather in Toledo. While with that company, he broadened the scope of the business by opening a carpet cleaning franchise with ServiceMaster Industries specializing in carpet and furniture cleaning in the home. With the success of the franchise, he decided to join ServiceMaster at its headquarters in Chicago in 1960 eventually supervising the construction of its new headquarters and plant complex in suburban Downers Grove, Ill., where he would continue working until his retirement in 1987. Involved in research and development of new products and techniques, he earned six patents with them. In addition, he traveled the world as a trainer for new franchisees including lengthy visits to Japan in 1971 and again in 1979.

Cannan

Following retirement from ServiceMaster, he and his wife, Ruth or "Jo" as she was known, moved to Charlevoix to begin second "careers" as volunteers in all sorts of community activities. Jo was well-known around the Charlevoix Area Hospital working at the reception desk, as well as serving as manager of the gift shop. Meanwhile, Bern became extremely active in the community participating in projects for the hospital: serving as a Junior Achievement advisor and on the school district's curriculum council; helping make the elementary school playground a reality; actively supporting the construction of the community swimming pool and providing technical advice on the water treatment system; participating on the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission earning the city Tree City USA designation in 1993, 1994 and 1995; and working behind the scenes on numerous Lions' Club fundraising projects such as the annual golf tournament and the chicken barbecue during the Venetian Festival each summer. The culmination of these hours of dedicated service earned him recognition as Charlevoix's 1996 Citizen of the Year by the Chamber of Commerce. Most noteworthy, however, he continued this high level of involvement right up until his last days.

Bern and Jo, a school teacher who had earned her degree from Michigan Normal (now Eastern Michigan University), were married in Wyandotte in 1947. She preceded him in death in 2013 as did one daughter some years earlier. He is survived by two sons and seven grandchildren.

Final arrangements are being made through the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix where a condolence book will be available for community friends to leave personal comments.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks remembrances be sent to Lions Clubs International in his name.

Consider giving gifts with purpose

CHARLEVOIX — Char-Em Alternative Gifts is an effort to offer meaningful gifts for the holiday season.

In years past, alternative gift fairs have raised dollars for important causes in our area on one or two days in December. When blustery winter weather kept shoppers away for a few years in a row, the gift fairs went away. A small group of nonprofit organizations, with support from the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation, is bringing back this idea with a twist — giving can be done online at www.charemalternativegifts.org beginning in November.

Char-Em Alternative Gifts aims to raise awareness of needs in Charlevoix and Emmet counties, to provide financial support to address those needs and to offer a meaningful option for those who wish to make a difference with their holiday shopping dollars. Shoppers may choose to give to six worthy organizations as an alternative to typical holiday gifts.

Bergmann Center, Friendship Centers of Emmet County, Northwest Michigan Habitat for Humanity, Hospice of Northwest Michigan, The Monna Food Project and Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan are offering gifts in several increments from $10 to $250.

A beautiful, wintry gift card with a seasonal greeting will be provided for each gift purchased online from one or more of the participating organizations. This card will let friends or family members know a gift has been made in their honor and will purchase 18 bags of food for friends and neighbors in need, for example. Greeting cards may be mailed directly to the person you wish to honor, or sent to the purchaser. Gifts purchased by Friday, Dec.

19, will likely make it onto Santa's sleigh for holiday delivery; however, these gifts with purpose will also be available for purchase through Wednesday, Dec. 31, at www.charemalternativegifts.org.

BUSINESS

Hospital reaches national milestone

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix Area Hospital recently announced that it is among just 17 percent of hospitals nationwide to successfully attest to Meaningful Use Stage Two, the federal government's comprehensive program to move all health care providers from paper to secure electronic patient records.

The three-stage Medicare and Medicaid Electronic Health Record Incentive Program rewards hospitals and eligible professionals with financial incentives for the meaningful use of certified electronic health record technology to improve patient care. Providers must show that they are meaningfully using their electronic health record technology by meeting specific objectives for each stage in order to receive the substantial financial incentives.

The Meaningful Use program is phased in three stages with increasing requirements and each stage having its own goals, priorities and measurements. It was developed as a result of the belief that electronic health records can improve quality and safety of patient care, as well as improve the coordination of care among healthcare professionals. Achieving "meaningful use" means that the provider is able to show they are using certified electronic health record technology in ways that can be measured not only in quantity, but in quality.

Stage Two began in 2014 and focuses on the electronic exchange of health care information between providers. One of the most significant benefits is that it gives patients the opportunity to securely access their own health care information online, at their own convenience, at home or abroad. Not only can they access their own information, any health care provider they choose can access it as well. The requirements of successful implementation of Stage Two are substantial.

Charlevoix Area Hospital's "MyCAH Patient Portal" is a direct response to Stage Two. It allows patients to retrieve clinical information, current medications, immunizations, health issues, allergies, lab results, procedures, prescription renewal requests, appointment requests, discharge instructions and patient education, as well as providing a secure method to view, download and transmit the information.

"This is a big deal," said Charlevoix Area Hospital CEO, Lyn Jenks. "To date, only 840 hospitals across the nation, most of which are much larger and possess considerably more resources than ours, have successfully attested to Meaningful Use Stage Two. And as of September, only 38 percent of eligible hospitals have even attested to Stage One. We are very proud of the work our staff has done to meet the requirements of both Stage One and Stage Two, and we are certain the results will show in increased quality and safety for our patients."

Chris Wilhelm, chief operating officer of Charlevoix Area Hospital, agrees.

"The privacy and security of our patients is of the utmost importance; they come first. This technology gives us the opportunity to keep their health information secure while increasing efficiency and reducing the possibility of errors. We've all joked about the reputation some doctors have for their illegible handwriting, but honestly, electronic prescriptions and medical records will go a long way to reducing errors," Wilhelm said.

Stage Three, for which requirements are still being developed, is scheduled to begin in 2016.

Wojan's annual holiday food drive is success

CHARLEVOIX — Wojan Window & Door had its second annual Holiday Food Drive on Saturday, Nov. 8, and collected nearly 3,000 pounds of food and household items from the local community.

Building on the success of its 2013 campaign in Charlevoix, Wojan expanded operations this year and collected at the Family Fare Supermarkets in Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan. The rain and sleet that fell throughout the day did not diminish the remarkable level of generosity witnessed by Wojan employees who volunteered their time at the drive.

Wojan is extremely thankful to all the citizens of these three communities for the remarkable compassion and kindness shown throughout the day.

All goods collected will be distributed to food pantries in Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City this week.

Charlevoix Library offers Artist in Action

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Public Library, 220 W. Clinton Street, will offer Artist in Action, an event that will highlight the work of local artist Dawn Fletcher.

Fletcher will be in the library main lobby demonstrating her craft from 2-4 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 20.

In addition to demonstrating her trade, she will also answer questions about the art of felting. Felting is a simple process of separating, tangling and re-locking animal fibers found in items such as yarn or wool. It begins through the agitation of fibers; these fibers are lined with tiny scales which interlock and keep the fibers' shape. There are several methods to agitate and tangle animal fibers into felt such as wet felting, needle felting, nuno felting and knit felting.

Fletcher will also offer patrons an opportunity to try out her craft and create a felted wool pin.

BookTalkers discuss 'Packing for Mars'

BookTalkers, the Charlevoix Public Library's book discussion group, is reading "Packing for Mars," by Mary Roach.

The discussion will be at 6 p.m. Monday, Nov. 17, at the Charlevoix library, 220 W. Clinton.

Imagine, if you will, what it would be like to live in space. There is no air, gravity, hot showers, fresh produce and certainly, no privacy. Science writer, Mary Roach, questioned space agencies who provided research through simulated tests and through the real-life experiences of astronauts who lived the out-of-this-world reality.

This work celebrates human ingenuity (the odder the better), and calls for us to marshal our resources, unchain our imaginations and start packing for Mars.

BookTalkers is a group of readers who love to read different books that may challenge or delight. They gather monthly for discussions on the third Monday of each month. New members are always welcome. On Dec. 15, the book discussed will be "The Cuckoo's Calling," by Robert Galbraith.

For discussion questions, visit the book discussion page on the library's website: www.charlevoixlibrary.org/books-movies-music/book-discussions. For further information about the discussions, call the library: (231) 237-7340 and ask for Beth.

Motorists urged to watch for deer

DEARBORN (AP) — Michigan motorists are being encouraged to keep an eye out for deer as the state's firearms deer hunting season approaches.

AAA Michigan says one in every five motor vehicle crashes in Michigan involves deer and November is among the top months for such crashes. Last year, the auto club says 12 motorists were killed and another 1,200 injured in crashes involving deer.

In 2013, there were more than 49,000 such crashes. Oakland County had the most, with 1,800 crashes reported.

AAA and the Michigan Deer Crash Coalition are teaming up on safety education efforts. The coalition recently unveiled a video aimed at young people. The "Don't Veer for Deer" video was distributed to driver education programs throughout the state.

The annual firearms deer hunting season starts Saturday.

AP Interview: Meekhof hails union, abortion laws

DAVID EGGERT
Associated Press

LANSING — Two years ago, Sen. Arlan Meekhof helped write Michigan's landmark law making union fees voluntary for workers, a feat he'd thought was probably impossible until at least 2015.

Passing the "freedom-to-work" measure, though, ranks just second on the next state Senate majority leader's list of legislative highlights. He said he was most proud when the Senate approved his bill — signed into law in 2011 — prohibiting late-term abortions, which mirrored a federal ban.

"As a person who was adopted, my pro-life stance has nothing to do with my politics. It's who I am," Meekhof told The Associated Press in an interview in his Capitol office.

Meekhof, of West Olive near Holland, was elected by Republican senators last week to lead the GOP-dominated Senate for the next four years. He will replace term-limited Randy Richardville in January. Republicans also control the House and governorship.

Meekhof, 54, said that like Richardville, he will set a business-friendly agenda.

"We want to make sure that we put public policy out there that encourages growth," he said, citing Michigan's population loss over the last decade. "The way to do that is to make Michigan so attractive that they want to come back."

Meekhof was mostly not forthcoming about legislation he would like to push until he can confer with fellow GOP senators.

He said health care policy needs attention because of the state's aging population. He specifically mentioned overhauling Michigan's "antiquated" regulatory program that's designed to ensure that only needed health services are added.

"Can we expect a 40-year-old policy to really cover the type of stuff we're talking about in health care that changes almost by the day?" he said.

Meekhof, then Olive Township's part-time supervisor, won election to the House in 2007 and was promoted to the Senate in 2010 where he's the majority floor leader. During his career, he ran a company that supplied locks to the office furniture industry and worked in management at furniture maker Herman Miller.

Meekhof's seat has the highest percentage of base Republican voters of any Senate district. He was ranked the third-most conservative senator in 2013 by Inside Michigan Politics and voted against expanding Medicaid in this session's big intraparty rift between Gov. Rick Snyder and GOP lawmakers.

Just enough Republicans ultimately joined Democrats last year to expand the health insurance program for low-income adults.

Meekhof said his beliefs and his constituents' values are aligned, but the public expects legislators to solve problems and he realizes as a leader "you may not get everything you want" when compromise is necessary.

Some bills he successfully sponsored, such as the right-to-work law, have stood out.

The legislation attracted mass protests from union members who said it was a partisan attack, but Meekhof countered that it will help Michigan land new jobs. Asked about pursuing other union-related measures, Meekhof said he wants to see the impact of the right-to-work law over a couple more years as more labor contracts expire.

"If there's problems there, we'd look further. But this ... really does solve a lot of issues that we thought were important," he said.

An outdoor enthusiast who likes to kayak along the Pigeon River to Lake Michigan, Meekhof is known to legally carry a concealed gun in the Capitol. He said his political heroes are former U.S. House Speaker Newt Gingrich — for making complex issues easier to digest for regular people — and former President Ronald Reagan for his "gift" of effectively communicating with the American people.

Richardville has said leading an extraordinarily large caucus isn't always easy — it led to temporary gridlock on Medicaid expansion and has been a factor in why Snyder's attempts to raise taxes to improve roads have stalled.

Meekhof said it's "past time" to address road funding and he's hopeful a deal is reached yet this year. When he takes over, Republicans will have an even larger supermajority — 27-11 — than their current 26-12 advantage.

"It's always good to have more Republicans," he said.

of events.

He said he and others in the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council were surprised to hear about the press release claiming the committee to be in approval of a land swap.

"I do not want to represent others on the committee, but to my understanding, that did not happen," Myers said. "My understanding was there were a lot of committee members who wanted to see a plan from St. Marys before taking a vote."

He added the sole reason he was on the committee was to represent the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council and to see if any land swap scenarios would have an impact on water quality.

When the voting began at the meeting, Myers said he abstained from the vote because St. Marys had not yet provided information to him regarding possible impacts on water quality, if a swap were to occur.

Nancy Ferguson, recently elected Charlevoix County Commissioner, also was a committee member but declined comment until a later time.

Luther Kurtz, recently elected Charlevoix City Council member, is another committee member who sent an email response on his perspective as to what happened.

"I can't comment on what the group did, but I know that I personally did not vote in favor of a land swap," he said, in an email. "I did, however, vote about suggestions concerning what community projects St. Marys should include in its proposal, if it ever makes a proposal. I learned a lot while working with this committee, and I'm glad that I was involved, but I am disappointed about the confusion regarding the recent article."

But, St. Marys as well as the facilitator of the meeting, Bill McGinnis, a consultant as a professional meeting facilitator, hired to assist the committee, both claim the press release to be accurate.

Cortney Schmidt, environmental manager for St. Marys, acknowledged the release could have been written more clearly, but stood by the information in the release nonetheless.

"I was not specific," he said. "But it does say there was an 11-1 vote and if it was crafted well, (a land swap) would receive support."

McGinnis also stood by the release, saying it was correct to the best of his knowledge.

The release also included other information and alleged facts about the possible swap, including:

— No beach or shoreline would be affected.

— No campsites would be lost.

— All trails would be preserved and new trails would be added.

— Park would gain access to 4,000 feet of trout stream and McGeach Creek.

— Park would gain wetland and natural habitat area.

— Centent trucks would travel shorter distances, reducing impact on nearby roads.

— Groundwater impacts from mining operations would decrease.

To review further information compiled by St. Marys Cement and others, visit www.landswapfacts.com.

Any decision made by this committee is only advisory. Any proposed land swap would have to go through the state of Michigan for approval.

In a previous story in the Petoskey News-Review, Ron Olson, DNR parks and recreation division chief, reminded those in the Charlevoix community Fisherman's Island is a state park, not a local park.

"We're not just going down the road assuming we accept this and then figuring out how to make it happen. That is not the case," Olson said in the previous story.

Traverse City history center suspends operations

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — The History Center of Traverse City has closed to the public as officials organize its collection and evaluate the nonprofit's finances.

Executive director Madeline Lundy tells the Traverse City Record-Eagle the center will remain closed and maintain staff hours at a "bare minimum" after closing this week until it finds another location or solution for a lease that's set to expire.

Center board members voted in October to terminate the lease agreement for the city-owned Carnegie Building. They say the 14,000-square-foot building is too big and costly to operate. Staff members are now organizing its collection of about 44,000 items, and trying to fundraise.

City Commissioner Ross Richardson says the center is supposed to move out by Nov. 15 but the city will likely give it more time to come to find a solution.

Parents need policies to help kids

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A national report is calling for policies that help children by making it easier for low-income parents to earn higher wages.

The KIDS COUNT policy report released Wednesday says Michigan's earned income tax credit should be expanded, college financial aid restored to older adults and child care subsidies improved for working families with low incomes.

The "Creating Opportunity for Families: A Two-Generation Approach" is prepared by the Baltimore-based Annie E. Casey Foundation.

Kids Count in Michigan Project Director Jane Zehnder-Merrell at the Michigan League for Public Policy says the report "calls for an approach that looks at the whole family."

The organization says more than 500,000 Michigan children up to age eight are in 4-member families that earn less than $47,000 per year.

Hunters not happy with higher fees

LANSING (AP) — Sales of Michigan deer licenses are down this year despite a weekend start to the annual hunting season.

The Detroit News reports just over 1 million licenses were sold from March through Sunday, the lowest number in the past six years. The traditional firearm season starts Saturday.

LIBRARY

While the Petoskey library has strengthened its budget position in recent years — with voters in two neighboring townships approving property tax levies to help support city and other funding for the operation — Meyerson noted that the overall funding level remains below average for a community of Petoskey's size. She hopes to explore ways to enhance the funding position — and in turn, the offerings that the library can provide to community members. Along the way, she plans to find out more about the community's priorities for the library.

Already living in Petoskey, Meyerson said she also looks forward to the additional opportunities the job will bring to be involved in that community.

Meyerson doesn't anticipate leaving her job in Charlevoix before January.

Mary Ann Chew, president of the Charlevoix Public Library's board, noted that its members met Nov. 6 with Meyerson about her departure plans.

"Val submitted her formal resignation and the trustees accepted with regret because Val has been a wonderful director," Chew said. "She guided us through the entire process of renovating our 1927 school building and creating a library that is the pride of our community. Under her leadership the Charlevoix library has become so inviting that it has been described as 'the living room of Charlevoix.'"

Chew said the board and Meyerson discussed the hiring of a replacement director on Nov. 6, but no action was taken in that direction. The board president expected that the hiring process would be on the board's agenda for its Thursday, Nov. 13, meeting. As of press time, details from that meeting were not available.

RAYDERS District CHAMPS

JAMES GENSTERBLUM/COURIER

The Charlevoix volleyball team poses for photos after clinching its first district title since 2011 with a sweep of Harbor Springs in the district final Nov. 6 at Inland Lakes.

Charlevoix completes a three-year journey with hard-won district title

JAMES GENSTERBLUM

INDIAN RIVER — Joy and relief.

The looks on the faces of the Charlevoix volleyball team said it all after the Rayders dispatched Harbor Springs 25-18, 25-14, 25-17 Nov. 6 at Inland Lakes High School to capture its first district title in four years.

In one week, Charlevoix banished two years of heartbreaking losses and tough breaks in the district round by besting all comers en route to the title, culminating in a championship-worthy performance against the Rams.

"It's something that feels earned for these girls," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "They've been through some tough losses and difficult moments, and they've put the work in to get stronger and get the job done."

"It's been a long road, but they deserved the title in the end."

The match against the Rams, as many volleyball matches do, came down to serving.

In every set, with the score close, Charlevoix went on a long serving run aided by strong play up front to pull away and take the set.

In the first set, Charlevoix senior Glnria Greene helped the Rayders go from a mid-set deadlock to a 19-11 lead that the Rayders wouldn't relinquish.

Then, in the second and third set, Charlevoix junior Yogi Hang went on back-breaking runs in both to help the Rayders clinch the match.

In the third and deciding set, Hang went on a six-point run to give the Rayders a 22-14 lead that would hold up the rest of the way.

But Hang's best work at the service line came in the second set, when the junior back row player went on an eight-point run, including three aces, to turn a tight set into a comfortable 25-14 win for the Rayders.

"When I'm back there, my only thought is to get the ball over and don't screw up," Hang said.

"When both teams are rallying back and forth and every point counts, you don't want to be the one who makes the mistake."

Hang did more than not making a mistake, providing a spark for the Rayders in a crucial juncture in the match.

"I think we came out a little bit stiff tonight, just because of what the match was for and the pressure we felt to win," Randall said. "Any time you can start stringing together points and go on a long run really helps your morale and your energy level in volleyball."

"Those runs helped our girls to loosen up, took the pressure off a little bit and helped them to remember to have fun out there."

Behind the Rayders' serving was a balanced attack that helped them prevail.

Senior Maddie Boss led the team with 19 kills and 11 digs, and Greene chipped in 13 kills, 10 digs, one block and two aces.

Senior Olivia Storm initiated the Charlevoix offense with 35 assists and eight digs, and senior libero Alexis Tribfelner finished a perfect 15 of 15 on serve-receive and 21 digs.

Junior Hannah Zipp added five aces, seven digs and one kill for the Rayders, junior Emily Zabawa chipped in five kills and six digs, and sophomore Becca Moon finished with one kill, two assists and three digs.

Although Harbor Springs was overmatched in the final, the Rams put up a strong fight, using tips and targeted attacks to find holes in the Charlevoix defense early in sets.

"We knew (Harbor Springs) was coming in on a roll, and that they weren't going to roll over for us," Storm said. "They did a great job of finding the holes in our defense, but we knew that was their gameplan coming in, and as the sets wore on we were able to adjust and fill those gaps better."

In the end, the Rams were done in by their inexperience, a recurring problem all season for a team with only two seniors.

"It was our inexperience, especially in serve-receive, that led to mistakes, and those mistakes proved to be devastating for us late in sets," Harbor Springs coach David Thom said. "Our girls worked really hard tonight, and executed our plan well, but we're just not quite on that level yet."

The Rayders have experience in spades, making the district final for each of the past four seasons, and losing two straight district finals in Boyne City in which Charlevoix led the match two sets to zero before falling in five.

The experience of those matches is what propelled the Rayders to a 38-7-5 record this season and this title, Boss said.

"Going through those losses, it made us stronger," Boss said. "We were already a close-knit team, but sharing those experiences brought us even closer together and it made us want to work harder to get better.

"Having been through everything, it made winning tonight so much sweeter, and to do it with this group is just amazing."

Rayders defeat Boyne City in semis

For the last three seasons, one team has haunted the Charlevoix volleyball team in district play.

In each of the last two districts, the Rayders took two-set leads against Boyne City, only to watch them evaporate in heart-breaking five-set losses.

On Nov. 4, Charlevoix didn't let it happen a third time, closing out the Ramblers in three sets, 25-19, 25-14, 25-23, with a spirited effort from its senior leaders.

Senior Maddie Boss led the Rayders with 26 kills, two blocks and nine digs, senior Olivia Storm finished with 35 assists, nine digs and an ace, and senior Alexis Tribfelner finished 100 percent on serve-receive and added nine digs.

All three, along with senior Gloria Greene, were critical in the crucial third set.

"All four of them have been in this program a long time, and they know they have to be leaders for us," Charlevoix coach Audra Randall said. "They know they have to be the glue that helps this team stick together through the difficult moments, and we had plenty of those today."

Becca Moon chipped in five blocks and three kills for Charlevoix, and Emily Zabawa added four kills and three digs.

Charlevoix's Yogi Hang hits a serve in the second set of the Rayders' sweep of Harbor Springs in the district final Nov. 6 at Inland Lakes. Hang went on long service runs in the second and third sets to help Charlevoix clinch its first district title since 2011.

ReSound LiNX™

Enjoy conversation with your friends and family this holiday season. ReSound LiNX™ is the world's smallest wireless hearing system with the ability to connect with today's technology. Utilizing surround sound, it was designed to give you the most natural sound experience by adjusting both aids simultaneously to help you hear better in almost any setting. Let Petoskey Ear, Nose and Throat put you back in the picture this holiday season.

5 ways to better hearing this holiday season:

1. Admit that your hearing isn't what it used to be. Most people wait too long before solving their hearing problems, often an average of 5-7 years. It is time to start enjoying the benefits of improved hearing!
2. Keep a positive attitude while you seek help. There are many different hearing aid options. Keeping a positive attitude through the process will help you and the best hearing solution that fits your needs.
3. Learn all you can about your hearing problem. As you learn the facts about your hearing loss, you are better able to communicate your hearing needs to your audiologist.
4. Set realistic expectations. Hearing aids are designed to improve your hearing and may not be able to create a hearing experience you had prior to hearing loss. Communicate your expectations and set realistic goals with your audiologists.
5. Practice, time and patience yield success. Adjusting to anything new takes time. It's no different with hearing aids. Once you feel and hear the benefits the rewards are more than worth it.

Spencer Bruce (75) looking to make a play against Harbor Springs.

Hard-hitting Bruce overcame adversity to help Rayders rise

NOAH CERTA
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix senior Spencer Bruce loves a lot of things. One of those many things is his favorite sport — football.

Bruce has enjoyed the hitting aspect of football ever since beginning to play the sport at age 8.

Last year, Bruce was the player who took a hit — as his budding varsity football was momentarily derailed in 2013.

In the third game of the season for the Rayders against Grayling, Bruce was playing on the line during the game's third play when his biggest fear was realized.

Bruce had his foot planted when he was hit in the back. He dropped to the ground and stayed there for a couple of seconds, before getting up and jogging to the sideline. After, it was determined he tore his ACL and had a double meniscus tear.

In a split second, he saw his entire football season lost.

"It was heart-wrenching," Bruce said. "Missing the homecoming game was the hardest to handle. I just wished I could've been out there helping my team. Getting hurt that early in the season was disappointing."

Bruce had a choice to make. He could either be sorry for himself or chose to better himself from the incident.

He decided to use his injury as motivation.

Bruce had to go through the struggles of rehabbing his injury.

"Three times a week that's what I was doing," he said. "At the time I couldn't and didn't focus on weightlifting. After my surgery I had to be on crutches for six weeks, and still do rehab for three days a week. During this time I put all of my weight training into my upper body."

Bruce was out for the entire wrestling season. He returned to athletic competition when he participated in track and field in the spring. But his main focus was to getting back onto that football field for his senior year.

That day finally came Aug. 28 in the Rayders' first game of the 2014 season.

For Bruce, it was bittersweet.

"Honestly, it wasn't anything real special," he said. "It was more sentimental that it was my last first football game in high school."

Bruce and the team exceeded a lot of people's expectations for the year by posting a respectable 6-4 record and hosting a home playoff game against Negaunee.

It was the Rayders' first playoff game since 2009.

"Unfortunately for Bruce and his team, their season ended with 21-12 loss against the Miners."

For Bruce this season, it was back to doing his favorite thing.

"I didn't have much discomfort," he said. "I had to tell myself to not think about it and get back to enjoying hitting people."

This season, however, wasn't pain free for Bruce.

"I hurt my good knee. I actually thought I tore my ACL," he said. "Along with that I had an ankle injury that I had to play through. Once I forgot that, I played to my potential."

Bruce, a player who overcame plenty of adversity, was happy to be part of Charlevoix's football turnaround.

"I think honestly we overcame adversity," he said. "We changed the minds of people. This team had good chemistry."

Bruce and teammate Adam Michaud formed a tough tandem on the Rayders' interior line. Both of his favorite season memories involved Michaud.

"One of them was when Adam made an interception and ran it in for a touchdown against Kalkaska. My second play also involved Adam. Him and I double teamed a defender.

pushed him 30 yards downfield before pancaking him to the ground."

Bruce formed a healthy relationship with his coach, Ron Bindi.

"Honestly, I love him," Bruce said. "He's sweet. I think he's a great coach, even though he sometimes comes under scrutiny, he does a good job for the program."

Bruce would like to play college football, and study business management. The memories of overcoming adversity while helping elevate his team will serve him well no matter his path.

"For one, changing the program around for hopefully years to come was special," he said. "Also, showcasing my skills to college coaches made me feel good."

Elks host annual Thanksgiving swim

ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

The 12th annual Douglas McRedith McNabb Thanksgiving Veterans Memorial Swim, at 11 a.m. on Thanksgiving Day at Lake Michigan Beach, will be a "Dip to Remember."

Sponsored by the Charlevoix Elks Lodge 2856, the swim honors fallen Vietnam veteran, Doug McNabb, brother of charter Elks member John McNabb. Doug graduated from Traverse City High School in 1965, and continued his education at Northwestern Michigan College. He served as a squad leader and was killed in action in Ngoc Tri, Vietnam in 1968, at age 20. He was married with one son.

McNabb's dream of honoring his brother has become an annual event in Charlevoix and has been an organized fundraising philanthropy of the Elks' organization since 2009. His Facebook page invites brave souls to come and accept the challenge.

"The weather is ripe ... bring your wallets!" he said. "It should be a good show!"

McNabb has missed participating in only two events since its inception and he is ready to swim (three strokes counts as a swim!) this year.

The original polar plunge in 2001 began as a friendly wager between friends, according to Mark Knapp, Elks' House Chair and Esteemed Leading Knight of the organization. The event has grown to the point where a substantial contribution is made to assist veterans and also local families in need each year. Participation may include as many as 60 to 80 plungers and a few hundred spectators who cheer them on while huddled up against the weather.

"They're out of their minds," said Ed Rogalla, local Elks member. "But it's all for a good cause. The Elks are dedicated to the cause of remembering those who have served."

Registration and pledge forms are available at the Elks' Lodge located in the Beacon Center building on Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix. The 2014 swim goal is $3,000. Donations of $5, $10, $20 or more will be greatly appreciated.

Thanksgiving offers the opportunity for a two-part fundraiser for the Elks: the swim is for the vets and families. Also circulating around the community is the organization's "turkey" pledge form requesting donations for the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project.

This project puts together a Christmas dinner basket for local qualifying families. The baskets include: turkey, mashed potatoes, green beans, corn, peaches, salad oil, pancake mix, syrup, eggs, bread, margarine, milk, peanut butter, jelly, brownie mix and cookies.

Checks for contributing to this and/or the Memorial Swim can be made payable to the Charlevoix Elks' Lodge. Visa and MasterCard are accepted at the Lodge or by calling (231) 237-0200. Donations on the day of the swim will also be accepted.

Fishing for a solution land swap proposal

Charlevoix City Council voted unanimously in support of a resolution for Fisherman's Island, opposing a potential land swap with St. Marys Cement.

"The township has voted unanimously for a solution similar to this. Hopefully, we would have some influence in the process. I think it's time the city council weighed in on this," said council member Jeff Porter.

The resolution states: "The City of Charlevoix hereby supports the continued access to Fisherman's Island State Park on Lake Michigan from Bells Bay Road and retention of the 416.3 acres of Fisherman's Island State Park as forest and wildlife habitat within Charlevoix Township."

Council member Shirley Gibson also voiced her support for the resolution.

"It's time we take a stand on this. It's not in the least bit negative," she said. "For anyone who thinks this is not a local issue, St. Marys made it a local issue by appointing local (people) to their secret committee. I'm happy this is coming before us."

Before voting on the resolution, new council member Luther Kurtz — who is also a member a citizen's advisory committee created by St. Marys Cement to discuss any potential land swap issues — wanted to add an amendment to take out the 416.3 acres specified in the resolution.

Castle Farms announces Heroes Wedding winners

CHARLEVOIX — Crystal Holmes and Isaiah Hope of Kincheloe are winners of Castle Farms Heroes Wedding Giveaway. "A Salute to our Soldiers" Dream Military Wedding Giveaway, sponsored by Castle Farms and local vendors.

The contest was open to couples all across Northern Michigan and the U.P. with one (or both) participants being active military or veterans of the United States Armed Forces. Nominations began on Oct. 29, and the five finalists were announced on Nov. 6. Voting took place from Nov. 7-11, through the Castle's Facebook page, and Holmes and Hope were announced as the winners on Nov. 11, Veterans Day.

"Unbelievable. Simply unbelievable," Holmes said after learning that she and Hope had won. "We first started looking (for venues) nine years ago and fell in love with Castle Farms. It's absolutely beautiful."

But Hope, who was on active duty in the Army from 2002-2008, through the National Guard, was sent to Iraq for a 19-month deployment. Upon his safe return, the couple again began looking at wedding venues again, but stopped after hearing that Isaiah was once again being deployed, this time to assist during Hurricane Katrina.

Time passed, and a few years ago, Hope's sister Hannah won the Castle's Grand Bridal Giveaway at the annual Bridal Expo. When Holmes and Hope attended Hannah's wedding to her now-husband Brian, the setting rekindled their dreams of having their own Castle wedding. Holmes first learned of the Heroes Wedding Giveaway this past October when she attended the 10th Grand Bridal Expo.

Thinking they had little chance of winning, she didn't even enter them in the giveaway until the very last day.

"But then people started voting for us. People we didn't even know. It didn't really sink in that we were the winners, until we got the phone call," she said.

The couple have been overwhelmed by the community support.

"The people of Kincheloe and all over Chippewa County were voting for us; and we're so grateful to everyone. Castle Farms is our dream wedding spot. Winning the Heroes Wedding Giveaway is like a dream come true."

The couple is planning a 2015 summer wedding at Castle Farms.

Historical society to seek grants for lighthouse repairs

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 439-9307 - jspence@petoskeynews.com

The Charlevoix City Council unanimously passed two resolutions for the Charlevoix Historical Society to apply for two grants. Denise Fate, president of the historical society, said the lighthouse's paint has started to fade, and in order to paint the lighthouse the society will apply for two grants.

"The city owns the lighthouse so it has contractual obligation to help restore the lighthouse," Fate said. "In 2009, it was painted red.

Since then there has been significant fading, and we need to repaint with another type of paint so the paint will hold up."

The society is applying for two grants, one which is for $5,400 and another for $12,700. This money is available from the State Historic Preservation Office.

Fate said they have confirmed the project is eligible for grant money, which also would be matched by the historical society.

"We are talking about paint," said council member Shirley Gibson. "It seems that there isn't an issue with chipping. How did we come to the conclusion that it should be red instead of white?"

Fate said in order for the lighthouse repairs to take place it has to be restored to historical significance in order to meet the Department of Interior requirements. By restoring it to historical significance it can be easier to apply for grants.

Fate said the deadline for the grant applications is today, Friday. If approved, painting of the lighthouse could begin in the fall of 2016.

MARILYN MARCOWNE
AP Chief Medical Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A major study lifts a cloud around Zetia and Vytorin, blockbuster drugs for lowering cholesterol. The study found that these pills modestly lower the risk of heart attacks and other problems in people at high risk for them — evidence that's been missing for more than a decade as the drugs racked up billions in sales.

Doctors have long focused on lowering LDL, or bad cholesterol, to prevent heart disease. Statins like Lipitor, Crestor and Zocor are the main medicines for this, and a lot of research shows they work.

Merck & Co.'s ezetimibe, which went on sale in 2002, lowers cholesterol in a different way. It's sold as Zetia and, as a combo pill with Zocor, as Vytorin. The drug won Food and Drug Administration approval for lowering LDL, but some studies suggested that might not translate to fewer heart attacks and strokes. One study even questioned whether it raised the chance of cancer.

The new study found that people at high risk of heart problems who took Vytorin for seven years cut their risk of suffering one by 6 percent — by 8 percent if they took the drug most faithfully — compared to others taking just Zocor. Vytorin also proved safe.

"We've answered all the questions. Now we know that with this different way of lowering cholesterol, you can in fact prevent heart attacks and strokes," said one study leader, Dr. Christopher Cannon of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

"This is the first time that something added to statins has been shown to be beneficial," he added.

Results were revealed Monday at an American Heart Association conference in Chicago.

"I'm impressed" that a non-statin can help, said Dr. Sidney C. Smith Jr., a former Heart Association president from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"It expands the options," especially for the many people who can't tolerate a statin or get their cholesterol low enough on one, said Dr. Neil Stone, a Northwestern University cardiologist.

Even a longtime Vytorin critic, the Cleveland Clinic's Dr. Steven Nissen, said the study gave "a solid result" and evidence that very low cholesterol cuts heart risks.

To be clear: The study doesn't mean that Zetia and Vytorin can help people who have not yet suffered a heart problem. The 18,000 study participants either had a recent heart attack or worsening chest pain from a severely clogged artery. About 1.1 million people face this situation in the United States alone each year.

Half were given Vytorin and the rest were given Zocor alone.

Average LDL levels went from 95 at the start of the study to 70 with Zocor and 54 with the combo pill Vytorin. About 15 percent of Zocor users had a heart attack versus 13 percent of those on Vytorin. Other heart-related problems also were less common with Vytorin.

For every 56 people taking Vytorin for seven years, one additional heart attack, stroke or heart-related death would be prevented.

The study was sponsored by Merck and many doctors involved in it consult for the company or other heart drug makers.

Zetia and Vytorin had global sales of $4.25 billion in 2013. They cost about $6.50 per pill, and generic versions will be available in about two years.

High-dose statins may be a cheaper way to get LDL very low, but studies haven't compared that option to adding Zetia or Vytorin.

One study leader who takes Zetia — Duke University's Dr. Robert Califf — said many on it are like him, unable to tolerate a high enough dose of a statin to drop LDL low enough.

The results also boost the prospects for newer drugs many companies are developing to lower cholesterol even more. They block PCSK9, a substance that interferes with the liver's ability to remove cholesterol from the blood.

"It's a bit of a linchpin dance," said Dr. Lori Mosca, a cardiologist from Columbia University and New York-Presbyterian Hospital, and an American Heart spokeswoman. "How low can you go before you get no more benefit?"

Special thanks from Joppa House Ministries

Dear Editor:
During this season of gratefulness, Joppa House Ministries would like to take this opportunity to thank our community for its support of Joppa House, the newly operational transitional home for women and their children who are homeless or facing homelessness. After two years of renovation, we opened in July.

Currently there are five women in residency with five children ages 5 and under! The women are striving to better their lives by participating in our required Stepping Stones Curriculum that teaches the life skills they have been lacking to sustain independent living. They are currently employed or seeking employment. The ladies have truly responded wholeheartedly to the structure of the living arrangements. They are learning new ways to parent, learning to cook and clean house, work together, submit to authority, learning financial responsibility, employment skills, planning meal menus and shopping for ingredients. They are learning to live and work together as a "family." The women are growing emotionally as they work through the past traumas, addiction issues, and co-dependency that has dominated their lives.

But most significantly, the ladies are growing spiritually. Learning that God has a plan and a purpose for them and that with His Presence in their lives, they can achieve anything they want to be! The girls are seeking to better their lives by working toward their goals of finishing GED requirements, attending recovery groups, or studying to get a driver's license so they can further their education to eventually provide for their families, breaking out of poverty which for many is generational.

Joppa House is a 501c3 nonprofit organization solely funded by contributions and donations. All donations are tax-deductible. Our projected annual budget is $77,100. If you feel so led, donations may be made by mailing to Joppa House Ministries, P.O. Box 174, Charlevoix or you may contact us at (231) 547-8040.

Once again, myself and the Joppa House Board of Directors thank you from the bottom of our hearts for investing in this amazing and worthwhile ministry in this community!

Blessings,
Pastor Ginger Stevens

Snyder has last chance

Traverse City Record-Eagle (Nov. 8)

Recent history should tell Michigan voters that lame-duck legislation — bills passed in the interim between the general election and when lawmakers take their oath of office — is often bad news.

In most cases, legislation comes up in a lame-duck session for only one reason — it's too toxic for politicians to take on when voters might remember and punish them. Doing it after a general election puts the most distance between the vote and the next general election.

"Toxic," of course, depends on one's perspective.

Two years ago the Republican-dominated Legislature rammed through right-to-work legislation in just two days, with no public hearings. Despite telling voters right-to-work wasn't "on his radar," Gov. Rick Snyder signed the bills.

This year, Snyder is openly touting legislation that taxpayers may consider toxic or may welcome — increasing taxes to improve the state's roads and bridges.

Snyder said (Nov. 5) he will push lawmakers to approve a plan to permanently raise more money for transportation funding in the lame-duck session. A proposal to double fuel taxes came "very close" before stalling in June because politicians were more interested in preparing for the elections.

Michigan spends less per driver on roads than any other state. Yet it also has some of the country's highest taxes at the pump — the 6 percent sales tax applied to motor fuels mostly goes to schools and local governments under the state constitution.

Lowering health insurance costs a top priority

Daily Press (Escanaba). Nov. 11.

Saving most Americans money on health insurance by repealing the most objectionable sections of the Obamacare law ought to be a priority when the new Congress convenes early next year.

That's right: For most people, it appears repealing Obamacare would lead to lower health insurance costs.

President Barack Obama and his minions have been touting what they claim will be minor increases expected in the cost of insurance through Obamacare next year. Why, they note, it is expected Obamacare policy premiums will go up by 4-6 percent.

But according to the White House itself, health care costs in general increased by only 3.6 percent last year. Some other sources put the percentage even lower.

Either way, Obamacare insurance costs will be going up by substantially more than the cost of health care itself. On Election Day, Obama held a press conference to claim credit for lowering health care cost inflation. He insisted costs for medical treatment have gone down as a result of his law.

It just isn't true. Health care inflation has been dropping steadily since 2003, when it stood at about 7 percent a year.

As a matter of fact — again, according to the White House's own numbers — health care inflation has risen since 2011, when it was only about 1 percent annually.

Until Obamacare was enacted, the private sector was well on its way to getting health care costs under control. Now, in part because of Obamacare, the trend has reversed.

Obama said it himself: The election was a referendum on his policies. Most Americans have rejected them — and Congress should do so, too.

CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

LOOKING BACK...

CHARLEVOIX — Sam Alexander was born in 1868 in Kentucky. He came to Ironton in the mid-1880s to work as a fireman at the great iron smelter there, located on the land just north of the ferry crossing five miles south of Charlevoix on Lake Charlevoix's South Arm. By 1890 he was working on the ferry itself, and rose to captain in 1900. Sam married and lived in a house just to the southwest of the ferry landing. It is still there on the right near the waterfront as one boards the ferry on the way to Boyne City. Thus began a half-century career that eventually gained him worldwide fame when both Sam and the ferry were featured in the syndicated feature "Ripley's Believe It or Not" on Dec. 5, 1936, in hundreds of newspapers in 40 countries. Readers around the globe learned about the man who had traveled 15,000 miles while never being farther than 1000 feet from his own home.

The cartoon caught the attention of Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, the two men who portrayed Amos 'n Andy on the smash hit longtime radio show of the times, to the extent both men made it a point to journey to Ironton for the sole purpose of meeting Sam and taking a ride on his vessel.

By the time he retired in the early 1940s, it was estimated that Sam Alexander had probably traveled the equivalent of the circumference of the earth on the rustic putt-putt Ironton Ferry. It is still in operation today,

Blood donations often decline this time of year when donors get busy with holiday festivities and travel.

Severe winter weather and seasonal illnesses, like flu, can also have a serious impact on blood donations, but the need for blood remains steady. On average the Red Cross must collect 15,000 blood products every day for patients across the country.

The Red Cross currently needs donors with all types of blood, especially those with O negative, A negative and B negative. To supplement the demand Red Cross is releasing scheduled dates, times and places for blood donation:

p.m., Monday, Dec. 1.

Simply call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767) or visit redcrossblood.org to make an appointment or for more information. All blood types are needed to ensure a reliable supply for patients. A blood donor card or driver's license or two other forms of identification are required at check-in.

Individuals who are 17 years of age (16 with parental consent in some states), weigh at least 110 pounds and are in generally good health may be eligible to donate blood. High school students and other donors 18 years of age and younger also have to meet certain height and weight requirements.

Charlevoix County Community Foundation awards $173,400 in grants

CHARLEVOIX — The board of trustees of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation recently approved $173,400 in grants during its fall grant cycle.

Grants in the recent cycle supported programs in the arts, education, community development, the environment, human services, health and wellness, recreation, youth services and more. The foundation's endowed funds provide the resources for grant-making to occur.

"The community foundation's reach expands every year," said Chip Hansen, the foundation president. "We are so grateful to so many friends of the community foundation, whose generosity allows us to meet so many needs, and make so much good work possible."

Awards included funding for urgent needs in our communities, with a total of seven requests funded for food pantry purchases, emergency home heating fuel, and utility shut-offs.

"We normally see lots of requests for urgent needs this time of year, with this fall being no exception. Donors giving through the community foundation also stepped up to the challenge of providing partial funding for a multipurpose building for the homeless," reported Maureen Radke who facilitates the grant making process for the foundation.

The grant awards allowed $21,975 in funding for projects that will impact Charlevoix County youth in a positive way. The grants were recommended by the foundation's Youth Advisory Committee.

"The students on the YAC know that when they review grant proposals, they are representing all youth in Charlevoix County. They take this role very seriously and consider each proposal accordingly," said Mishelle Shooks, who coordinates the Youth Advisory Committee on the foundation's behalf.

"Their attention to detail and their ability to cohesively work together to recommend Youth Fund allocations is beyond impressive," she added. "This is an exceptional group of teens."

Also awarded were grants for organizational capacity building.

Radke said, "These grants are rare. It is unprecedented to have this opportunity to partner with seven different organizations to strengthen their ability to carry out their missions in our communities. From marketing plans, to accreditation training, and website development, these grants will increase services and add resources where they are needed the most."

A charitable organization dedicated to improving and enriching life in the area, the Charlevoix County Community Foundation accepts gifts from individuals, families, businesses and civic groups and manages them as permanent endowments. The principal of the endowment continues to grow, providing perpetual charitable capital to benefit Charlevoix County's residents and nonprofit organization. Since it was founded in 1992, the foundation's net assets have grown to more than $29 million, and grants and scholarships totaling more than $13.8 million have been distributed for the common good.

The foundation welcomes inquiries and grant requests. The next deadline for submitting a grant request is Monday, March 2. For a complete list of the recent grant awards, visit the foundation's website at www.c3f.org and click on "What's New," then "Recent Grants."

Collections under way for Charlevoix Christmas project

CHARLEVOIX — Gently used coats and jackets will be collected at the Clothing Company in downtown Charlevoix through Dec. 14 for the Charlevoix Community Christmas Project.

Jackie Dipert, owner of the Clothing Company and her staff have been supporters of the Christmas Project for a number of years. The Clothing Company's coat sale and special in-store incentive to encourage people to turn in their used coats has ended; however, Jackie and her staff will continue to collect coats for the Christmas Project until Dec. 14.

There are a number of other Christmas Project programs under way and there are many ways people can donate to the organization.

Gifs of Charlevoix is collecting gently used jeans at both of their locations through Dec. 17. Mittens and socks can be dropped off at the lobby of Charlevoix State Bank's Mitten Tree. For information on how to donate your time, contributions or for information on the adopt a family program contact project leader Mary Everleigh at (231) 547-5548.

To express their appreciation to the businesses, churches and to the community, the Christmas Project will be hosting an open house on Thursday, Dec. 18, at the Bethany Lutheran Church. Refreshments will be served and tours of the project will be available along with information.

Study ties dental drugs, heart infection risk

AP Chief Medical Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Curbing the routine use of preventive antibiotics before dental work may have contributed to a rise in heart valve infections in England, a new study suggests. In the U.S., the highest risk patients still get these drugs and no similar trend has been seen.

Mouths are full of bacteria, and certain dental procedures can let them enter the bloodstream, travel to the heart and cause a serious infection called endocarditis, which proves fatal up to 10 to 20 percent of the time. People with artificial heart valves and other implants are at high risk for this, and people with leaky natural heart valves face a moderate risk.

It used to be routine to give those people antibiotics — usually a single penicillin pill — just before dental work. But there was little evidence the preventive treatment lowered infection rates and the drugs sometimes cause serious allergic reactions. Overuse of antibiotics also promotes drug-resistant germs — a public health concern.

So in 2007, the American Heart Association and others said the drugs should only be used for the highest risk patients; a year later, regulators in England recommended stopping them for all patients.

Researchers from the University of Surrey and Oxford University did a study to see what happened after that in England.

They found that prescriptions for preventive antibiotics fell from an average of 10,900 per month in the four years before the policy change to 2,236 per month in the five years after it.

Starting in March 2008, heart valve infections started to rise above usual levels, according to hospital records. Five years later, "there were approximately 35 extra endocarditis cases per month than would have been expected" if trends before the antibiotic prescribing change had continued, said one study leader, Dr. Martin Thornhill of the Sheffield School of Clinical Dentistry in England.

The work doesn't prove fewer antibiotics caused the surge, he and others stressed. Heart infections have been rising everywhere because other procedures that make them more likely, such as implanted medical devices and kidney dialysis, have become more common.

There also was never much proof that the preventive antibiotics lowered endocarditis risk. One study even found that brushing teeth twice a day was five times more likely to push bacteria into the bloodstream than having a tooth removed, said Dr. Dhruv Kazi of San Francisco General Hospital, an expert with no role in the study.

"These should not prompt changes in prescribing practices," he said of the new results.

BUSINESS

Businesses' input sought for survey

CHARLEVOIX — The city of Charlevoix, Charlevoix Development Authority and Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce encourage area businesses to give input for local market and economic studies by completing a survey.

The local entities are working with The Chesapeake Group on these studies. To get a better understanding of the area's businesses, they have crafted an anonymous survey that's expected to take participants about 15 minutes to complete. The survey can be found online at www.surveymonkey.com/t/Charbussrvy.

A printed version of the survey is available at the chamber office, 109 Mason St., Charlevoix. Businesses should have the most relevant individual in their organization complete the survey. Only one submission per business is needed.

The information gathered is intended to help recruit new businesses and expand on current ones; define the current and future market; help local entities to address any issues; identify development opportunities within the city and the downtown; and help study organizers better meet the needs of local businesses.

Compiled results will be available for public information once the final draft of the study is completed.

Hospice of Michigan requests Charlevoix Volunteers

CHARLEVOIX — Hospice of Michigan, the largest non-profit hospice and palliative care organization in Michigan, is seeking volunteers in Charlevoix to help support patient care, office administration and a variety of other programs.

Volunteers are an integral, yet often invisible part of a hospice team. Caregiving for a terminally ill loved one can be exhausting for family and friends, and a volunteer can provide opportunities to get away for a needed break.

"If you have a few hours to spare every week, you can make a real difference in someone's life," said Kathy Liettaert, volunteer program manager for Hospice of Michigan. "Making a cup of tea or reading the newspaper to someone struggling with illness not only adds normalcy to their day, it gives caregivers much-needed relief and the personal time they need."

Liettaert explains that the opportunities for a hospice volunteer are virtually limitless. Some of the ongoing volunteer needs include: companionship visits and caregiver relief; bedside vigils to ensure that patients in their final hours will not die alone; care by professional massage therapists, hair stylists and manicurists; specialty programs, such as pet, music and aroma therapy; assisting veterans who can reach out to their fellow servicemen and women through the We Honor Veterans program, which is designed to address the unique needs of military personnel at the end of life; help through the MyStories Program where volunteers record special stories told by the patient.

Prospective volunteers will be asked to go through a training course where they learn more about hospice, the principles of hospice, the grieving process and how to help patients, families and staff.

"The best volunteers have a passion for helping others," Liettaert explained. "They are dedicated, compassionate, non-judgmental and flexible. They may or may not have a specific skill to share, but they have the time and the willingness to make a difference in the life of a patient and family. At some point or other, everyone who volunteers will ultimately get something out of the experience."

If you would like to learn more about volunteer opportunities for Hospice of Michigan or sign up as a volunteer, visit www.hom.org/?page_id=1239. You may also contact Liettaert at (231) 929-1886 and by email at klietaer@hom.org or call Amanda Fleming at (989) 705-2604 or email afleming@hom.org for additional information.

For those who have experienced a loss, hospice encourages a waiting period of one year before becoming a volunteer in order to allow for the processing of grief.

AP IMPACT: 'Vaccine court' keeps claimants waiting

WATCH VIDEO JUSTIN FRUTCHARD
TEDDY THIBODEAUX
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — All but broken by her son's violent and unexplained seizures, by so many panicked trips from the crib to the emergency room, Jeffrey McCord's mom thought her desperate search for both answers and help was finally over.

A respected neurologist had drawn a connection that a dozen other doctors missed: Jeffrey's convulsions began days after a routine vaccination, the kind given safely to millions of American children.

While Jeffrey's injuries were devastating, his parents were told they might not have to bear the costs alone. The doctor explained that Jeffrey could apply for lifelong care paid for by the federal government. The program's premise is simple: quickly and generously support people in the rare cases when a shot to prevent a sickness such as flu or measles instead is the likely cause of serious health complications.

But 11 years would pass before the McCord family would receive its first check.

And they are not alone in their frustration. A system intended to speed help to vaccine-injured Americans has instead heaped additional suffering on thousands of families, The Associated Press has found.

To investigate vaccine court in depth, the AP read hundreds of decisions, conducted more than 100 interviews, and analyzed a database of more than 14,500 cases. That database was current as of January 2013; the government has refused to release an updated version since.

Among the AP's findings:

— Private attorneys have been paid tens of millions of taxpayer dollars even as they clog the court with more cases than they can handle, some of which the court rejected as totally inadequate. The court offers a financial incentive to over-file — unlike typical civil court cases, attorneys are paid whether or not they win, as was the case with more than 5,000 losing claims that vaccines caused the developmental disability autism. Those who double-bill for their time or consistently submit questionable expenses are not disciplined.

— Prominent attorneys have enlisted expert witnesses whose own work has been widely discredited, including one who treated autism with a potent drug used to chemically castrate serial rapists. Another doctor cribbed his material from an anti-vaccine website. Some of the most prominent experts set up non-profits questioning vaccine safety, further fueling public skepticism. Meanwhile, many doctors hired by the government to defend vaccine safety in court have ties to the pharmaceutical industry.

— Lawmakers designed vaccine court to favor payouts, but the government fights legitimate claims and fails its obligation in publicize the court, worried that if they concede a vaccine caused harm, the public will react by skipping shots. The court was created with relaxed standards of evidence and a burden of proof more easily met than civil lawsuits. Lawmakers expected some children would get help even though their injuries weren't truly caused by a vaccine. If government doctors had their way, though, 1,600 families would not have gotten more than $1.1 billion in cash and future medical care between the court's opening in 1988 and then end of 2012.

— Cases are supposed to be resolved within 240 days, with options for another 150 days of extensions. Less than 7 percent of 7,876 claims met the 240-day target. Add in autism claims, which were postponed so the court could hear all of them at once, and just 4.5 percent took fewer than 240 days. Most non-autism cases take at least two and a half years, with the average case length more than three years, not including cases unresolved at the end of 2012. Hundreds have surpassed the decade mark. Several people died before getting any money.

Caught in the middle are families that need help.

"The system is not working," said Richard Topping, a former U.S. Department of Justice attorney who handled vaccine injury claims but resigned after concluding his bosses had no desire to fix the major flaws he saw. "People who need help aren't getting it."

The vanquishing of polio, measles and other preventable diseases was the transcendent public health accomplishment of the 20th century.

And yet, by the mid-1980s, those gains seemed fragile. Pharmaceutical companies were facing a barrage of lawsuits from parents who believed the diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis shot had disabled their kids. Their profits imperiled, vaccine makers signaled they would leave the U.S. market.

In response, Congress gave a break both to pharmaceutical companies and to those who received a vaccine to prevent one illness, yet suffered another.

To protect the nation's supply, lawmakers shielded companies from jury verdicts, shifting liability for injuries to the U.S. government. That part worked: Vaccines are widely available, and profitable.

To help people harmed by shots, Congress created the National Vaccine Injury Compensation Program. Government doctors and lawyers review claims. If they believe it is more likely than not that a vaccine — and not something else — caused the injury, they tap a $3.5 billion fund to pay for future care and lost wages. That fund is replenished by a 75-cent tax on each vaccine.

If the government concludes the vaccination was not likely the cause, it contests the claim to a special vaccine court, billed several blocks from the White House. Though much is in dispute regarding the vaccines and their side effects, the court remains obscure. But largely due to an influx of adult flu claims, the volume of new cases has increased, averaging more than 400 annually in recent years.

To be sure, many of those who received the $2.8 billion that the government says it distributed through March 2014 would not have won a civil trial. But the system has not worked as Congress envisioned.

Many claims fall into a vast gray area: The science is clear on only nine of 144 vaccine-injury combinations that a shot could — or could not — cause the illness. Amid this fundamental uncertainty, the kind of litigation the court was created to avoid is routine.

Days before his DPT shot, a minor traffic accident sent Jeffrey McCord to the emergency room. A precautionary brain scan showed he was fine.

Within 48 hours of his September 1995 vaccination, the seizures began. An MRI showed black lesions where there had been gray matter.

For three years Jeffrey's parents struggled to care for their only child. His mother quit her job. His father worked out of their northern Virginia home. They ploughed tens of thousands of dollars into treatments, borrowing on credit cards.

Not until an appointment with Dr. Yuval Shafir did the family consider that a vaccine could have caused Jeffrey's epilepsy.

Jeffrey's parents knew nothing about vaccine court, which operates under the U.S. Court of Federal Claims. Shafir did because he had testified for the government against vaccine claims. In Jeffrey's case, he blamed the vaccine. In 1998, the family filed.

Justice Department lawyers fought — hard. They questioned the family's motives. They assailed Shafir's credibility.

"We needed the help — we knew our baby could die at any moment," said Jeffrey's mother, Martha Toomey, who still doesn't leave her now 19-year-old son alone for fear of seizures. "We didn't expect the government to attack us."

In March 2005, DOJ lawyers began negotiating a settlement. Four months later, they abruptly took the case to trial.

Though vaccine court is part of the federal judiciary, those who oversee cases are called "special masters," not judges. The special master handling McCord's case wrote that the government showed "total disregard" for the family.

Eight years after the claim was filed, the special master ruled Jeffrey was entitled to $7 million in cash and future medical care. It took another three years before the family received a check, as the family and the government haggled over details of how to care for Jeffrey.

As for Shafir, the government never hired him to testify again.

In the first 20 years of vaccine court, government doctors recommended compensation up front in 18 percent of non-autism cases. From 2008 through 2012 — the most recent data the government would release under a Freedom of Information Act request — they recommended compensation in just 5 percent of claims.

What changed?

One important factor was a growing fear that concessions could erode the public's confidence in vaccine safety. Vaccine skeptics are a resilient and effective minority. Vaccination rates have dropped in some affluent, coastal cities — but also across other regions, including areas of the upper Midwest.

Seven former federal officials acknowledged in interviews what one called a "large concern" that vaccine court cases could reduce vaccination rates. One called it "part of the daily work."

Never was this threat greater than the 5,640 cases claiming that vaccines caused autism.

On March 6, 2008, the parents of 7-year-old Hannah Poling revealed that the government had agreed to compensate their claim. Though the government never conceded that a vaccine caused Hannah's autism, that was the implication during a family news conference highlighted on cable TV and the evening news.

That day, the doctor who oversaw the medical analysis of claims cited the Poling case in defending the government's wariness to pay out.

"There is this other side to compensation that we have to worry about," Dr. Geoffrey Evans told a commission that advises the program, referring to parents who might resist vaccinating if they conclude payouts mean shots are unsafe. "It's not going to be long before there's going to be public health consequences."

Couple creates wooden bird art

MARTHA REPLIN DRANGE
Traverse City Record-Eagle

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — Kevin Cragg started lathe-turning in high school shop class.

Now he uses the same lathe he learned on to produce wooden birds with the look of polished folk art.

Cragg and his wife, Beth, own Junction Trade, an Etsy shop that took flight in 2013 after Kevin lost his business management job, the Traverse City Record-Eagle reported.

"We've always been bird lovers and loved working with wood and just have always worked really well together on projects that we've done," said Beth Cragg, 47, adding that the couple built two houses together and renovated a third. "So he did not go back to work. We decided we just wanted to have the flexibility to work from home, use our creativity. We wanted to use our own talent to live off."

The Michigan natives moved from Minnesota to Traverse City 16 years ago to be closer to family. They created their first birds for family reunion "auctions," in which family members bring and bid on items to raise money for charity.

"Originally we had seen some similar online someone had created from recycled materials," said Beth Cragg, who has a background in graphic design and photography. "We use 50 or more different exotic and local woods. We wanted to try segmenting."

With just one older child left at home, the couple decided to turn their house and garage into a shop, using the old lathe Kevin Cragg's father rescued from the high school. Then they established an online store with a variety of turned items including what they call their "designer birds" — birds that don't have a particular purpose. They followed up with a handful of fall craft shows and used customer feedback to refine their art.

"We could see the birds were popular so we said let's forget the other stuff and just do the birds," Kevin Cragg said. "Even though it's been not even a year, we can't believe how far they've come. In the beginning they were cute and had personality and people loved them, but now they're more detailed."

They're also designed with a function in mind.

"Often people would say, 'Are these salt and pepper shakers?' so early this year the birds evolved into ceiling fan pulls, wine bottle stoppers, magnets, ornaments and keychain charms," Beth Cragg said.

The plump birds are species all their own, each with its own character created by drilled eyes, gently tapered dowel beaks and segmented woods of different grains and colors.

"How they're segmented creates faces or wings," Beth Cragg said. "People like to see the different personalities."

The couple stock up on several kinds of wood, including "stacks and stacks" of American walnut Kevin Cragg's mother bought at a garage sale in Florida and his brother hauled to Traverse City. Favorites are spalted maple, bloodwood, Australian cypress and chenechen.

All are left in their natural color — from black to yellow to rose — and finished with three coats of spray-on lacquer.

"What most people see is a contrast in color," said Kevin Cragg, 52. "They're surprised there's wood that color. They can't believe we haven't dyed or stained or painted it."

The couple made their Denny's Museum Center debut at the recent Holiday Art Fair, where the birds attracted everyone from woodworking men to women on a gift-buying mission.

"They sold a lot," said museum store manager Terry Tarnow, who introduces several new artists at the popular fair each year.

Now the couple are preparing for their biggest show yet: the One of a Kind Show and Sale in Chicago, Dec. 4-7, where an estimated 65,000 visitors will shop for handmade items from more than 600 artists.

"Gearing up for this, Kevin tries to turn 12 to 14 birds a day," said Beth Cragg, who does the finish work. "We hope to have 1,000 pieces ready for that show."

DIVORCE

Advice to help you get through the difficult times

Have you tried everything?

Because divorce usually leads to a painful mourning period for any children involved, it is recommended that parents ensure their children have access to any resources that might better help them make the transition, such as seeing a counsellor or confiding in a trusted member of the extended family.

It is a good idea to try and save the relationship before resorting to divorce.

Gibson, voiced concern over this change.

"Why would you want to take that out?" she said. "I'd prefer to not have that changed."

Council member Leon Peron added the township felt the 416.3 acres was very important to include.

"That's the part that is in Charlevoix Township and the rest of it is in Norwood Township," he said.

Before voting on the final resolution, the council voted on whether to leave in the language specifying the 416.3 acres.

Council members Kurtz, Shane Cole and Bill Supernaw voted to take out the 416.3 acres. Gibson, Porter and Peron voted to keep the 416.3 acres in the resolution. Newly sworn-in mayor, Gahe Campbell, broke the tie to keep the 416.3 in the resolution.

Gibson said she felt the amendment Kurtz created was very irresponsible.

Kurtz said he campaigned on the idea that they should respectfully consider all ideas, even ones people don't like. Passing a resolution against something that hasn't been proposed yet seems contrary to that ideal, he added.

"However, if the words about the acreage were removed then it would not be an 'anti-swap' resolution. It would, instead, be a resolution that tells the State of Michigan how much we value the North Entrance along with the forest and wildlife habitat in the northern part of the park — a resolution that is not contrary to the 'respectfully consider' ideal that I campaigned on and that the citizens seemed to support by electing me," he said.

After his proposed change to the resolution was considered and rejected, Kurtz still felt it was important to support the original resolution so the council would act as a united Charlevoix.

"I don't think this should have been a big deal. At this point I have only been to two meetings, but I am really enjoying working with the other council members. I believe we are already working well together for a more positive and united Charlevoix," he said.

Charlevoix coach Audra Randall watches her team from the sidelines during the Rayders' sweep of Gwinn in a regional semifinal Nov. 12 at Inland Lakes High School.

Rayders defeat Gwinn before falling in regional final

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 • jgensterblum@schurz.com

INDIAN RIVER — Before its regional semifinal match against Gwinn Nov. 12 at Inland Lakes, Charlevoix coach Audra Randall was worried about how her team would react to a large and loud crowd pulling for the Modeltowners.

Rather than psyching out the Rayders, however, that crowd fueled Charlevoix's competitive fire.

The Rayders came out on fire, jumping out to an 11-0 lead in the first set and rolling to victory, setting the tone for a 25-8, 25-21, 25-12 sweep that would give Charlevoix its first regional final berth since 2011.

It was at the regional final where the Rayders' season came to an end, as Charlevoix lost 25-14, 25-20, 24-26, 27-25 to Calumet.

Regional semifinal vs. Gwinn

No player on the court seemed more fired up by the crowd than Charlevoix senior Maddie Boss, who dominated the first set with 10 kills on the way to a career-high 31 for the night, to go with 12 digs.

"In a weird way I felt like I was feeding off the noise of (Gwinn's) crowd as much as they were," Boss said. "Seeing how pumped up they were for their team really got me going too, and made me want to go out there and just kill it on the court."

The Modeltowners had no answer for Boss and teammates Emily Zabawa and Gloria Greene offensively throughout the match.

Zabawa, a junior, finished with six kills and five digs, and Greene, a senior, chipped in five kills to go with 12 digs, three aces and two blocks.

"We really tried to work the lines tonight, because while watching film we noticed that Gwinn will leave that area of the court open sometimes," Zabawa said. "We strategize like that for every opponent, trying to figure out the best way to attack, and it really helps us do well."

As well as Charlevoix played offensively, the Rayders were at their best on the night when its defense was playing at a high level too.

Especially in the first and third set, the Rayders neutralized Gwinn's offense by digging out almost every kill attempt and making it difficult for the Modeltowners to create points and get on runs.

"Our team did a fabulous job defensively," Randall said. "We really watched a lot of film on Gwinn so we could get an idea of what kind of balls they might send at us, and where."

"Give them credit, they did a good job of moving their attack around and keeping us from getting comfortable, but I thought we were able to adjust to that well."

Libero Alexis Tribfeiner finished with 14 digs to lead the Rayders defensively, and Yogi Hang chipped in nine digs for Charlevoix, which places a serious emphasis on defense in practice, Boss said.

"We work on defense a lot in practice, and coach (Randall) is always talking about how if a ball is on our side of the court, she wanted to see us going after it, hustling and working to keep it alive," Boss said. "I thought we did an awesome job of that tonight."

Olivia Storm initiated the offense for Charlevoix, with 37 assists, and had two big service runs in the match.

The first was the 11-point one to start the match, and the second came with the Rayders struggling and trailing 19-18 in the second set.

Storm reeled off five consecutive service points to help Charlevoix to a 23-19 lead that would hold the rest of the way.

Regional final vs. Calumet

Despite trailing 2-1 heading into the fourth set, Charlevoix built a 24-22 lead and was one point away from sending the match to a winner-take-all fifth set.

But Calumet was not to be denied, closing with four kills in the final six points

Charlevoix's Amber Way signs to run at Michigan State

DREW KOCHANNY

CHARLEVOIX — Nothing standing in the "Way."

Four years ago when Charlevoix senior Amber Way was beginning high school, few could imagine the cross country and track career that would follow, one filled with state finals and record breaking performances.

Not even Way herself.

"I had no idea I'd be where I am today as an incoming freshman," she said. "I just wanted to get a little better and kind of learn a little bit more, but I never knew I'd learn as much as I have already and I still have a long ways to go."

On Friday in the Charlevoix High School gym, the hard work and dedication to her craft paid off for Way, as she signed a National Letter of Intent to run cross country for Michigan State University next fall.

Surrounded by family, friends and a host of Charlevoix High School personnel, Way put ink to paper toward her new school, but won't soon forget the one she's still got.

"It feels amazing, I have an amazing coach, an amazing team," she said.

"They've always been there for me, pushing me, so I couldn't have done it without them."

Way's place in both cross country and track is largely an individual position, but it's been her team that's kept her going.

She holds numerous school records in both track and cross, as well as records on the state level, making the Division 3 track and field state finals every year of her career thus far.

As a sophomore in 2013, Way set the Division 3 record in the 3200 meter run, running a time of 10:48.48, breaking the previous mark of 10:57.16.

The record would stand for just one season, until Way herself broke it again this past season, running a time of 10:35.33.

In cross country, Way has earned back-to-back Division 3 runner-up finishes, being edged out of first place this season by just two tenths of a second.

Even with a pair of second place finishes, Way holds two of the top 10 times all-time in the Division 3 state finals.

Harbor Springs senior John Bailey gave the Rams quite a bit to celebrate late in the season, as Harbor knocked off rival Charlevoix for a district championship on the Rayders home field.

Versatility, Leadership:

John Bailey plays to his strengths to earn Northern Michigan Review Boys Soccer Player of the Year

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 - jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

HARBOR SPRINGS — Midway through the 2014 boys soccer season, Harbor Springs soccer coach Aaron Riley knew his defense was struggling, and knew that senior John Bailey was the man to fix it.

The only problem was that Bailey, a forward on the team, was nearing a 100-goal milestone that he had set as a personal goal for himself.

Riley wasn't sure if he'd be willing to give up that goal, but when he broached the subject with Bailey, the senior agreed to the move without a moment's hesitation.

"When you've had a personal goal for that long, it's tough to give it up," Riley said. "But John, being the captain that he is, realized right away that he could help the team win by playing on the back line."

"He was willing to sacrifice any amount of individual glory to see the team succeed."

Bailey moved wherever he was needed without complaint for Harbor Springs this season, and excelled wherever he went. That versatility and willingness to do what it took to help his team is the main reason the Northern Michigan Review has selected Bailey as the boys' soccer player of the year for its coverage area.

As a forward, Bailey led the team with 13 goals and six assists, and as a defender, he often drew the responsibility of marking the opponent's best player.

While a defender and in short stints as a midfielder as well, Bailey also proved to be a stabilizing force as a leader for the Rams, organizing the team's formation and making sure his teammates were in the right places to be most effective.

"Wherever we put him, he did everything you could ask for," Riley said. "He was really the key guy in holding our formation together and making sure our backline was where it needed to be, and he did a great job."

Although frequently changing positions makes it hard for most players to feel comfortable, Bailey had no problems making the adjustments.

"Ever since I started playing soccer, I've always moved around a lot and played different positions based on what my team needed," Bailey said. "That's what I'm used to, so it wasn't really a big change to be moving around a lot this year."

While working mostly from midfield and on defense, Harbor Springs senior John Bailey still managed to boot in 13 goals for the Rams this season.

Beyond his versatility, Bailey also excelled as a leader for the Rams. As one of two seniors on a team whose starting lineup included several freshmen and sophomores, Bailey's varsity experience proved instrumental in helping the team mature and get better over the course of the season.

"The biggest thing was just developing confidence," Bailey said. "All of these guys have played club soccer for a long time, and they've been in high level matches before, so they came in prepared."

"We just had to show them that varsity soccer really wasn't any faster or more skill-intensive than what they've already been playing, and once we did that, we really took off as a team."

The Rams improved considerably down the stretch, culminating in a district run that included a 2-1 upset of rival Charlevoix in the district final to give Harbor Springs its first title since 2005.

"That district is something I'll never forget," Bailey said. "Especially the final, to play so well and beat Charlevoix when they'd beaten us twice earlier in the season was a great moment for our entire team."

Bailey, a 4.0 student at Harbor Springs High School and a valedictorian candidate is hoping to go into mechanical engineering once he graduates this fall, likely at Michigan Tech University.

While the Huskies don't have a varsity soccer program, Bailey said he'll continue to play the sport.

"Whether it's a club team, or an intramural team, or just a local league, I'll find a way to play," Bailey said. "It's something I love too much to stop."

ing Way, every step of her journey.

"As a freshman I could see everything she could be four years down the road, but she had to want it," said Plude. "Because many times girls will get two or three years in and don't see progress, or there's a stall out or body changes, whatever, she went through the whole thing and stuck to the plan."

Many knew the plan for Way after high school had to be running in college, however where that would be, nobody knew, not even Way herself.

The Spartans, though, were always on the radar for Way.

"Something's always kind of been there with Michigan State. I honestly don't really know," she said. "I felt like I needed look at Michigan State. So when I did I absolutely fell in love with it. They've got the equestrian center, where I want to study at eventually."

Led by Director of Cross Country Walt Drenth, the Spartans Way will soon join have found a large amount of success on the trails this season.

Michigan State recently pulled in a 2014 women's Big Ten Championship, a 2014 Regional Championship and will soon compete in the NCAA Championship.

"They had just an amazing team, not just national wise, but the girls are so amazing," said Way. "I get along so well with them, especially coach Drenth, so in the end I knew that's where I wanted to be."

The connection between East Lansing and Charlevoix will continue with Way, but it was one that started with Drenth, a 1977 Charlevoix graduate. Way will also join sophomore Charlevoix graduate Molly Jeakle on the team.

For Plude Way's impact on the sport over her years far extends the records she's set, blazing a trail in a different way.

"I think she brought a lot of positive to cross country," said Plude. "Up in Northern Michigan, when I started coaching 22 years ago, it wasn't real cool to be a female athlete. Maybe in basketball, but in cross country, no. And I think it's become cool."

Those who have watched the sport over the years in Northern Michigan will most likely come to find it weird to not see Way leading the pack and crossing the finish line first, but none more so than Plude, who most of all will miss having Way around the team.

"Her whole enthusiasm, she's comfortable with who she is and she's not trying to be anyone that she isn't. She's always been Amber," Plude said. "Through any up and down, her disposition hasn't changed."

The ups have certainly outweighed the downs over the years, with it often appearing too easy for Way, on the course or the track.

"I always knew it could have been harder, but I just have to find little ways that I can push myself in times where it's easy or times where I don't have a lot of competition pushing me," she said. "I just have to find ways to push myself through those times."

A mentality that should lead her to more greatness at the next level.

DREW KOCHANNY/COURIER

Charlevoix senior Amber Way will join Charlevoix native and 1977 graduate, Walt Drenth, at Michigan State, where Drenth is the director of cross country.

to seize the advantage, and a last-gasp effort by the Rayders came up just short in the 27-25 match clinching defeat.

"We did have fight, and we kept fighting all match," Randall said. "We played well overall, and our defense really picked up in the last two sets, which helped us to be right in it."

"We had our opportunities, but it just didn't work out for us tonight."

The Rayders got off to a rough start, caught off guard by a Calumet offense that spread the ball around and hit Charlevoix with everything but the kitchen sink in terms of offensive tactics in the first set.

JAMES GENSTERBLUM/NEWS-REVIEW

Charlevoix's Becca Moon (11) and Gloria Greene (6) go for a block on Calumet's Carlissa Pavolich (3) during the Rayders' four-set loss to the Copper Kings in the regional final Thursday at Inland Lakes High School.

"We came out a little surprised at the quickness and variety of their offense, and we had to adjust to that," Randall said. "It took us two sets to figure it out, and by that point we had a lot of work to do to get back in it."

Particularly troublesome for the Rayders was the Copper Kings' skill at using quick sets, or "quicks," to get kill attempts off before Charlevoix could set up its blocks.

"To counter what they were doing, the timing on our blocks had to change, and our readiness in the back row had to change as well," Randall said. "Our defenders are taught to cover a certain area based on where the block's going to be, and when the block's not getting there on time it puts extra pressure on the back row to cover more of the court."

Despite the problems posed for Charlevoix's defense, the Rayders crept closer in the second set, then seized control in the third, jumping out to a 17-11 lead and putting themselves firmly back in the match.

Calumet didn't make things easy for the Rayders, mounting a big push in the third set behind the serving of senior Lexie Rowe to nearly end the match then and there.

Rowe and her booming serves would prove to be a thorn in Charlevoix's side all night long, and the senior outside hitter would finish with six aces.

"(Rowe) did a great job for them, pulling them back in a couple of different sets," Randall said. "Obviously she was really big for them down the stretch in the last set."

In the fourth set, Charlevoix rallied one more time, overcoming a 20-17 deficit to gu up 24-22 and a point away from extending the match before Calumet came back to take the victory.

Boss saved one of her best performances for her last, finishing with 28 kills and 25 digs to lead the Rayders in both categories, and giving Charlevoix a chance late in the fourth set with two high kills in the final seven points.

Greene also ended her

Charlevoix career with a strong night, finishing with eight kills, 14 digs, two aces and four blocks. Trihelfner added two aces and 16 digs, and Storm chipped in 41 assists, three kills, three blocks and 14 digs.

Zahawa finished with eight kills and two blocks as well for Charlevoix, and Hang added two aces and 15 digs.

The Rayders finish the season 41-8-5, having won their first district championship since 2011.

"I've got no regrets with this group; they played their hearts out," Randall said. "They just kept growing and growing throughout the year, and it seemed like every match they were finding a new peak and continuing to get better."

While the Rayders return key rotation players in juniors Zabawa, Hang and Hannah Zipp, and sophomore Becca Moon, Charlevoix will have to find a way to replace its decorated core of senior four-year players next season.

"I've worked with this group of seniors since seventh grade, and they've been huge for this program," Randall said. "We've got some very high shoes to fill next year, and while I'm confident we'll find girls who will step up, it's going to be tough to replace what we're losing."

FREEDOM DAILY
SINCE 1776

Since the founding of our nation, the role of newspapers in our democracy has been crystal clear. We have been, and will continue to be, the eyes and ears of the American people. After all, the right of free speech is meaningless if no one knows what's really going on. That's why more than 100 million Americans depend on their hometown newspapers daily and why today's newsrooms are staffed by dedicated, highly trained, experienced journalists who report the news in print and on air.

Rec area to remain public

No plans to privatize Mount McSaubia, but rates go up

MATT MMKUS
(231) 439-9394 • mmikus@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Mount McSaubia Recreation Area will remain a public entity under the city's control, but the new recreation director plans to run the hill more efficiently.

Tom Kemoveck, hired by the city as the new recreation director this summer, said he worked closely with current employees to make some changes in efficiency for the hill.

New rates for use and rentals were approved by the city council Nov. 3.

Kemoveck, a former athletic director for Ferris State University, said they looked at both the rates to increase revenues, and decrease expenses. Staff cuts resulted in a saving of about $7,000 in wages.

The goal when making cuts wasn't to generate money for the city, he added.

Char-em school enrollment sliding down, but may stabilize

Char-Em Intermediate School District enrollment numbers

(231) 439-9394 • mmikus@petoskeynews.com

Enrollments for schools throughout the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District have been on the gradual decline since the harsh economic conditions from the 2008 financial crisis. But some school districts feel that the enrollment numbers are beginning to stabilize.

According to data collected from state and local resources, headcount enrollment throughout ISD has dropped from 10,326 in 2008-09 school year students to about 9,366 students from this year's headcount day in October.

It's a trend that's happening statewide, and educators believe it's caused by a number of different factors.

Charlevoix-Emmet ISD Superintendent Rick Diebold said the affect of the economy has caused schools in Michigan to see a constant slow drain of students. Coupled with the fact that families now tend to have fewer children, and there are fewer students to fill seats in the class.

"While the population of the region has actually grown," Diebold said. "The number of people relocating between 25-45 in the area are fewer. That translates into families, and fewer children in the region. Families also tend to be smaller

Linda Adams to be interim director of library

ANNE KELLY
Special to the Courier

Linda A. Adams, adult services supervisor/librarian at the Charlevoix Public Library has been named interim director.

Valerie Meyerson, who recently resigned as Charlevoix's library director to assume a similar role at the Petoskey District Library, will be vacating her post on Jan. 1.

A special board meeting of the Charlevoix Public Library Board of Trustees was called on Sunday, to discuss the position of interim director. The decision to offer Adams the job was met with unanimous approval by the board.

Adams had been previously approached and interviewed with the position in mind, after Meyerson's resignation was served and accepted. By means of a confidential survey, the 14 member staff was also offered the opportunity to supply their input regarding the evaluation of the workings of the library and their expectations for a new director going forward. They responded to a number of questions and in this way were able to share their ideas of the qualities they would like to see in a new director. Their input was used in the board's selection of Adams as Meyerson's interim replacement.

Adams, who was attending a conference out of town, was reached by phone after the trustees' meeting and accepted the $50,000/year interim position, according to board president, Mary Ann Chew.

"She was very excited about the decision and is anxious to start her new role as interim director," Chew said.

She will be assisting Meyerson until Jan. 1, receiving on the job training during the transition.

Adams has a bachelor of arts degree in consumer economics from Central Michigan University (1981) and a master of library and information science from the University of Wisconsin (2004). She received her Library of Michigan Librarian's Permanent Professional Certificate in 2009.

The board's approval was based on their respect for Adams' contributions to the library over her 10 year tenure on staff.

Chew said, "Actually, our first introduction to Linda was when we hired her to draft the first strategic plan for our library in 2004. At that time, she was working on her master's degree in library science. She has worked in her present position, as adult services supervisor/librarian since 2005, currently managing the adult department which includes three librarians and one support staff member. Her experience includes creating and managing budgets for

Bolt, Beeby to feature work in new exhibit

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 439-9397 • jspence@petoskeynews.com

Northern Michigan has left an impression on Russ Bolt and Betty Beeby.

The two artists will each feature about 40 paintings in a new art exhibit.

"Betty Beeby and Russell Bolt: Masters of the Brush" exhibition is open and will run through Saturday, Dec. 20, at the Crooked Tree Arts Center in Petoskey.

Beeby of Eastport said she began an art career after encouragement from her art teacher at Cass Technical High School in Detroit. The teacher pushed Beeby to receive the Booth Scholarship to study art at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Since then she's had many art related opportunities. She was an illustrator for Time Life magazine and creator for CBS television's Captain Kangaroo.

She has also illustrated books including, "Whistle Up the Bay by Nancy." Beeby now lives in a "nice old home" on Torch Lake which provides much of her current inspiration.

"I've been painting a lot of winter scenes," she said. "Those scenes aren't overdone quite yet."

Beeby continues to paint,

Russ Bolt displays one of his paintings.

although she said it's nothing like she used to do. What Beeby loves most about the creative process is using her strengths as an observer.

"I'm a very observant person," she said. "Other people don't see what I do, which is wonderful. It keeps me excited."

Bolt also continues to work every day at the 110-year-old Grange Hall in Charlevoix. Work created in 1951 to the present will be on display at the show.

"It represents my impressions of Northern Michigan," he said. "It consists of several areas of concentration; family, friends, boats, farms and flags."

Bolt said his style has evolved over the years from a more strict illustrative approach, to a more colorful, abstract, yet realistic style.

He said he's always been interested in art and began in elementary school when he illustrated the Christmas and Easter newsletter pages. Bolt graduated from the Cleveland Institute of Art. He also studied in Detroit at Wayne State University, College for Creative Studies and Pewabic Pottery.

His favorite piece was created during his time as an art student in Ohio. The piece depicts his father's gas station in Ohio in 1951. He worked at the station while he was an art student. It brings back memories of being with his father and their relationship growing while they worked together.

He continued his artwork in the United States Marine Corps in 1951 as Marine Corps artist.

"After I was in the Marines I married the love of my life, Sue," he said. "On Nov. 24 we will have been married 60 years."

Before they moved to Charlevoix he worked for General Motors as an interior designer for auto show cars.

After 21 years as a designer he quit to focus on their art and studio. He said he loves the contrast of the area to the city.

"When you live in the city you don't notice things like the sky," he said. "Up here you notice the changes in color."

Lately his work has focused on rural landscapes, boats and barns. "They've always fascinated me," he said. Bolt said he doesn't anticipate slowing down any time soon.

"I'm still doing artwork. I hope I can buy more time," he said.

Hear for the Holidays!

ReSound LiNX™

Enjoy conversation with your friends and family this holiday season. ReSound LiNX™ is the world's smallest wireless hearing system with the ability to connect with today's technology. Utilizing surround sound, it was designed to give you the most natural sound experience by adjusting both aids simultaneously to help you hear better in almost any setting. Let Petoskey Ear, Nose and Throat put you back in the picture this holiday season.

5 ways to better hearing this holiday season:

1. Admit that your hearing isn't what it used to be. Most people wait too long before solving their hearing problems, often an average of 5-7 years. It is time to start enjoying the benefits of improved hearing!
2. Keep a positive attitude while you seek help. There are many different hearing aid options. Keeping a positive attitude through the process will help you and the best hearing solution that fits your needs.
3. Learn all you can about your hearing problem. As you learn the facts about your hearing loss, you are better able to communicate your hearing needs to your audiologist.
4. Set realistic expectations. Hearing aids are designed to improve your hearing and may not be able to create a hearing experience you had prior to hearing loss. Communicate your expectations and set realistic goals with your audiologists.
5. Practice, time and patience yield success. Adjusting to anything new takes time. It's no different with hearing aids. Once you feel and hear the benefits the rewards are more than worth it.

New options may help TV viewers 'cut the cord' on cable companies

The Holland Sentinel, Oct. 26.

With a reputation for poor service, limited choices and a perverse pricing structure that punishes loyal customers, the cable company is the business Americans love to hate. Now some new developments are threatening to overturn the business model that has given the cable companies near monopolistic power for decades. But consumers can't celebrate yet.

One potentially big development came earlier this month when the premium channel HBO announced it would start offering its shows by subscription over the Internet next year. Shortly thereafter, CBS, the epitome of traditional broadcast TV, said it would provide its programs over the Web for $6 a month. If more content providers follow the lead of HBO and CBS, it will threaten the pay-TV industry's long-standing refusal to give customers the "a la carte" service they want. Consumers have been forced to accept packages with dozens of channels they may never watch to get the handful they actually want. HBO's plans are particularly threatening to the cable industry because it's one of the few channels (along with ESPN) that many people buy cable packages specifically to get. If they can watch HBO for, say, $20 a month (the actual pricing has not been set yet), they may no longer be willing to spend three or four times that much for a high-end TV package.

The recent developments may only accelerate an ongoing trend of consumers, particularly younger ones, "cutting the cord" — the number of consumers who subscribe to cable, satellite or fiber TV services fell by a quarter of a million in 2013 according to the research firm SNL Kagan. Today you can stream movies and original programs from Netflix and watch TV shows online on Hulu, and the number of such services is steadily increasing. (Then there are the frugal few who are rediscovering they can watch TV the way their parents did — with an antenna, for free.)

So does this spell the end of the cable industry monster? Probably not. The reality is that for most people the company you get your TV service through is also the one that connects you to the Internet, and the money (and monopolistic power) they may lose in one business they can make up by raising prices in the other. By manipulating streaming speeds, the big telecom companies could even deny you some of the options now available or soon to come on the market. Earlier this year, Netflix complained that some of its customers were having trouble getting its streaming service through some Internet providers — a problem only solved when Netflix agreed to pay those companies for better connections.

The changing landscape makes it even more important for the Federal Communications Commission to adopt strong "net neutrality" rules that guarantee that broadband companies cannot discriminate against any content providers or offer any entity preferential service. Only if there's a truly level playing field can consumers take advantage of all the new alternatives to the old cable colossus.

LOOKING BACK...

CHARLEVOIX — In 1895, Robert Elston, who three years later would build a large hotel downtown where Oleson's is today and remembered by many as the Lakeview, tried his hand at breaking into the burgeoning automobile industry. As the Charlevoix Sentinel newspaper reported on March 14 that year, he "has perfected an electric wagon that has in it the elements of revolution in road transit." The "electric storage battery motor" was said to be "capable of running the wagon nine hours" and "we hope the manufacturing of Elston's Road Wagon will... be a Charlevoix industry" and "... the wagon will, ere long, be heard from."

Elston built his car in the "upper portions" of his spacious residence on West Dixon Avenue where the entry drive of the Weathervane Terrace Inn is now located. It is not known how he got it out, unless it was in sections.

Alas, it was never to be. As the Standard Catalog of American Cars 1805-

1895 Elston Gasoline Vehicle, NAHC

COURTESY OF THE CHARLEVOIX HISTORICAL SOCIETY

1942 put it, "Elston did complete (the car), but never could make it travel farther than around the block before experiencing problems. Elston never did build another car, but turned his talents instead to devising a new type of differential about which history seems to have recorded nothing.

Ellsworth juniors, seniors visit Washington, D.C.

ELLSWORTH — Ellsworth Community School took all junior and senior students on a three-day, two-night government field trip to Washington, D.C. Students and chaperones departed Ellsworth at 12:30 a.m. on a charter bus bound for Bishop International Airport in Flint, Mich. From there, the group flew to Baltimore and boarded an Amtrak train for Union Station, Washington, D.C. While in Washington, the group toured the White House, U.S. Capitol Building, the Holocaust Museum, National Zoo, Smithsonian Museums of Natural History, American History, and Air and Space, Arlington National Cemetery, and the Iwo Jima Memorial. The students also participated in a night tour of several Washington memorials: World War II, Korean War, Martin Luther King Jr., FDR, and Jefferson.

At Arlington National Cemetery, four students were honored with taking part in the official wreath laying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Voice of Democracy winners Hannah Heard, Winter Rameyn, Luke Seaney and Megan Drenth were chosen to represent Ellsworth Community School as official ambassadors. Video of the ceremony can be viewed on the school website on Facebook page.

In addition to visiting museums and memorials, many students experienced a vast array of firsts. From first airplane flights and subway rides to first foods such as calamari and sushi, the trip provided students with opportunities to make memories that will last a lifetime.

Ragamuffin Theatre and Company presents 'Annie Jr.'

Ragamuffin Theatre and Company is celebrating Thanksgiving weekend in musical style with a presentation of "Annie Jr." at the Charlevoix High School auditorium from Nov. 29 through Dec. 1.

The full cast, ages 6-76, who hail from Charlevoix, Ellsworth and East Jordan, have put together a family-friendly show featuring a performance by Toby, a golden-doodle, owned by cast member Grace Balasz.

"We are excited to bring Annie back to the stage after having done it several years ago," says actor Bethany Baumann, who plays Grace Ferrell in this year's show. "Especially since they have remade the movie and are releasing it this December."

Director Kathleen Whitaker made a point of trying to involve students from area schools including Northwest Academy, Ellsworth Community and St. Mary's because these students don't often get the chance (because of cost) to use the auditorium for their artistic presentations.

"I especially wanted to invite singers, actors and dancers from all over our area so that they could display their talent in a fun and non-competitive environment," she said.

Evening show admissions are $10 each for adults and $8 each for senior and students. Daytime showings are $8 each for adults and $6 each for seniors and students.

Registration open for 2015 Northern Michigan Home Show

The Home Builders Association of Northern Michigan recently announced that registration for the 2015 Northern Michigan Regional Home Show is now open.

The home show, which is entering its 39th year, is the official home show for the building industry in Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet and Otsego counties and draws attendees from across the state of Michigan. Home Builders Association members are represented in many of the display booths but participation is open to any business that is in the building industry.

Patrice Carlson of DWS Builders and Doug Byron of Home Depot, both from Petoskey, will serve as this year's co-chairpersons.

"The home show is always such an exciting event," Carlson said. "We have a great committee and some terrific new plans for this year's show. We are all really looking forward to it."

This year's show will be on March 13 and 14, and will again be hosted by North Central Michigan College in Petoskey. Registration information can be found by visiting the Home Builders Association website at www.HBANorthern-michigan.org or by calling the HBA office at (231) 348-9770.

The Home Builders Association of Northern Michigan includes builders, remodelers, tradesmen, suppliers and affiliated businesses in Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Otsego and Emmet counties. In addition to providing membership support, the primary goals of the association's administration is to promote professional development, offer regulatory and legislative support, and act as administrative liaison between the local members and their state and national level industry groups, the Home Builders Association of Michigan and the National Association of Home Builders.

Upper Michigan agency uses technology in search and rescue

(Escanaba)

ESCANABA, Mich. — Tracking technology is now available to search and rescue personnel to help find residents who wander due to cognitive or neurological disorders such as Alzheimer's Disease, autism and Down Syndrome.

The Delta County Sheriff's Office purchased the tracking gear from Project Lifesaver International, which uses technology to locate an individual who wanders and is equipped with a radio transmitter wristband, according to the Daily Press of Escanaba (<http://bit.ly/1xz4ES>).

Tate Thompson, director of the Delta County Search and Rescue Team, attended the Train the Trainer course last week offered in Escanaba by Project Lifesaver International. Thompson is now certified to teach other rescuers and family members of program participants about the tracking program.

"When needed, surrounding participating counties can also use their equipment to help us find our people," said Thompson, explaining there are both vehicle-mounted and hand-held tracking units available.

Thompson was trained by St. Croix County Deputy Neil Johnson from Hudson, Wis., who is an approved instructor with Project Lifesaver International. The program started in 1999 at the Search and Rescue Company of the Chesapeake Sheriff's Office in Virginia, said Johnson.

"Project Lifesaver is a program for at-risk wanderers, people who don't realize they need help or can't ask for help," he explained.

When the time comes for enrollment, the appropriate residents and caregivers will be required to complete documentation and obtain some training. Residents enrolled in the program will wear a small personal radio transmitter around the wrist or ankle that emits an individualized tracking frequency signal. If an enrolled resident goes missing, the caregiver would notify 9-1-1. Trained emergency response teams would go to the wanderer's area and use a directional antenna tracking device to connect with the individual's specific frequency.

Most individuals who wander are found within a few miles from home, said Johnson. With the Project Lifesaver technology, search times are drastically reduced from hours and days to minutes. Recovery times for individuals on the Project Lifesaver program can average about 30 minutes — 95 percent less than standard operations.

The program is offered locally through the generosity of county residents, social services organizations, businesses and foundations such as the Walmart Foundation among many other financial contributors.

Delta County Sheriff Ed Oswald said the sheriff's department has discussed bringing this technology to the county for a while.

"Over the last year, (recently) retired Sheriff Gary Bailew and I made searching for funds to pay for the program our top priority under special operations projects. Because of the great community we live in, $10,000 was received in about seven months. We are happy that Project Lifesaver will be fully operational by January 2015 and we will inform the community when the program is ready to accept enrollments."

A few jurisdictions in the Upper Peninsula offer Project Lifesaver or a similar lifesaving tracking program. Those agencies are the sheriff's offices in Menominee, Alger and Marquette counties. Tracking technology in these communities has been credited for quickly and safely locating several residents who have wandered including children and adults.

Partners in the Delta County Project Lifesaver program include the Retired Senior Volunteer Program at the Menominee-Delta-Schoolcraft Community Action Agency, Perspectives Adult Day Care, and the Delta County Search and Rescue Team.

Scholarships offered for manufacturing tech students

Northern Lakes Economic Alliance announced the availability of two $500 scholarships; one is for a college student and one is for a high school student who will enroll in manufacturing technology and/or computer numeric control (CNC) classes through North Central Michigan College in the 2015 winter semester.

Through a donation from Triune Specialty Trailer, a Madison Heights, Mich., manufacturer of NCMC's Fab

Lab, students will be able to apply for scholarships to pay for their tuition in the CNC program.

The new CNC classes offer instruction as they utilize the NCMC's new mobile Fab Lab. The Fab Lab has a CNC mill, CNC lathe, computer aided design (CAD) software and 12 computer stations. College classes are offered at the NCMC Petoskey campus. But the mobile lab also visits high schools in Central Lake, East Jordan and Boyne City and provides high school students CNC classes.

While high school students receive college credit, the $500 scholarship will be awarded to the school whose student is named as scholarship recipient because the school already pays for the class and the student already does not incur any institutional costs.

The classes prepare students for high-tech CNC operator and programmer jobs that are available throughout Northern Michigan. In the fall of 2015, the program will be expanded to additional high schools in Northern Michigan.

Scholarship applications must be received by Dec. 15, and the scholarship awards will be applied to CNC classes that begin in January 2015.

To apply or for additional information, contact Tom Erhart at Northern Lakes Economic Alliance at (231) 582-6482 or email tom@northernlakes.net.

Employment rising

Economists predict continued Michigan job growth

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's economy will continue to improve over the next two years after five years of steady job growth, University of Michigan economists said Friday in an annual forecast.

In their November outlook, George Fulton, Joan Crary and Donald Grimes predicted that the state will add a total of more than 132,000 jobs in 2015 and 2016. That would mean that by the end of 2016, the state would have added nearly 463,000 jobs since the summer of 2009.

Fulton, the director of the school's Research Seminar in Quantitative Economics, said there are "several positive story lines" when looking at Michigan's economy in addition to job growth. The unemployment rate is down and the auto industry's sales have been strong.

"With the court's approval of Detroit's plan for the adjustment of its debts, the city is about to exit bankruptcy, creating excitement about a fresh start for Michigan's largest city," Fulton said in a statement. "And three major credit-rating agencies have upgraded Michigan's outlook in the past few years."

"What all of this suggests is that the Michigan economy has gone some distance from the dire straits it was in five years ago, at least overall, but there is still a fair way to go."

Earlier this week, the state reported that Michigan's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate dropped to its lowest level in more than six years. October's jobless rate fell 0.1 points to 7.1 percent. That's down from 8.6 percent in October 2013 and is the lowest since March 2008.

The University of Michigan economists predicted that the state's unemployment rate will be 6.7 percent at the end of next year and 6.3 percent at the end of 2016.

The economists predict employment gains of 59,400 jobs during 2015 and 73,200 jobs during 2016. About 33,000 job gains over the next two years are predicted to be in the professional and business sector, which includes technical services and management of companies.

The trade, transportation and utilities sector will account for 29,000 job gains through 2016. The construction industry will add an estimated 18,000 jobs over the next two years, while manufacturing is expected to gain 12,000 jobs during that time.

Traverse City woman runs race-planning business for participants, community

Traverse City Record-Eagle

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — Running a race parallels running a business. Essentials include a product, customers and a plan to get the two together.

Event planner Lisa Taylor, of Wellness Professionals, LLC, produces the annual Farmland 5K, this year on Dec. 6. Primarily a cross-country running event, the Farmland 5K also attracts pedaling enthusiasts with a biking component, the Traverse City Record-Eagle (<http://bit.ly/1dXVum>) reports.

"To me, this is an entrepreneurial venture," Taylor said.

Like any business, planning an athletic event involves a balance sheet. Income and expenses must fall into line. On the plus side, a running event takes in money from entry fees and sponsors. On the minus side are all the expenses: governmental permits, insurance, timing services, a medical director, course rental fees, food, sound system rental, signage, tent rental and souvenirs such as shirts or hats.

In addition to those expenses, Taylor chose to take charitable donations out of every entry fee and give $2 to the Michigan Land Use Institute and $2 to North Youth Cycling.

The key to making an event generate a profit, or at least break even, is creativity. Something fun, something unique, something memorable, will attract participants. A shining example, Taylor said, is the Icefall Cometh Challenge, held for the 25th consecutive year last weekend. More than 5,000 bicyclists slogged their way through about 29 miles of backwoods trails from Kalkaska to Traverse City. The challenging course, the variable season, the brutal ambience have helped the event draw riders — and entry fees — from near and far, year after year.

"My event is like a small-scale Icefall," Taylor said.

She launched the Farmland 5K in 2012, when 212 people participated. The event drew 361 participants in 2013. Taylor hopes to hit 500 entries this year. Online registration ends Dec. 4 at events.bytepro.net/2014Farmland5K. She purposely set the race date in December to help deliver the message that running is something that can be done in any season. She chose the distance to make the event accessible to most everyone.

"You don't have to be super fit to go 5K," said.

Taylor worked eight years for Munson before breaking off on her own, doing personal health appraisals for the county and other entities. She started Wellness Professionals in 2000. She coaches cross-country and track at Traverse City Central High School.

Coal residue vaults found in Upper Peninsula

The Mining Journal (Marquette)

MARQUETTE — Two concrete vaults used to store tar residue and other impurities from a manufactured gas plant more than 100 years ago were recently found buried underground just north of the Shiras Steam Plant in south Marquette.

Steve Harrington of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality said the vaults and surrounding soil were tested for hazardous material and determined safe.

The plant's manufacturing process involved heating up coal in a vacuum to create a gaseous fuel.

"Typically, these coal gas sites are not hazardous," Harrington told The Mining Journal (<http://bit.ly/1B9IEWy>). "These were not uncommon operations back in that era, back before they had natural gas."

The process involved heating up coal in a vacuum and spraying the coal with a fuel-oil product to increase combustion. The process produced a type of coal gas, which was sucked out and kept in above-ground storage tanks. The tanks could be 60-75 feet across and as tall as two- or three-story buildings, Harington said.

The gas manufacturing process also required below-ground concrete vaults, such as the two found near the Shiras plant, that would capture residue and impurities.

Harrington said most towns made their own gas that was distributed through a system of underground pipes to light street lamps and other light sources.

"In that process they did create a fair amount of residue," Harrington said, which would have been stored in the below-ground vaults.

The property where the vaults were found is owned by Indiana Michigan Power Company, a unit of American Electric Power.

IMPC contracted with Haley & Aldrich construction services to replace culverts in the area when the crews came across the vaults. Harrington said IMPC has entered into a "self-implemented cleanup."

"The property owner is allowed to conduct their own cleanups, which we encourage actually," Harrington said.

He estimated IMPC was spending about $1 million on the project already, which could have been coming out of taxpayers' pockets. Harrington said hazardous waste cleanup projects often involve "orphaned" property, leaving the state to pick up the tab.

"It's not unusual to be cleaned up with taxpayer dollars, so in this case it's fortunate," Harrington said.

than a few years ago."

Only Boyne City and Petoskey have had a higher number of students since 2008. This year's numbers have not yet been audited, and could change once released from the state education department, but Diebold believes the numbers won't change drastically.

Petoskey Superintendent John Scholten said he believes his count might drop below its current count of 3,096 students.

"It's ebbed and flowed over the years, but it stays within that 2,900 range," Scholten said. "This will be my 10th year here, and I've never seen it above 3,000."

The hard economic realities in Northern Michigan are a large part of the enrollment decline.

"A lot of middle class folks who worked in the trades moved on," said Harbor Springs Superintendent Mark Tompkins. "The loss of work in the building trades were pretty significant in the area. That's beginning to come back now."

But many feel that in recent years, the decline in students is starting to slow.

East Jordan's superintendent Matt Stevenson, recalls calling a number of parents around 2008-2009 when he served as the middle school principal, asking where they were headed.

"We got a lot of people telling us about North Carolina and Montana," Stevenson said. "Pennsylvania was another one. They were headed to where the jobs were."

While Harbor Springs schools faced a larger decline than most, down from 1,050 to 828, the district is an out-of-formula school meaning the bulk of their funding comes from non-homestead taxes. Their declining enrollment has less impact on funding directly.

But the economic slowdown still affected the schools' funds through fewer taxpayers in the Harbor Springs area, said Tompkins.

While losing students to relocations has decreased, Pellston Superintendent Monique Dean said current numbers, especially for rural schools, still tend to decrease.

"We're simply graduating more kids than the number of kids we're hiring in for kindergarten," Dean said. "I simply don't think the kids are out there."

FYI:

Headcount vs. Full Time Equivalent

Enrollment numbers are counted two ways, head counts and full time equivalents, or FTE.

Head counts provide a specific count of students using a school's services. For example, whether a student goes to one school, or spends one hour at one district and the rest of the time homeschooled or at another district, each student is counted as one student.

FTE measures the amount of time a student is within the school on average. The home-schooled student, who may attend a school district for an extra-curricular, or take an online class with a school district, can count as a fraction of a student. This lets the state pay a district for the amount of time a student uses its facility, and reduces student duplication.

Numbers in this story reflect head counts, not full time equivalency.

"We've all had many conversations about how fortunate we are to have such a well-qualified staff including four librarians," trustee board vice president Lynn Smolensky said. "We were able to make a seamless transition by promoting from within."

The interim director position will conclude in two months. On March 2 Adams will either be offered the role of full library director or the board will be posting the position.

"We're using taxpayer dollars to run that hill," Kernoveck said. "So we want to maximize the dollars that we use there. Whether it runs a profit or not, we're just trying to maximize the dollars."

With the early winter weather, the hill might open a bit earlier than usual, but he wouldn't expect the hill to open any sooner than mid-December.

Plans to privatize the city's ski hill and golf course were presented to the city council, but neither plan was considered for a vote.

"I think we can work it out ourselves," said council member Shirley Gibson. "Yes, it's not solvent, but I don't think it should make money, just be more solvent. We just thought we should let the new guy give this a shot."

Senior Wells has had decorated swim career

BY IRISH CORTA
SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

CHARLEVOIX — Many people learn to swim as a child but some love it enough to compete in the pool.

For Charlevoix High senior Ivy Wells, the love of swimming has been an important part of her life from an early age.

Wells has been a part of the Charlevoix Stingray team since she was 9.

"I fell in love with it at an early age," Wells said. "It was something that I was good at. The bonding with the team made me fall in love with it."

Wells, who is also part of the girls track team at Charlevoix, knows how much of a workout swimming is.

"Swimming works out every single muscle of your body with each stroke," she said. "Swimmers have better stamina, lung capacity and lower blood pressure than most people."

Swimming comes with difficulty both mentally and physically. Wells has participated in many competitions over the years.

"I hit my plateau with swimming a 26.7 (time in the) 50-yard freestyle," Wells said.

"I suffered a broken finger during warm-ups, and often bruise my heel while kicking in the pool."

Wells has accomplished a lot in her career. This is a product of a good work ethic and determination.

"I was the first person in Charlevoix to qualify for the Junior Olympic trials for U.S.A. Swimming," she said. "I am the fourth person ever to break a minute in the 100-yard freestyle. I have also swam on the U.S. team and made state qualifying for the past eight years."

Wells takes swimming a lot more serious than the average person. People underestimate the challenges of being a swimmer.

"Swimming is definitely a lot more challenging than people think," Wells said. "A lot of people ask what I do at practice. When I tell them they say, 'Oh, so you don't just play in the pool?'"

Breathing and swimming have to be on point if you want to be successful.

"Most people underestimate swimming because of how controlled our breathing has to be," she said. "We have to swim two and a half at the Charlevoix pool, one breath. Five lengths of the Charlevoix pool, four breaths. People tend not to understand how big of an emotional and physical commitment it is to actually do."

Wells has over the years created a lot of memorable moments through her love for swimming. One of those moments happened just recently.

"This past weekend at the Sault Ste Marie Invitational, there was a girl that I swam with for the past four years," Wells said. "We were huddled behind the blocks crying because it was our last time swimming in the Sault pool. During the 50-yard freestyle I looked over on my breath and saw that she was a little bit behind me. I slowed down a little bit so she and I could touch at the same exact moment. We ended up tying in that race."

Wells' after high-school plans are already put in place. She will attend Eastern Michigan University on a full-ride scholarship. She is looking to obtain a degree in chemistry and later specialize in nuclear engineering. She also will be part of EMU's women's rowing team.

Charlevoix senior Ivy Wells began working on her long list of swimming accomplishments from the time she began swimming with the Charlevoix Stingrays when she was 9.

Stingray swim team successful in first meet

The Charlevoix Stingray swim team competed in a Tri Meet in Harbor Springs against the Harbor Springs Hammerheads and Gaylord Gators Nov. 8.

The Stingrays, ranging in age from 5-12 years, participated in more than 30 different events and came away with eight first-place finishes.

Joe Gaffney, 6, held 3 of these first-place finishes in the 25-yard butterfly, 50 freestyle, and the 25 breaststroke.

Other first-place finishers included Addison Boop (25 breaststroke); Jacob Claflin (100 freestyle); Jack Gaffney (100 individual medley); Luke Rokop (50 butterfly); and Dominic Schwein (50 breaststroke).

The Stingrays swam 4 mixed relay races and came in first place in three.

The team's primary goals are to develop and improve each athlete's swimming technique and competitive ability, to promote teamwork, spirit and unity among all team members and to deliver a positive and enjoyable athletic experience.

Any swimmer who is able to swim the length of the pool is encouraged to join at any time.

From the young swimmers in lessons to the adults who participate in various water fitness programs, the Charlevoix Area Community Pool is a great place at any age and offers something for everyone.

The vision of the pool is to remain a vital link in our community's health, safety and recreation by providing programs that meet the changing needs of area children and adults through a safe, professionally managed aquatic facility that is accessible to all.

For more information about the Stingrays and other pool programs visit www.charlevoixpool.org or call (231) 547-0982.

CHARLEVOIX — Every once in a while, an athlete comes around in a school, transforming not only the record books, but the teams and lives they grow up with.

Charlevoix senior Madeline Boss is one of those players.

Whether you're talking with anyone within the Rayder athletic program, or the surrounding Northern Michigan area, you won't get any arguments there.

It's what makes Boss, the 2014 Area Volleyball Player of the Year.

"She definitely has earned that and as I think about all of the other players in the area, I can't think of another that stands close to her," Charlevoix volleyball coach Audra Randall said.

The Rayders were led by Boss to their first Class C district title since 2011 and a regional final appearance after a 3-0 semifinal win over Gwinn.

To be honored as the area's best her senior year, Boss put in the work starting in her freshman season at Charlevoix, with a little help along the way.

"Starting off as a freshman, I had so many people helping me," said Boss. "Coach (Liz) Shaw was a key person, Coach Randall, always there for me. I'd stay after practice to keep working and they'd always be there working with me to get better. Jenna Way was a major help for me as well."

While most freshman in the Charlevoix program start out on the junior varsity team, that would be short lived for Boss, as Randall, the JV coach at the time, tells.

"I was coaching JV when she was a freshman, so when she came in, my thought was, 'I wonder how many weeks I'm going to get to keep her,' said Randall.

That answer was not many at all, as she was up on the varsity team by mid September and setting varsity records, including one of her first weekend tournaments, where she came away with 70 total kills.

From there, Boss grew into a much needed leader on the court for the Rayders.

"After freshman year, I took what I learned from those seniors, and it was really key for me to keep working on my leadership, trying to be a good captain, so that I could take my skills and give them to other people, and we could build a great team," she said.

That work she put in, not only perfecting her craft, but also her leadership skills, paid off in a major way this season in the win column, as the Rayders finished the year 41-8-5.

After two straight years of falling short in districts, the chance to finally bring in a title her senior year was an amazing feeling for Boss, matched with a 3-0 record against rival Boyne City.

"That district title, it felt awesome, and not just for me but for the entire team," she said.

"Those two years we went without a district title, and coming so close each year and having it taken away, when we finally got it it felt so good that I can't even describe it with words. That accomplishment meant so much for all of us."

Randall certainly knows it couldn't have been done without Boss leading the way, who knocked in 19 kills and 11 digs in the final.

"A person like her that is so driven, for her to stop and embrace her teammates, sometimes is not in the genetic makeup of an athlete like that," said Randall. "She was a great leader."

Not just a great leader to athlete, Boss wants to be known to her teammates and coaches as a player that can be relied on for a bit of everything, not just kill shots that sent the gym into shock.

"I think it's more fun to do a little bit of everything on the court," she said. "I don't want to have a specific thing, like 'Oh, Maddie's only good at doing this.' I want to be the person that when someone needs help, no matter what it is, people can say to her 'Go ask Maddie, she knows what to do.' It feels awesome to be able to jump in when coach needs a setter or whatever, and know I can do it."

Also a standout basketball player for the Rayders, helping her girls' team to a district title a year ago, as well as a state competitor in the high jump, long jump and as a sprinter on the track and field team, making volleyball far from the only sport Boss excels in.

Which may just mean, like the 2014-15 athletic season, the honors are just beginning for Boss.

Charlevoix's Madeline Boss was an obvious choice for the 2014 Area Volleyball Player of the Year, earning the honor with her leadership on the court and play in the stat column, both which generated wins for the Rayders this season.

Bicycles and roadways

Question: What are the laws regarding operating bicycles on the roadways? How do these laws apply to the organized bicycle tours that occur in Northern Michigan?

Answer: In general, the laws regarding operating bicycles on the roadways are the same as for motor vehicles. Bicycles are considered vehicles under Michigan law. Therefore, they must be operated in the same manner as motor vehicles. This means that bicycles must be operated on the right side of the road, in the same direction as traffic. Bicycles must also be operated at a safe and reasonable speed, and must be operated in a manner that does not obstruct traffic. A new thatch roof currently being installed on an Earl Young mushroom home on Park Avenue has attracted a lot of attention, lately. Principals in the project pose for a quick photo Sunday, as they took advantage of the recent snow melt. Pictured are: lower level (left to right) Ron Way, builder, Dr. Michael Seltz, owner, and Ken Wojan, project manager. Above are thatch installation craftsmen assistant (left) Matthew Spittle, of Philadelphia and master craftsman Colin McGhee, of Virginia, originally from England. Seltz, an engineer, and his wife Liz (Karff) Seltz, who is a long-time Charlevoix summer resident, designed the roof, and are excited to see the result of the remodel.

BANKING WITH HEART SINCE 2005

Business in Petoskey is seasonal, and it's no different for a heart specialist. Not only is The Bank of Northern Michigan receptive to this, the investments we have with them are never static; they're personal, eye-to-eye. We currently could have gone to a national bank, but I'm ready to be a banker in New York City. They wouldn't understand Petoskey business, nor would they have our kind of Michigan. Health Care or the way we do. Our relationship has progressed from checking and savings accounts to a mortgage to business lending for further growth and development. And it has become us to help with them. When a bank does everything they can for us—as a personal and professional bank—it's obvious that our business and our bank are better together.

Finding balance

Charlevoix faces challenges in economic growth

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 439-9397 • jspence@petoskeynews.com

It's about finding balance. More specifically, the balance between the old vision of Charlevoix and efforts to expand the economy of the city.

"Not anything specific to Charlevoix, but there are challenges when any community has to grow economically," said Tom Earhart, entrepreneurship director with the Northern Michigan Economic Alliance. "Because they want the environment to be as it always been. People need to work with the changes and not work against."

Earhart added that the city of Charlevoix has a lot of positive efforts to retain its businesses and help them grow. There is lot of potential for growth, he said.

Some of the programs the city has initiated to strengthen the health of the economy include the Trail Town projects and the Michigan Mainstreet Program. The Michigan Main Street program is a community-driven, comprehensive strategy that encourages economic development through historic preservation. It is a best practices strategy to run a more effective DDA.

Phil Parr co-owner of the Bridge Street Taproom in Charlevoix and head of the Mainstreet steering committee said people against new ideas and programs is one of the biggest challenges the city faces.

"I would say that it's been a big road block," he said. "You want to give people a fun vibrant atmosphere with an inviting and diverse crowd. Everyone wants to be a part of that."

He said because the city is part of a

Questions cause city council to put off decision on ordinance

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 439-9397 • jspence@petoskeynews.com

Too many questions left unanswered led to the Charlevoix City Council waiting on an outdoor dining ordinance decision.

Questions were raised about the uniformity of table and chair design, application fees and what happens if a restaurant doesn't comply with the guidelines.

"What are the consequences if people violate this rule," asked council member Jeff Porter.

City planner Mike Spencer said they can correct what the violation is. If it's an issue that they continue to not comply with, the tables and chairs can be removed, he added.

Porter asked later, "Because this is a public sidewalk, shouldn't the tax payers and the people in the city deserve something back for that?"

Spencer said the business owners are tax payers which helped pay for the sidewalk.

During the summer the DDA formed an outdoor dining subcommittee consisting of DDA board members Todd Wyett and Luther Kurtz; city council members Peggy Brennan, Shirley Gibson and Jeff Porter; and city staff members Bethany Pearson, Roh Strachel and Mike Spencer.

Council member Bill Supernaw supported the idea to bring more restaurant owners onto the advisory committee for guidance.

Some of the guidelines in the current draft ordinance include:

— Businesses must maintain a minimum of 6 feet of unobstructed pedestrian walking space and a minimum of 1.5 feet of clearance between their barrier and the curb to allow for car doors to open.

— Businesses must serve within a clearly defined area that is clean, appropriate, safe and incorporate live vegetation.

— Businesses may not operate an outdoor premise between the hours of 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

— Applicants are required to pay a $250 first time fee and a $200 renewal fee.

Pearson said she will take the input from the council to revise the draft.

Charlevoix businesses to hold Merchant Open House

CHARLEVOIX — 'Tis the season for the holiday festivities to begin.

On Saturday, Dec. 6, merchants will be armed with entertainment, samples, refreshments, special sales, raffles and more during the Charlevoix Merchant Open House.

Be sure to go into the season well prepared by taking advantage of this special event; it is the perfect place for inspiration and acquisition of all your holiday needs. Whether you're shopping for that must-have gift or those little, but necessary stocking stuffers, you can find it all in Charlevoix this holiday season.

In addition to the great sales, Santa Claus will arrive downtown at noon to spread holiday cheer for the children. Santa will be at Charlevoix Cinema III, 107 Antrim Street, from noon to 1 p.m. There is no fee for your child to visit with Santa and after he departs, children are also invited to stay and watch a free full-length holiday movie, sponsored by Charlevoix State Bank. The free movie this year is "The Muppet Christmas Carol", a 1992 American musical fantasy-comedy film and an adaptation of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol". For entry, bring a canned good to benefit the Charlevoix Food Pantry. While children enjoy the movie, parents are able to relax, sample and shop without interruption.

Don't miss the second Annual Charlevoix Hot Cocoa Contest. Area restaurants invite you to sample and vote on your favorite hot cocoa. Cocoa stations will be set up at participating downtown stores and restaurants, just look for the Cocoa Trail posters in the storefront windows to stop in, sample and vote for your favorite cocoa creation. Competing restaurants include the Bridge Street Tap Room, Creative Cupcake, Grey Gables Inn Restaurant, Scovic's Gourmet, Smoke On The Water, The Drawbridge Bistro and The Landing Restaurant.

This event is a great opportunity to shop small and support your local businesses during the holidays. With this in mind, the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority (DDA) is offering a holiday promotion this year. Simply pick up a local passport at Charlevoix City Hall, Charlevoix Public Library, Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce or any participating downtown retailers, spend $10 or more in eight downtown stores from Nov. 29 to Dec. 22 and get your downtown passport stamped for a chance to win $250 from the DDA and free parking in downtown Charlevoix for one year.

Make a list, check it twice and head to the Charlevoix Merchant Open House. For additional information visit www.charlevoix.org or call (231) 547-2101.

Historical photo exhibit gets temporary home

CHARLEVOIX — The Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library group has moved its historical photo exhibit depicting Charlevoix in the early 1900s to accommodate the painting of the second floor corridor. The exhibit will be temporarily located in the community meeting room foyer of the Charlevoix Public Library through the end of the year. At that time, it will be relocated to its permanent location back on the second floor.

The Michigan Room Committee (Cynthia Postmus, Marilyn Novak, Kay Heise, Mary Ann Chew and Nancy Porter) of the Charlevoix Public Library spent hours researching photos at the Charlevoix Historical Society, which would give people a sense of life in Charlevoix 100 years ago. The exhibit was generously funded by the Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library, but could not have been accomplished without the assistance of David Miles, co-director of the Charlevoix Historical Society. The exhibit was originally purchased and installed by the Friends of the Library in honor of the library's 100th anniversary of an independent library building in Charlevoix.

Visit the exhibit during regular library hours: Monday-Thursday, 10 a.m.-8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sunday, 1-5 p.m.

For more information about the library, visit www.charlevoixlibrary.org.

New craft brewing business hopes to open downtown

JORDAN SPENCE
(231) 439-9397 • jspence@charlevoixnews.com

The Charlevoix City Council voiced unanimous support for the addition of the Lake Charlevoix Brewing Co. to downtown Charlevoix.

The brew room is proposed to be located at 109 Bridge Park. It would be created in the space owned by the Downtown Development Authority. Currently, it's used for storage.

Phil Parr, one of the brew room's owners (he also owns the Bridge Street Tap Room) presented the idea to the council.

"We've had a great summer," he said. "Obviously we've created a new category of tourism for Charlevoix in craft beer. We would be seeking a redevelopment license. That's why we're starting this process early so we can spend time on negotiations with city staff."

Because the space is owned by the DDA, the plans need approval by the DDA board. Parr said they presented to the council just to have support behind the project before negotiations with the DDA take place.

The Charlevoix DDA community economic development director, Bethany Pearson said she did receive a few phone calls from other concerned business owners asking why this opportunity wasn't offered to other businesses.

"The Round Lake Group (who is proposing the brewing company) approached the DDA, not the other way around. So the DDA listened. It wasn't something within our scope to do (renovations) with DDA funds."

So, to have a business do the work for us is a win-win," she said.

Parr said they would enter into a lease agreement with DDA for the space.

"The business, it's a brew pub atmosphere. We would be brewing the beer to sell in the brew unit. It will be a great way to attract people to downtown," he said.

He added the atmosphere will be industrial and they don't plan to change the look too much.

"We'll just add fixtures to accommodate the brewing system, chairs and tables and a bar."

They will be using a two barrel brewing system. The system makes 62 gallons of beer at one time.

Parr estimates to seat 50 people inside and 20-30 people outside in their plans for a beer garden. He said they will be offering a limited food selection and will serve sandwiches and small plates.

"I think they're awesome and we should support it," said council member Luther Kurtz.

After the unanimous vote of support, Parr said they're forming their application and moving forward with negotiations with the DDA.

Stolen Seeds

This is something of a confession I am inclined to steal seeds.

Of course, I do not steal seeds from the displays in stores. But if the seeds of a plant that I might like to grow are available on the plant that produced them, and it is on a parking lot public property, I am likely to carry away a few seeds.

This story is probably apocryphal, but none the less, one of my heroes for many years has been the botanist who, in 1876, smuggled a few seeds of the Brazilian rubber plant back to New Gardens, outside London, and started the entire British-controlled rubber plantation industry in Malaya. Brazil did not want these economically important plants outside of their country, and according to legend, he smuggled a few seeds out in his hollowed out cane. If caught, he risked severe punishment.

Just for the record, my thefts of seeds do not constitute a felony. Plants often produce enormous amounts of seed every year. They are not likely to notice a few that I gather.

One of my thefts is displayed in my yard. I have a young spruce from seeds I gathered a few years ago. As a centerpiece, we have a Japanese sycamore from seeds picked up in a Chicago area botanical garden on the occasion of our elder daughter's wedding seven or eight years ago.

Close to the garage, there is some native echinacea from seeds collected on never-plowed prairie in Iowa, and a couple of flowering trees, with tiny, red apple-like fruits collected along State Street here in Charlevoix.

That a tiny seed can be turned into a tree that might live for a century is still amazing to me.

Garden seeds and seeds of many ornamentals are almost guaranteed to germinate easily. Genuinely wild plants produce seeds that are sometimes difficult to start. Almost all seeds will eventually germinate, but the time scale for plants is not like ours. Some trees, Kentucky coffee tree is an example, produce seeds guaranteed to not germinate for many years. Large seeds that have no mechanism for dispersal often depend on time to move them. Sprouting is delayed for a long time while the seeds age and travel. The Kentucky coffee seeds will finally germinate a hundred yards downhill from the parent tree. It has taken them years or even decades to move downhill via the natural processes of rain and gravity.

This winter's project is to germinate seeds of a plant called pinkroot, which grows in the southern Appalachians. Formally the name is spigelia. I won't tell you where the few plants in Charlevoix occur, but I have a dozen or so seeds collected very close to the sidewalk. Does reaching over qualify as trespass? I hope not. They will produce beautiful, small perennial plants and I am hoping to have some by next spring. I will report.

Consumers mull options, face health care hikes

BY RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDVAR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumers across most of America will see their health insurance premiums go up next year for popular plans under President Barack Obama's health care law.

But it will take time for families to figure out the best bang for their budgets — even as a bigger political battle brews over the program's future.

For many people, government subsidies will cushion the hit. And there's a new factor: Returning customers who are savvy about health insurance and prepared to shop for a better deal.

Scott Joens of St. George, Utah, said he and his wife are facing premium increases of about 18 percent for 2015.

But instead of agonizing, he's looking for a plan with a higher deductible, which is the amount of medical expenses that consumers are responsible for each year before insurance kicks in. By switching, he could lower his monthly premiums.

Joens, in his 50s and semi-retired from the pharmacy business, said he'll worry if the trend keeps going.

"It's not a major hardship," he said. "But I still have some years until I am on Medicare. My worry is by the time I'm 65, who knows where this will be?" Overall, he said he's been very satisfied with his "gold" plan this year.

Experts say numbers alone don't tell the story.

"How all this shakes out will depend on one big wild card," said Larry Levitt of the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation. "Will current enrollees become savvy shoppers or just sit back and stay in their current plans? This is a new program with no precedent, so there's no way to predict exactly what will happen."

In a departure from the process that officials followed last year, the administration has not released its own analysis of 2015 premiums. Instead, it published raw data, leaving it to independent experts to parse the numbers.

What they are finding points to an overall trend of rising premiums, although not everywhere.

The analysts have focused on "silver" plans, the coverage level picked by about two-thirds of the customers on HealthCare.gov and state-run health insurance markets. There are four levels — platinum, gold, silver and bronze. Silver is a notch below what most people with employer coverage have.

A study from the market analysis firm Avalere Health found that premiums for the lowest-cost silver plan will go up by 10 percent on average in communities across the country.

A Kaiser Foundation study took a different approach, focusing on premiums for the second-lowest-cost silver plan in every county. That type of plan is a benchmark that the government uses as a basis for setting consumer premium subsidies for the entire program.

Kaiser found that premiums for the second-lowest-cost silver plan are going up in 59 percent of counties nationwide, down in 34 percent, and remaining flat in 7 percent. Eighteen percent of counties will see an increase of more than 10 percent. At the other end of the spectrum, 13 percent of counties will see a decrease of more than 10 percent.

If you are currently in the second-lowest-cost silver plan in your community, there's no guarantee that will be the case for 2015. Another insurer may have bid lower and captured the designation. People who don't shop around could face significant price increases.

The rise isn't too far out of line with what's happening to employer-sponsored plans, which cover about 150 million people and make up the biggest chunk of the health-insurance market. Costs in those plans, which usually are more restrained than prices in the individual market, are expected to rise about 4.6 percent on average next year, according to a recent survey from benefits consultant Mercer.

Still, Levitt said many consumers will have the opportunity to find a lower-cost plan.

"In some places, premiums are actually going down, which is almost unheard of in health insurance," he said.

That's what Robert Glenn of Charleston, South Carolina, found when he started looking around. The premium for his current gold plan actually dropped by $17 for 2015. Nonetheless, Glenn re-evaluated his options, figuring he would save more next year by picking a middle-of-the-road silver plan instead. His new monthly premium will be $104 less than what he is currently paying.

"I see the forces of capitalism and competition working this year," said Glenn, a psychiatrist in his early 30s who's an independent contractor. "I know I am just but one of millions of people affected ... but 'Obamacare' is working for me."

LOOKING BACK...

This photo of the lower channel bridge area was taken probably in the late 1930s or as late as mid-1941. The area has been totally transformed since then. To the upper right of the bridge, the diagonal building is the shed of the Charlevoix Lumber Company. This land became the Edgewater Inn complex beginning in the late 1980s. To the upper left of the bridge stands the Argo Milling Company that started out as the Rifenburg mill in 1885. Earl Young tore it down in 1953 to begin the Weathervane Restaurant building.

Just above it, on the highway, is Fochman Motors, an automobile dealership, now the Pointes North Inn. To its left, the long L-shaped building is the Fountain City House Hotel, Charlevoix's first and once the largest hotel in Northern Michigan, now the Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites. To the lower left of the bridge stands the Alhambra Hotel, built as the Lewis Grand Opera House in 1883, removed to make way for bridge construction in 1947, now the sloping lawn beside the channel.

Across the street appear the remaining buildings of Charlevoix's "Old Town," some of the first commercial buildings erected here in the late 1800s, removed in 1941 for bridge construction (not completed until 1949 due to World War II), now the location of Bridge Park.

Girl Scouts give back with food drive

CHARLEVOIX — Girl Scout troops from Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City recently attended their fourth annual movie event/food collection drive at the Charlevoix Cinema.

Girl Scouts hauled in boxes and cans of food for Thanksgiving dinners to give to the local food pantries in Charlevoix and Ellsworth. The Charlevoix Cinema made a generous donation of canned goods toward the girls' effort. In all, more than eight boxes and bins of food were collected for the hungry.

In addition, Charlevoix Troops 10253 and 10262 recently participated in the "Every Dress has a Story" community service project in connection with Goodwill. The troops donated 20 gently used dresses to be provided to girls and women in need. As part of this service project, donors submitted stories telling the reason a dress was special to them for the new owner to read.

Girls in kindergarten through 12th grade can join Girl Scouting at any time during the year, and it is a way for girls to build courage, confidence, life skills and make lifelong friendships.

From America to Europe to Asia: Santas aren't all created equal

RACHEL BROUGHAM
Courier contributor

There's the white beard, the red suit, the big belly and the jolly "ho, ho, ho." That's the image these days anyway.

But Santa Claus didn't start with a reindeer-drawn sleigh. The evolution from St. Nicholas to present day Santa has occurred over close to 2,000 years.

According to the St. Nicholas Institute in Livonia, which trains Santas of all Christian faiths and works on cross-training for individuals to effectively portray Santa Claus and St. Nicholas for a wide variety of venues, Santa originated in 270 AD in what is now the country of Turkey. Nicholas was born to wealthy Christians who died when he was little. Following Jesus' advice to give to the poor, Nicholas gave away his entire inheritance to the poor and needy. He became the Bishop of Myra while still a young man, and continued to help those in need, particularly children.

The legend of St. Nicholas was then brought to the New World by Dutch settlers. The name "Santa Claus" evolved from the Dutch nickname, Sinter Klaas — a short-circuited form of Sint Nikolaas. In 1804, St. Nicholas was named the patron saint of New York City.

Then in 1863, a political cartoonist, Thomas Nast helped popularize the common image we have of Santa by drawing a series of annual cartoons for Harper's Weekly that was based on the world of Washington Irving's published work regarding St. Nicholas. And by the early 1900s, the image we now know as Santa — red suit, white beard, big belly — started showing up in art and advertising.

"So far, we've had a total of 75 come through the institute since 2012, about 25 a year roughly," said Fr. Joseph Marquis, who leads the St. Nicholas Institute, which was founded in 2011. Marquis spent several years as a ventriloquist, entertaining children being prepared for surgery. He was often called upon to arrange clinical visits from Santa Claus during the Christmas season.

The institute is a multi-day program that empowers candidates to portray Santa in secular or religious ways and is open to all Christian faiths. Mrs. Claus also attend. The program covers the historical aspect of both, along with physical and non verbal communication skills that any effective Santa would require.

"Some people portray St. Nicholas as they do in Europe, learning the aspects of St. Nicholas and the history. He's very famous but very misunderstood," Marquis explained.

"You really have to think on your feet and have improv sessions. You also learn about being more of an active listener. Frankly, there can be some tough situations, but it's a very rewarding thing."

While we here in America have our own traditions regarding the modern version of Santa Claus, the guy in the red suit is celebrated in various ways around the world.

The St. Nicholas Center offers these insights on how the Santa is celebrated in other countries. Here are some examples.

Austria

"Children leave shoes for St. Nicholas on the windowsill or outside their bedroom doors. In the morning they find the good saint has filled good children's shoes with oranges, apples, nuts, sweets, and small toys. Of course, all the children are good."

Croatia

"Krajinus, who comes along with St. Nicholas, leaves golden twigs for naughty children. The worse the behavior, the larger the twig. Every child gets a twig as a warning; each gets sweets as well."

France

"On the eve of the Saint's Day, children put their shoes near the chimney and sing a song to Saint Nicholas before going off to bed. The shoes overflow in the morning with special Saint Nicholas sweet treats — chocolates and special cookies. Even good children find ribbon-tied birch twigs, as everyone does something naughty."

Germany

"Children practice poems and songs for Sankt Nikolaus and make little presents for him."

Iceland

"In the 1930s a group of lads dressed in Santa costumes, introducing a new image and character, now referred to as the 'Coca-Cola Santa'."

Netherlands

"Nearly every city, town and village has its own Sinterklaas parade. He usually arrives by horseback, but occasionally he comes by boat, carriage, moped, or helicopter."

Poland

"On Christmas children eagerly await the end of Wigilia (Christmas) dinner, for then they will unwrap their presents and discover if they have received what they requested in letters to St. Nicholas. Sometimes the good saint appears again, asking questions to determine how the children have behaved. Then he distributes the gifts and quietly disappears to visit other excited children."

Romania

"On the night of Dec. 5, boots are cleaned and carefully polished to be put by the door or on the windowsill to wait for St. Nicholas' (Sfantul Nicolae) visit. He is generous to adults as well as children, putting a little present in each boot — usually nuts, tangerines, sweets chocolate and small useful items, like new socks. Larger gifts come at Christmas."

Switzerland

"When St. Nikolaus visits German-speaking homes, he may be accompanied by three Schmutzli. He goes over a list of the good and bad things the children have done (provided in advance by parents). Good children receive candies, nuts and oranges. The Schmutzli are said to heat bad children with branches; however, that is theoretical as all children are good."

Church members each get $500 to do good for world

SHARON COHEN
Courier Staff Writer

CHURCH GO — On a very memorable Sunday, Pastor Santa Claus surprised her congregation with a bold announcement: She was about to hand out money to everyone.

LaSalle Street Church had received a tidy $1.6 million from a real estate deal, the pastor said, and $160,000 a typical 10 percent tithe would be divided among some 320 regular attendees. Each would get a $500 check to do something positive.

LaSalle, a non-denominational church, has long been involved in social causes, from feeding homeless families to buying an ambulance for a medical clinic in Niger.

Not surprisingly, many donations will reach far-flung places, including a school in the Himalayas and an irrigation project in Tanzania. Closer to home, some checks are helping needy friends.

"Church members, today, are doing just what she'd envisioned when she distributed the checks in September."

"I hoped that they would recognize the power they had to bless others and change somebody's life," she says.

"... And that has largely happened."

Jettifer Jordan remembers being young and in debt.

More than 40 years ago, she was a divorced mother of three who couldn't stretch her seamstress earnings far enough to support her kids. She took out a loan of about $4,000 to attend a business college, expecting it would lead to better opportunities — and it did.

But she never forgot the pressure of making payments, then falling behind before eventually settling her debt.

Aware that her granddaughter, Deitra Galloway, was saddled with college loans, Jordan knew what she'd do with part of her church money: She gave Galloway $300, figuring it might cover a month's payment. She was shocked when her granddaughter revealed her school debt was in the many thousands.

A grateful Galloway, 26, used the money instead to help pay a loan on her used car. It was just another example of her grandmother's generosity, including taking her to Paris when she was in college. "I always thought she was rich because she would do these things for me and it never seemed like money was an obstacle," she says.

Far from it, Jordan, now 71, is a meticulous planner who watches every dollar.

"She's a great role model," Galloway says.

Jordan, who had a long career in the insurance industry but still enjoys sewing, divided her remaining money between a local arts program and a nearby elementary school.

"It's not possible to give without receiving," she says. "And what I received immediately is joy."

At first, Jonas Ganz figured he'd go the traditional charity route, helping those with basic needs.

But his friends are trying to raise $25,000 to build the Seven Hills Skate Park in Amman, Jordan, and pitching in to help, he says, seemed "the right thing to do."

Ganz grew up in Amman, spending many hours there on his skateboard.

He says he knows there are more urgent needs in life, but doing good is about more than tending to the essentials.

"This project has the potential to have a lasting impact on the community," he says.

Ganz donated $450 to the park — the rest to World Vision, a Christian international relief agency.

Now a junior at Moody Bible Institute, Ganz, 20, is returning to Jordan, where his parents are helping Syrian refugees. He plans to study Arabic.

Ganz recently had knee surgery for a soccer injury so his sports days are temporarily on hold.

But when he packs up his gear, he'll include a favorite possession: his skateboard.

Kristin Hu was inspired by her grandmother, Irene, who died in June.

When Hu received her $500, she remembered how her grandmother worked until she was 80, giving piano lessons, using her savings to help eight grandchildren pay for college.

As a political science teacher at Lakeview High School, a melting pot of ethnicities, Hu wanted to help some kids who don't have a guardian angel: the Dreamers, those young immigrants brought to the U.S. as children without legal permission, raised here and now going public, fighting to stay.

Hu, 29, was moved after hearing an impassioned speech by Lucy, an accomplished Mexican-born Dreamer in her class, who spoke of how she and others want to attend college but don't qualify for financial aid because of their status.

"They have amazing potential, but our country isn't investing in them the way they should," Hu says. "Many of them are so motivated. ... They've really touched me."

Hu plans to give $500 to a Dreamer organization or start a scholarship foundation for the kids.

LaSalle's program, she says, also made her think about the importance of "paying it forward and giving back."

She credits her grandmother for setting her on the right path.

"I think this is living out her legacy," Ho says. "I'd like to be there for someone else."

seasonal economy it can make money issues unstable.

"It's a seasonal crutch we have," Parr said. "When the biggest money making time of year is during a three month period then our year round citizens don't have the ability to shop local. I think the Mainstreet program is going to help give us tools and resources to be year-round viable to attract citizens in the younger demographic. This will help things like filling the capacity of our schools. Which is one of our highest problems right now."

He added it would be best to strengthen the businesses the city has now, then move to recruiting new businesses.

Community economic development director of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority, Bethany Pearson said the overall health of the city is "really good."

"We had seven businesses either expand or open their doors in the downtown district this year and the great thing is that they're year-round businesses," she said.

The businesses include, Creative Cupcake, Bridge Street Wine & Spirits, Quay Terrace Bar, Bridge Street Tap Room, Drawbridge Bistro, Cherry Republic (which has expanded), Smoke on the Water and The Lake House.

The owner of The Lake House, Darsi Lee, said she feels confident about Charlevoix's economy. The business specializes in gifts and home decor.

"I feel like for our first year we've done well," she said. "We've definitely stayed busy during the busier tourist season."

Even when things start to slow down for the winter season, Lee said she is still happy with the amount of business the store continues to do.

Amanda Wilkin, executive director of the Charlevoix Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, said her organization's room assessments continue to grow. "We've been up every year since 2008 — tourism is going well." She said they're up by about 2 percent. But, she doesn't have exact numbers since there has been an assessment change.

Irene Hinkelherger, manager of the Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites said their lodging numbers were close to what they did last year.

"November is not a month to consider because it slows down. But it's holding its own," she said. "We're happy with how we've done over the summer even though it was cooler than normal."

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics the unemployment rate of Charlevoix County for the month of September is 6.4 percent, compared to 9.6 percent in September of 2013. Emmet County unemployment rates were 6.3 percent. This is compared to 7.2 percent for the state as a whole.

Pearson said they've been working on an economic study right now which will be released in early 2015.

"That report will really leverage attracting new businesses," Pearson said. "It looks at a number of things including spending habits and zones for potential new businesses."

Charlevoix pleased with performance despite opening loss

(231) 439-9345 • dkochanny@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Both the Petoskey and Charlevoix girls basketball teams got an early season test Tuesday in a 63-57 Northmen victory that served as the season opener for both.

"This was definitely a good test," Petoskey coach Adam Dobrowolski said. "Charlevoix put full court pressure on us and forced us to make smart decisions with the basketball. We recognized some things early on that we needed to reverse the basketball and needed to get our forwards slashing back to the basketball."

Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw, who returns six seniors from a district championship team from a year ago, was more than happy with her team's play on the night.

"I'm real proud of the girls coming out strong tonight," she said. "They showed a lot of heart and desire and finished when we needed it most."

A back and forth fourth quarter, where the Northmen would grab their first lead of the night, would be held on by the Rayders, as free throws and a never quit attitude pushed Charlevoix to the win.

"It could have been the opposite and let them just pull ahead," said Shaw. "I think that's a tribute to the seniors and doing a good job of settling down and controlling the tempo."

Controlling the tempo was something the Rayders did early in the contest as well.

The early pressure from the Rayders would work wonders on the defensive end, which in turn made for quick baskets offensively, as they opened the game with an 11-0 lead.

Petoskey would cut back in the first quarter thanks much in part to a transition game led by freshman Isabel Anderson, who scored six first quarter points, helping a 10-0 run for Petoskey.

"I think we adjusted well once we got into the second quarter. It just took us a little bit to gain our composure," said Dobrowolski.

At the end of the first, the Rayders held a 15-10 lead.

Charlevoix would put together an 8-0 run of their own in the second to grow the lead. Petoskey would trim the game to five points late in the second, again showing the resiliency to fight back.

"I think the biggest thing that I'm most pleased with is the way that we responded," said Dobrowolski. "One of the things that we talked about all preseason was overcoming adversity. The girls showed it on the court tonight by coming back numerous times."

Charlevoix would hold a 31-25 halftime lead, but it would be Petoskey in the third quarter that would come out firing, thank much in part to a transition game that led to a number of baskets in the paint for junior Megan Sysko.

"Our strength is our transition and a lot of our paint touches were out of transition where we were able to beat the press with the double team, then create numbers," said Dobrowolski. "I think our young guards did a good job of making the extra pass and finding it."

The lead in the third was trimmed to just five points

Ski coach Scholten at home on the hill

NOAH CERTA

Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Finding hobbies in the Northern Michigan winter is no easy task for many.

Some love the cold and snowy season, others do not. New Charlevoix High School ski coach Peter Scholten is one of those who loves it and his hobby, skiing.

The love of the slopes started at an early age in his hometown.

"I grew up in Cadillac and went out to Caherfue (ski hill) as many times as I could from the age of 7 through college," Scholten said.

After graduating from Cadillac High School, Scholten attended Northwestern Michigan College for a year and a half before transferring to Western Michigan University, where he finished his degree.

Scholten came to Charlevoix in 1993 and began working at Charlevoix as a Spanish teacher. Once there, he began being involved with the ski team.

"My first five years here I was the assistant ski coach and really enjoyed that experience," Scholten said. "I had to step down from that once my family came along and had to focus on being a dad."

Scholten has no doubt passed on his experience of skiing to all four of his daughters, Kylee, Abbey, Megan and Claire, throughout the years.

"I got my kids into skiing at a really young age and we have all been involved in the Northern Michigan Ski Academy," he said. "A couple of my kids have raced for USSA Racing on the weekends. So I've been back into racing for the last 10 years."

Scholten hasn't just been a mentor to his kids, though. He has been a mentor for kids both at the middle and high school levels. This has led to him earning a bigger role with Charlevoix skiing.

"Last year when Mike Washburne took over, he asked me to help out with the middle school ski team," Scholten said. "I had a load of fun doing that. This year we are going to reverse roles. I am coaching the high school team while Mike is going to do the middle school team."

Scholten and Washburne have established a stronger friendship through years of skiing.

"We get along really well, and we're looking forward to it. It's going to be loads of fun," Scholten said.

When asked about what he looks forward to the most with this job, Scholten makes sure focusing on the kids comes first.

"I just look forward to see-

Charlevoix's Drenth coaches MSU women to national cross country title

JAMES GEMSTERBLUM

EAST LANSING — Michigan State cross country coach Walt Drenth has been a part of several special moments in nine years with the Spartans.

"This one is going to be tough to top."

Saturday in Terre Haute, Ind., the 1977 Charlevoix graduate watched as his Spartans dominated a top-notch field to capture the program's first national title.

Michigan State was the only school with four All-American finishers in the 6K race, led by sophomore Rachele Schulist's fourth-place finish (19:54.3), and the Spartans' 85 points were 62 ahead of runner-up Iowa State to take the title.

"It was really gratifying, because when we walked off the course our team felt that we had given our best performance possible," Drenth said. "We ran our race exactly how we'd planned it, and we had a great last third of the race, which was where our focus was heading in."

"At the 4,000 meter mark, we were at about 105 or so points (based on our places), and by the end of the race we'd gained 20 points, which really showed how strong we were running by the end."

Junior Lindsay Clark (11th, 20:16), senior Leah O'Connor (17th, 20:20), and senior Julia Otwell (21st, 20:29.3) all earned All-American honors as well for the Spartans, and senior Sarah Kroll took 61st, in 20:56.7, to round out their scorers.

All of MSU's top five at the NCAA Championships went to high school in the state of Michigan.

Charlevoix graduate and current Michigan State University director of cross country, Walt Drenth (middle) earned a women's cross country national title for the Spartans, the program's first ever.

While the Spartans were undeniably talented, Drenth said it took more than pure skill to win MSU the national title.

"It's really who this group is as people that made the difference for us," Drenth said. "They're all natural leaders, and they're all keenly interested in making sure everyone else on the team is successful, and not just themselves."

Assessing the local girls basketball story lines

Has the high school basketball season snuck up upon us or what?

The football season in this area was one to remember and with basketball being a big-time sport in Northern Michigan, chances are there will be plenty of excitement on the hardwood.

The girls have tipped off their season this week with the boys beginning next week. Here is a breakdown of the top four storylines in the area's girls basketball season.

Can scrappy Gaylord win the Big North?

Coach Frank Hamilla has done a tremendous job with the Gaylord girls program and the Blue Devils very nearly scrapped their way to the league title last season in what many thought would be a rebuilding year.

The Blue Devils again have a lot to deal with.

host of graduating talent, but it wouldn't be wise to count them out in a league that has been very wide open in recent years. Finishing out close games was the theme of Hamilla's preseason camp.

Another Big North question is whether the wide-open nature of the Big North could lend itself to a quick rise from Petoskey, who finished in last place

BOYNE CITY — It was just before 8 a.m. when Dave Smith unlocked the doors to Boyne City's gymnasium.

It was a typical Saturday in October for Smith, the school's athletic director. The varsity volleyball team was hosting a large tournament, the kind of 10-team tournament schools play in to prepare for the postseason right before the district tournament begins. Smith was there to turn the lights on and ensure the event kicked off smoothly.

The problem, Smith found out, was that there were already lights turned on inside the school. Those lights

It was a typical Saturday in October for Sage, who was unanimously voted the 2014 All-Area Football Player of the Year by media members of the Petoskey News-Review, Charlevoix Courier and Gaylord Herald Times.

"The one thing I always say to myself is that I can never be satisfied with where I'm at," said Sage, a self-admitted gym rat who has dreams of playing football at the Division I level in college. "I can always have improvement, and I just always want to push to get to that Di level."

"I think that with that kind of effort (early workouts), it's going to come."

realize his college dreams, it's clear his effort in the weight room paid off this fall.

He helped the Ramblers finish undefeated in the regular season and ranked fifth in the state, win a district and regional title and secure a berth into the Division 6 semifinal for only the second time in school history.

Standing 6-foot and 185 pounds as a middle linebacker, he made 142 tackles, intercepted two passes, recovered four fumbles, recorded 10 sacks and blocked one punt.

He stood his ground against some of the top opponents in Northern Michigan, leading Boyne's defense to six shutouts and helping them hold another three teams to two touchdowns or fewer.

It's something he admitted probably wouldn't have happened had Boyne not lost to Negaunee 42-19 in the district final last season.

"I love going out and making big plays to get the team fired up," Sage said. "And the guys come out hard and we feed off each other. But we hit that weight room so hard this summer, and it helped when coach gave us a key so we could push each other in the weight."

"The participation in the weight room in the summer, in the spring and last winter was huge, and we left Marquette with a bad taste in our mouth after losing to Negaunee. We worked and we worked and worked, and now we're here. We just got to keep pushing."

So if you're a teacher at Boyne, maybe a parent of a student or even just a fan, and you're at the high school early in the morning, don't be surprised to see at least one room with a light on. Just know it's probably Sage in the weight room lifting his way toward his dreams — and lifting Boyne to another school record setting performance.

in a 44-39 game, with Sysko hitting a buzzer heater to end the quarter, where she scored eight points.

Early in the fourth, Petoskey would tie the game with a basket down low from Sysko, then take the lead, once again with Sysko doing the work in a 46-44 game.

"We didn't do a very good job on the boards," said Shaw of Sysko's second chance shots. "I think they got 10 points in that third quarter on second shots. That's one of the things that we talked about."

Both teams would trade baskets back and forth throughout the final quarter, with the Northmen pulling to within two points in a 59-57 game with under a minute

Free throws down the stretch from the Rayders and a late surge from senior Olivia Storm, however, would seal the game for Charlevoix.

"In the end, credit Charlevoix, their experience showed. They were able to overcome that adversity and they made some big shots at the end," said Dohrowolski. "They made their free throws. They did a lot better at the foul line. We shot 8-of-19, they doubled us up in terms of made free throws."

Petoskey would be led by Sysko with 22 points on the night, all coming in the third and fourth quarters. She'd also add 11 rebounds.

Anderson scored 10 points, had three assists and five steals. Cydnee Schlueter scored seven points, Katrina Daniel and Lily Kingma each scored six points and Daniel added seven rebounds.

Madeline Boss, who went down late with an apparent knee injury, scored 23 points to lead the Rayders, while Alexis Trihlfelner scored 14 points, going 7-for-9 from the free throw line.

Storm would add eight points and Leah Davis, six points for Charlevoix, who will next welcome Glen Lake on Monday, Dec. 8.

JUNIOR VARSITY

CHARLEVOIX — The Petoskey junior varsity girls' basketball team opened the season with a 48-32 win over Charlevoix on Tuesday in the Charlevoix High School gym, as Jalynn Byers led Petoskey with 18 points and 13 rebounds.

Katie Holka added seven points, 10 rebounds and four steals. Taylor Behan had six points and Brooke Redes had six assists for Petoskey.

For Charlevoix, Beth Veenstra led with 12 points, Isabel Buday scored eight points and Olivia Jeakle, six points.

FRESHMEN

CHARLEVOIX — Macayla Corey led the Petoskey freshmen girls' basketball team to a 48-15 win over Charlevoix on Tuesday, scoring 24 points in the Charlevoix High School gym.

Isabella Rowe would add 12 points for the Northmen.

the people around you aren't getting better, too, and this group really embraced that and did whatever they could to help their teammates and younger runners. That was really key to our success."

The Spartans spent almost the entire season ranked No. 1 in the nation, but the pressure of that title never got to Michigan State, which won every meet it entered in dominant fashion, including the Big Ten Meet and the NCAA Regional.

"A lot of teams would head into the national championship with the weight of all those expectations and doubt would start creeping in, but this group was just fearless," Drenth said. "All season, they really embraced the top ranking, and used it as motivation instead of putting pressure on themselves."

"I'm still just really impressed with this group and the way they handled this season. It's been an amazing fall getting the chance to be around them every day."

For Drenth, the national title is the culmination of a life spent in cross country, beginning as a four-year letterwinner in the sport at Charlevoix High School in the mid-70s.

After graduation, Drenth competed for Central Michigan University, and also spent time there as an assistant coach.

His coaching career eventually would take him to stops at William and Mary and Arizona State before taking over MSU's program in 2004.

All told, Drenth has won 13 conference Coach of the Year honors, including four with the Spartans, and has coached 109 All-Americans in cross country and track and field in his 30-year coaching career.

While Drenth has been successful everywhere he's gone, he attributes that success to great mentors and colleagues every step of the way, beginning at Charlevoix.

"I had phenomenal mentors and coaches growing up, including Gary Hice and Pete Spieles, who's a legend in Northern Michigan," Drenth said. "There's countless people who have helped me get to where I am today, people who mentored me and showed me how to be a coach and how to be successful, and I wouldn't be here without every single one of them."

"I've also had the good fortune of having great assistants everywhere I've gone who have helped me tremendously in recruiting and keeping the program in order. I've got a great one right now in Coach Senakiewich who's been a tremendous help and deserves as much or more credit than I do for this title."

While the Spartans lose three of their top five runners from this year's team to graduation, Michigan State isn't going anywhere.

The Spartans already have assembled an incoming freshman class filled with some of Michigan's best talent, including a face familiar to those in Charlevoix: Amber Way.

"This group has done such a great job of building the culture of this program and running together as a team, and they've passed that on to the classes behind them," Drenth said. "As long as we can maintain that culture, I think we can continue to be successful."

A blast from the past: New Charlevoix High ski coach Peter Scholten in 1997.

ing a lot of kids get involved and getting outside," he said. "There's just nothing better than being outside, it makes the winter go by really fast. I love seeing the kids improve with their skiing in general."

This ski team has a mix of experience.

"We have talented kids competing in the Junior Olympics and then we've got some kids that have barely raced," Scholten said. "The coolest thing is just seeing the kids get better. Each individual personally would get better throughout the season, and improve their time, and bottom line improve their ability to ski."

Even though skiing is a hobby to most people, it's also taken seriously by racers around the world. Understanding the sport is what people might not realize.

"A lot of people just don't understand it," Scholten said. "I tried playing hockey once and I had so much more respect watching the Red Wings on TV, and seeing the amazing things that they do. It's not easy. The same thing kids do with skiing day in and day out, it's not easy, we're battling the elements."

Like many things in life, there are challenges and obstacles that come along with skiing.

"The biggest challenge is that it's an expensive sport to begin with," Scholten said. "The cost of using the ski hill, equipment costs, etc."

Fundraising is the main source to assist the financial aspect of the sport.

"We're doing a lot of fundraising right now," Scholten said. "We are selling fresh Florida fruit. We also did a ski-a-thon last year at Mt. McSaubia which was successful. Mike is going to do a steak sale right before Christmas to help kids defray the cost of McSaubia passes for the kids. The financial aspect is probably the biggest challenge, because it's just an expensive sport."

Aside from the challenges with skiing, comes the competitiveness in the sport. This is most true around Northern Michigan, where many of the best high school teams in the state reside.

"We have a pretty competitive area," Scholten said. "Petoskey is real competitive as are Harbor Springs, Elk Rapids, Boyne City and Grayling. Our Lake Michigan Conference in general is quite competitive."

Getting kids to come out and race is not going to be a problem for Scholten and the Rayders. A total of 18 boys and girls are going to embrace the cold weather to race.

The girls side features freshmen Grace Ochs, Madison Olach, Avery Behan and Abbey Scholten, junior Kylee Scholten and senior Desiree Vill.

"On the boys end, we have pretty good numbers," coach Scholten said. "We have solid racers including sophomores Brad Klinger and Matt Good, who both are experienced. We also have some up-and-coming freshmen who really improved a lot last year. I'm very excited, we have a full team of boys and girls that can compete both in the LMC and hopefully at the State level as well."

Positivity is one aspect that Scholten doesn't lack, whether it's on the ski hill or in the classroom.

"I consider myself a pretty positive, approachable person," Scholten said. "Kids see me everyday whether they have me in class or not. We're kind of connected as one big Rayder family. I like the small school family kind of feeling that we have here."

Peterson is looking forward to the season and working with coach Scholten.

"Mr. Scholten allows the sport to be enjoyable, yet competitive," Peterson said. "That should be the model for all high school sports."

Positivity, determination, faithfulness and kindness are all perfect adjectives to describe the type of character coach Scholten is in his everyday life.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Charlevoix hunting for Lake Michigan Conference title

JAMES GONSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343 • jgonsterblum@schurz.com

CHARLEVOIX — Last year, an inexperienced Charlevoix girls basketball team gelled at just the right time, knocking off favored Elk Rapids and taking home a district title.

This season, with eight seniors and three returning starters back, including leading scorer and rebounder Madeline Boss, the Rayders have set their sights even higher.

"I'm so excited for this year," Boss said. "I think we have a lot of talent, and we want to win titles and go far this year."

"That's the hope, and it really comes back to just playing good ball."

Joining Boss are senior captains and three-year players Kourtney Putman and Ellie Way, as well as seniors Olivia Storm, Leah Davis and Alexis Tribfelner, all of whom played on the district title team last year.

Despite the high number of returners, Charlevoix still has some holes to fill. Starter Gabby Gray graduated off last year's squad, and second-leading scorer Kelsey Engstrom is sitting out the season with a torn ACL.

To cover those losses, the Rayders are hoping to get contributions from Thea Ottesen, a senior exchange student from Denmark with basketball experience, and freshman Rachel Nesburg, who has impressed in practice.

With the pieces in place, Charlevoix is hoping to repeat as district champs and contend for a Lake Michigan Conference title after a 13-10 season last year.

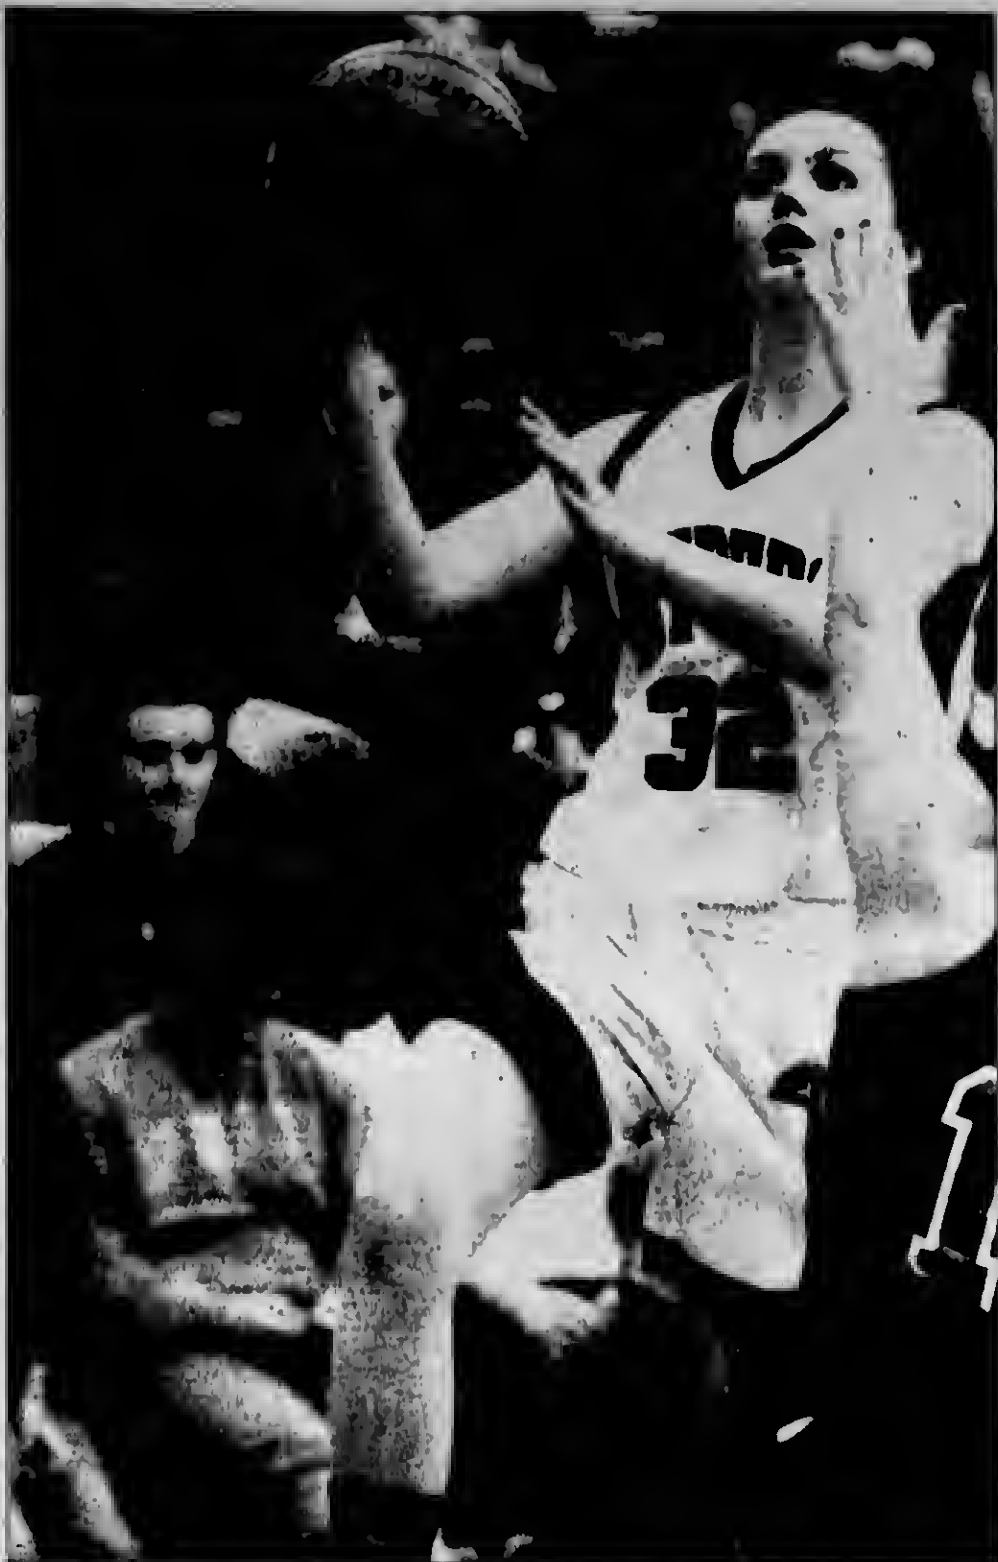

"All our returning seniors are really focused and driven on building on last year's success," Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw said. "After starting the season last year with a new offense and defense, their familiarity with the system now has allowed us to get off to a much faster start so far."

"Our program keeps building and building, and a lot of it goes back to the work these seniors have put in and the success they've had."

Winning the league title will be tough. Defending champion Traverse City St. Francis brings back all but one player, including stud sophomores Juliana Phillips and Sarah Carney.

Kalkaska returns several players as well from a successful team last year, and Elk Rapids will be looking for revenge behind 6-1 junior star Bridget Hintz.

The Rayders open the season on Tuesday, Dec. 2, at home against Petoskey, and will need to get off to a fast start to be a factor in the league race.

in the conference last year in an uncharacteristic 1-20 season.

One thing is certain, the Northmen will look much different this year having lost seven seniors from last year's team.

Can Charlevoix continue the magic?

It has already been a special season for Charlevoix girls sports. The Rayders broke through on the volleyball court this fall, advancing to the Class C regional final.

It could be argued that magic began during last year's basketball season, when Charlevoix upended Elk Rapids to capture a district title.

Keeping the momentum rolling will be the goal for the Rayders, who return Maddie Boss, the team's leading scorer and rebounder, and a number of other experienced seniors.

While Charlevoix may be favored to win its district, it likely will be viewed as an underdog in the league race with powerful Traverse City St. Francis bringing back a loaded roster from last year's league title team.

For the area's other Lake Michigan teams — Boyne City, East Jordan and Harbor Springs — the goal will be to get over the .500 hump and emerge in the top half of the league.

Who will emerge in top-heavy Ski Valley?

For almost 10 seasons, the Ski Valley Conference has been a three or four-team race with Gaylord St. Mary and Johannesburg-Lewiston consistently fielding championship-caliber teams, and Central Lake and Bellaire throwing their hat into the race in most years.

That is exactly the case this year as St. Mary, J-L and Bellaire are expected to duke it out. Each has one of the best players in the conference — St. Mary's Bekah Myler, J-L's Madison Showerman and Bellaire's Leighton Koepke.

St. Mary won its third-straight conference title last season but not before facing challenges from the Cardinals and Eagles. Then, Bellaire knocked the Snowbirds out of the state tournament in a district championship upset victory.

The biggest question for the Snowbirds — how can they replace the scoring and leadership of Karl Borowiak, who scored nearly 1,500 career points.

Which Northern Lakes team will reign supreme?

The Northern Lakes Conference is made up of some of the smallest schools in the state, but an interesting rivalry is developing between Boyne Falls and Mackinaw City, who have won the last two league titles.

The Loggers were league champs last year after compiling an undefeated run through the conference and it is looking like their chief competition will come from Mackinaw City.

A potential darkhorse may be Harbor Light Christian, who had a strong performance in Monday's 53-24 victory against Alba.

The highest question is whether one of these teams can take a major step toward competing for a district title. Mackinaw City and Harbor Light each made it to a district championship game last year, while Boyne Falls was defeated in the district semifinals.

Calorie count to appear with prepared foods

MARY CLARE JALOWICK
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Diners will soon know how many calories are in that bacon cheeseburger at a chain restaurant, the pasta salad in the supermarket salad bar and even that buttery tub of popcorn at the movie theater.

The Food and Drug Administration announced long-delayed calorie labeling rules Tuesday, requiring establishments that sell prepared foods and have 20 or more locations to post the calorie content of food and beverages "clearly and conspicuously" on their menus, menu boards and displays. Companies have until a year from now to comply.

"Americans eat and drink about one-third of their calories away from home, and people today expect clear information about the products they consume," FDA Commissioner Margaret Hamburg said.

WHERE YOU'LL SEE THE LABELS

Calorie content will appear on menus and menu boards in chain restaurants, bakeries, coffee shops, pizza delivery stores, movie theaters, amusement parks and any other locations that are part of a larger chain and serve prepared foods. They will also apply to some prepared foods in supermarkets and convenience stores.

The idea is that people may avoid that burger and fries if they add up the calories — and retailers may make their foods healthier to keep calorie counts down.

The menus and menu boards will tell diners that a 2,000-calorie diet is used as the basis for daily nutrition, noting that individual calorie needs may vary. Additional nutritional information beyond calories, including sodium, fats, sugar and other items, must be available upon request.

WHY THE RULES WERE DELAYED

Calorie labeling became law as part of health overhaul in early 2010, almost five years ago. Hamburg says writing the rules was challenging because of the need to navigate concerns of the varied establishments that sell food. Supermarkets, convenience stores and pizza deliverers lobbied hardest against the rules.

Restaurant chains went along with the rule as a way to dodge an uneven patchwork of local rules and pushed for the other establishments to be included.

GROCERY STORE CONFUSION

Representatives of supermarkets have said the rules could cover thousands of items in each store, far more than restaurants. To address that, FDA excluded prepared foods that are typically intended for more than one person to eat and require more preparation, like deli meats, cheeses or bulk deli salads. But a sandwich sold in a grocery store would have to have a calorie label.

In some cases foods will have to be labeled in one part of the store but not in another. Cut fruit would be labeled in a salad bar, for example, but not in a container for sale, because that is generally meant to take home and eat over a period of time. The FDA says the idea is to label calories of foods that are meant to be eaten at the store or as take-out, rather than for further preparation at home.

Leslie G. Sarasin, president and CEO of the Food Marketing Institute, said the group is extremely disappointed in the rules, which she said will affect stores' offerings of "fresh, minimally processed, locally produced items" such as cut cantaloupe, mixed salads or steamed seafood.

BOOZE INCLUDED

One surprise in the final rules is that alcoholic drinks will have to be labeled if they are listed on menus. Alcohol had been exempted in rules proposed three years ago.

Nutrition advocates say customers often don't realize how many calories they are drinking when they order beverages like margaritas and ice cream drinks. Drinks ordered at the bar won't have to be labeled if they aren't on a menu.

WILL IT WORK?

New York City was first in the country to put a calorie-posting law in place, and other cities and states have followed. McDonald's and other restaurant chains already put calorie labels on menus and menu boards. The labels are popular with many, but it's too soon to know whether they'll affect obesity rates.

A recent Agriculture Department study found the diets of people who use nutritional information are markedly better than those who don't, and healthy eaters had more interest in the labels. The USDA paper concluded that it "may be too optimistic" to expect that those who don't use nutrition information will adopt healthier diets if exposed to it.

WHAT'S NEXT

Even before the new rules were announced, some Republicans in Congress had expressed concern that they would be too burdensome.

Sen. Roy Blunt, a Missouri Republican, introduced a bill in the Senate earlier this year that would narrow the scope of the labeling. He said in a statement Tuesday that the regulations could hurt job growth and impose unnecessary costs on some businesses. He said he would "continue to push back" on the rules.

Atlas Township hops farm looking forward to 2015

ROBERTO ACOSTA
The Flint Journal

ATLAS TOWNSHIP — When Sean Trowbridge breaks the seal on the latched door to a walk-in freezer storing bags of varying sizes, a hoppy blast slaps you in the nostrils.

The aroma is wheaty, flowery and distinct to Top Hops Farm in Atlas Township, a commercial hops farm that's looking to grow in 2015, build relationships with local brewers and capitalize on the industry's growth in the state, The Flint Journal reports.

"My parents and I were kind of interested in trying to find something that would work here on the farm, as far as farming produce," he said of the 55 acres purchased a few years back by his father Mark Trowbridge, a retired engineer.

"With the way the craft beer industry had been going, we'd already been growing crops for a couple of years and we just visited some other hop farms in Michigan to get an idea of what it's really like," said Sean.

"We started out with a few plants next to the corn crib out here," Mark Trowbridge said. "Sean went out and bought some rhizomes off of Craigslist and put them in. They actually took off and grew quite well. I think that helped to motivate us to take the next step."

Sean Trowbridge said he grew 10 to 15 plants on the side, eventually moving to a trial yard of around 200, "when we were really serious about looking at commercial production," and planted five and a half acres in spring 2013.

Witnessing the craft beer industry flourish, he said, "We decided we'd commit to putting in a commercial amount of hops that would be substantial enough that the brewers could use it and that there could be supply year-round and not just a couple brews."

The craft brew industry saw $14.3 billion in sales nationwide in 2013, up 20 percent from the previous year, according to figures from the Brewers Association, a Boulder, Colorado-based membership organization started in 1978.

The state of Michigan had 131 craft breweries in 2013, the fifth-most in the nation, producing nearly 583,000 barrels of craft beer that equaled $1.005 billion in economic impact.

Jason Moon, public information manager for the Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs, said there are 133 licensed micro brewers in the state in 2014, as well as 43 pending applications.

In terms of production, Moon said micro brewers are allowed to produce up to 60,000 barrels of beer in one year for consumption on-site, for take-out or sale to a licensed wholesaler.

Micro brewers can also sell directly to retail licensees if they produce less than 1,000 barrels each year and don't have a sales territory granted to a wholesaler for that specific area. Moon said micro brewers are not required to have an additional license.

Strong need for manufacturing, health care workers in Charlevoix

MATT MIKUS
(231) 439-9394 • mmikus@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — If you happen to have training in either manufacturing or health care, you have highly marketable skills for Charlevoix.

While the job market in Charlevoix County and surrounding communities may seem tight, Charlevoix Economic Development director Bethany Pearson said there are open positions in the area, it's just a matter of having the right training.

"There has been a huge issue with finding qualified, trained employees for technical based jobs," Pearson said.

One field that has consistently been overlooked is manufacturing. Pearson said that's often because recent high school graduates pass technical training opportunities.

"There's this pressure that once

"There has been a huge issue with finding qualified, trained employees for technical based jobs."

— Bethany Pearson, Charlevoix Economic Development director you get out of high school, you have to go and get a four-year degree. So they miss out on these special training avenues."

Employers are especially looking for welders, she said, which offers high pay and has companies competing for good employees.

"I talked to DCL recently, and they told me (they'd) hire multiple welders on the spot, but (they) can't find enough of them," she said.

Tom Erhart, entrepreneurship director at Northern Lakes Economic Alliance, added that there's a disconnect with the perception of manufacturing and the reality.

"These are high paying jobs in clean environments. It's not the old factory setting, and that image is hard to overcome," Erhart said.

With the rapid increase in the average age of residents in Charlevoix County, the need for health care workers will continue to rise as well. The city's largest age demographic is 50-54 year-olds with a 34.7 percent increase from 2000 to 2010 according to the U.S. Census.

Information Technology is another industry that Pearson believes is underserved with the current workforce. While there are fewer available jobs, those jobs aren't being filled since there aren't enough people in the area with IT training.

The lack of qualified workers isn't restricted to just Charlevoix, added Tom Erhart, entrepreneurship director at Northern Lakes Economic Alliance.

"What the community needs can't always be filled from within," Erhart said. "Our workforce is mobile, so it's not unusual for Charlevoix employers to get workers from Petoskey or even as far as Gaylord."

But more importantly, whether looking for a technical trade, a health care degree, or any employment, it's also important to work on what Pearson calls "soft skills," such as communications, customer service, and organization.

Organizations including Leadership Charlevoix County, and volunteering with community groups can help develop those skills and provide networking opportunities.

New advertising strategy, festivals hoped to attract winter visitors

MATT MIKUS
(231) 439-9394 • mmikus@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Charlevoix hopes to lure more winter visitors to its city with a new advertising strategy focused on digital media.

The Charlevoix Convention and Visitor's Bureau plans to promote the city with new digital strategies, targeting areas like Detroit, Grand Rapids and Chicago.

The bureau purchased banner ads from downstate news websites and ads from Pandora internet radio. Tied together with the Pure Michigan tourism campaign, Amanda Wilkins, executive director of the convention and visitor's bureau, said the city hopes to bring in more winter visitors.

"We're hoping to encourage people to have a snow day up in Charlevoix," Wilkins said. "Come on north, play in the snow, then come in and relax."

A increase in hotel assessments in April offers the visitor's bureau the opportunity to promote the city during the shoulder seasons. That added revenue could help lure the winter vacationers back to Charlevoix.

For the past three years, Wilkins said the area has seen a small increase in room occupancies in Charlevoix. It's not to the same numbers as the 1980s and 1990s, before area ski resorts built their own lodging facilities, but it still has potential.

While hotels and the visitor's bureau focus on bringing tourists from outside the region, business owners also know the importance of attracting local visitors.

The new Charlevoix Ground Hog Shadowfest, scheduled for the weekend of Feb. 6, aims to entice customers to downtown through a groundhog-themed celebration. Event organizer Tim Fore, a Charlevoix resident since 2011 and longtime visitor in the summer, wanted to find an event to fill in the calendar during the winter months.

"My office looks out over Bridge Street," Fore said. "It's very slow downtown in the winter. In the summertime you can't find a parking place for blocks, but in the winter you can walk around downtown with your eyes closed and not get hit."

The festival plans to occur every weekend after Groundhog Day. Businesses can offer different deals depending on whether the groundhog sees his shadow or not. Johan's and Creative Cupcakes plan to create groundhog-themed products to sell, and free screenings of "Groundhog Day" starring Bill Murray will take place at the Charlevoix Cinema.

Creating winter festivals can give Charlevoix businesses a rallying point to bring in winter customers, said Bridge Street Tap Room co-founders Phil Parr and Aaron Hagen. The business wants to encourage more events

Local Elks Lodge working to help Charlevoix

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix Elks Lodge has been busy lately. Santa has decided to show up for lunch this Saturday, Dec. 13, just to visit. Everyone is welcome to pop over and see the man in red.

Charlevoix Elks Lodge distributed and donated more than 90 dictionaries to local third-graders and to Northwest Academy. The Elks want to make this a yearly event. The children can keep them at school or take them home.

The lodge's annual Thanksgiving Day Swim raised $1,000 for local veterans. There were about 50 swimmers despite the cold.

The Elks also held a Sub Veteran Breakfast for the local vets and they donated $2,500 to a new hospice program for veterans.

Good Samaritan receives grant from community foundation

ELLSWORTH — The Charlevoix County Community Foundation recently awarded a $7000 grant to Good Samaritan Pantry of Ellsworth.

This grant will purchase heating fuel and pay utility bills to keep Charlevoix County families warm and in their own homes this winter. With the likelihood of another brutal winter, Good Samaritan will have the ability to help more families this year than in the past thanks to the generosity of the community foundation providing an additional $2,000.

The foundation has awarded grants for this purpose to Good Samaritan over the past nine winters to help needy Charlevoix County families. Good Samaritan Pantry is an important human service agency serving southern Charlevoix County as well as Antrim County residents providing food, clothing, emergency heating fuel, and helping with utility payments for needy families.

The community foundation is a local charitable organization dedicated to improving and enriching life for all who live, work, or vacation in Charlevoix County. The community foundation works to enhance the quality of life in Charlevoix County, now and for generations to come, by building permanent charitable endowments from a wide range of donors, addressing needs through grant making, and providing leadership on matters of community concern. More information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation may be found at www.c3f.org or by calling (231) 536-2440.

Good Samaritan's ability to help neighbors in need is dependent on the generosity of members of the community. Lack of December snowfall slows snowmobilers' riding season

(989) 732-1111
mjohnson4@gaylordheraldtimes.com

NORTHERN MICHIGAN — Thousands of snowmobilers will flock to Northern Michigan over the next few months, but a recent lack of snow has limited operators from hitting the trails.

Last month, the November record for snowfall was shattered, with 64.8 inches of snow in Gaylord, creating ideal conditions for outdoors recreation such as skiing, snowboarding and snowmobiling.

Since the beginning of December began, much of the snow on the ground has melted and the amount of snowfall received has significantly decreased, something which is already impacting snowmobiling.

Local businesses selling snowmobiling and outdoor recreation accessories have seen the number of customers visiting decline and hope to see the amount of snowfall increase and do so quickly.

"We were doing really well when we were getting that good snow, but lately the number of customers has pulled off," said Jerry Beattie, owner of the Sled Shed, 2646 S. Otsego Ave.

Though he said his business is not as busy as it would be if there was more snow on the ground, Beattie said the number of Christmas shoppers coming in has increased, helping fill the gap.

Once more snow comes and stays on the ground, Beattie said he expects the number of snowmobilers to drastically increase, bringing an increase to his business as well.

"Gaylord has an excellent reputation, excellent snowmobiling begins in Gaylord," Beattie said. "You can ride anywhere from Gaylord."

Some elements Beattie said make Gaylord a choice snow-

Though the recent lack of snow has made it hard to snowmobile in Northern Michigan recently, soon many will be flocking to the area to hit the trails.

mobiling destination include a nice trail system, hotel and motel accommodations, a variety of restaurants and many locations to gas up, with access to almost anywhere in the northern Lower Peninsula.

The Department of Natural Resources manages and grows thousands of miles of snowmobile trails, including many in Northern Michigan.

With firearm deer season just ending and muzzleloading deer season just beginning, paired with the lack of snow recently, the DNR has not been sending out as many patrols as is the norm. However, once the snow starts coming down again, DNR officers will be busy tending to the trails and making sure snowmobilers are safe once again.

Lt. Jim Gomo, conservation officer at the DNR Gaylord Operations Service Center, said patrols on the trails have not been as frequent during the past few weeks but will increase as more snow comes down.

For the most part, Gomo said the patrols do not encounter too much trouble from snowmobilers out on the trails, but said there are a few who break the law.

Some of the most common rules or laws broken, Gomo said, deal with drinking and operating, trespassing on private property and reckless operation.

Before operating, if the operator is not already familiar with the rules and laws, Gomo and the DNR encourage snowmobilers to pick up and read snowmobiling handbooks at any DNR service center, to familiarize themselves with snowmobiling laws and safety.

Some general safety tips Gomo shared include:

- Pack food, water and matches.
- Check gas and fluids and make sure machine is operating correctly before leaving.
- Pack a charged cell phone.
- Do not go on lakes or ice unless the operator knows it is safe.

Body cameras for officers worth expense

Lansing State Journal, Nov. 27,

Dash cameras have become a routine tool in policing in many communities, often funded with U.S. Department of Justice grants.

In the wake of the Michael Brown case in Missouri, it's time to increase use of body cameras for officers nationwide. Rather than spending federal money to provide police with surplus military equipment such as armored vehicles, which are seldom needed and which can be seen as escalating conflict when they are used, spending to support more widespread use of body cameras by officers could actually make a daily difference for their safety and that of the public.

Case in point: the Rialto, Calif., police used body cameras as part of a study done by their chief from February 2012 to February 2013, according to CNN.com. Chief William A. Farrar partnered with a researcher from the University of Cambridge's Institute of Criminology for the study after studying at the English university himself in 2011.

The net result of their research: Use of force by Rialto's department, which polices a 100,000-resident city, dropped 60 percent during the experiment year.

Experts suggest citizens and officers behave better when they know they are being filmed.

There are limitations to body cameras, just as there are with dash cams. They can't get a 360-degree view. When they are turned on or off can alter the perception of the event. Technical difficulties could impact the quality of recording.

Yet overall, as with dashboard cameras, body cameras can provide additional information about how events really unfolded. That can only be useful.

East Lansing officials have said they would like body cameras, but are looking for funding to support them.

This is an area where the federal government can provide useful support. It should do so.

Make sure toy guns are seen as toy guns

The Alpena News, Dec. 1,

Twelve-year-old Tamir Rice of Cleveland probably would be alive today had he not brandished a realistic-looking gun when challenged by a police officer.

Rice's death is the most recent in a string of senseless deaths of children killed because law enforcement officers thought the "toys" they had were real, deadly firearms.

An investigation into Rice's death has been launched. It may reveal the two police officers involved could have dealt with the boy without shooting him. Again, however, there is no doubt no shots would have been fired had Rice not been at a playground with a realistic-looking pistol.

It turns out the boy was carrying a replica pistol meant to fire soft pellets. Someone had removed an orange band around the barrel, meant to distinguish the gun from a real firearm.

Police say that when they told Rice to raise his hands, he instead grabbed the pistol. At that point he was shot.

How many more children have to die in similar situations before parents stop allowing their children to take real-looking "toy" guns out in public?

If you are buying Christmas gifts for a youngster this year, steer away from such "toys." At the very least, don't let a child take one out in public. There is no reason — none at all — to expose a youngster to that danger.

US House gives Great Lakes cleanup 5 more years

BY JOHN FLESHER
AP Environmental Writer

TRAVERSE CITY — The U.S. House approved a five-year extension Tuesday of a Great Lakes cleanup program that has pumped more than $1.6 billion into removing toxins, battling invasive species and making progress on other longstanding environmental threats.

The Great Lakes Restoration Initiative has drawn rare bipartisan support in Congress since President Barack Obama started it in 2010. It has funded about 2,200 grants for water quality projects across the eight-state region.

Among them: dredging sediments laced with chemical pollution; preventing invasive Asian carp from reaching the lakes; rebuilding wetlands and other wildlife habitat; and

"This bill is good for the Great Lakes and the millions of people who depend on them for their drinking water, jobs and way of life."

— Todd Ambs, campaign director of the Healing Our Waters-Great Lakes Coalition preventing runoff from farms and sewage plants that causes noxious algae blooms like those that fouled the water supply in Toledo, Ohio, this summer.

The measure cleared the House on a voice vote and now goes to the Senate, where supporters hope it will pass in the session's waning days.

It would authorize spending $300 million during each of the next five years, although annual votes would be required to secure appropriations.

"Congress must remain a full partner in the restoration effort in the Great Lakes, and authorizing" this initiative is the best way to do that," said Rep. Sander Levin, a Michigan Democrat and co-sponsor of the bill introduced by Rep. David Joyce, an Ohio Republican.

The plan is overseen by the Environmental Protection Agency, which in September released a blueprint for the next phase. In addition to continuing existing priorities, including accelerated cleanups of toxic industrial sites, it would require projects beginning in 2017 to consider effects of climate change.

Officials also pledged to evaluate how well projects are meeting short-term objectives in addition to long-range goals such as making fish safe to eat and waters clean enough for swimming.

Bridging our past with our future

LOOKING BACK...

CHARLEVOIX — In early February of 1923, a young Beaver Islander named Jesse Cole suffered a severely fractured skull in a logging accident on the island. The islanders issued a frantic call for help to the Charlevoix Coast Guard. They contacted local physician Dr. Robert Armstrong, who had been a member of the University of Michigan Medical School's first graduating class in 1894. The only way to get to the island was by air since Lake Michigan was icebound, and it had never been attempted before. But Dr. Armstrong agreed to go if a suitable plane could be found.

Selfridge Field, 250 miles downstate, was contacted, and said a plane was on its way. But it developed engine trouble and ended up in a pile of deep snow near Gaylord. A second one followed, the two-seater Osprey II bi-plane piloted by experienced Air Force Lt. Russell Meredith, who landed on the Lake Charlevoix ice near the Belvedere resort. Later that day, the afternoon of Feb. 7, both men took off for an uneventful flight and landed on the ice of Lake Genesareth near the island's southern tip.

Dr. Armstrong was rushed to the Cole residence where he attended the unconscious young man, and saved his life. The incident underscored the now crucial need for air contact between island and mainland in all seasons, and a few years later regular service was put into operation.

Government: Gas to average $2.60 next year

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Energy Department again slashed its prediction for next year's average price of gasoline across the U.S., this time to $2.60 a gallon. That would be 23 percent below this year's projected average and the lowest full-year average since 2009.

If that comes to pass, the price drop will save U.S. drivers $100 billion over the course of the year based on current consumption levels. That will boost the overall economy by reducing shipping and transportation costs, and leaving consumers more money to spend on other things.

In its most recent short-term energy outlook, released Tuesday, the Energy Department's Energy Information Administration cut its gasoline price forecast for 2015 by 35 cents a gallon. It was the second time in two months that the EIA cut the forecast by more than 30 cents a gallon.

The average national price of gasoline to $2.66 a gallon on Tuesday according to AAA, 61 cents less than last year at this time. The national average has fallen every day since September 26.

The steep drop in gasoline prices is a result of a drop in crude oil supplies. Global crude prices have fallen to around $66 per barrel from a June high of $115 per barrel. Global supplies are high thanks in part to rising production in the U.S., while global demand is relatively weak because of slowing economic growth in Europe and Asia.

The lower crude prices are forcing oil companies to scale back drilling plans for next year. As a result, the EIA trimmed its forecast for U.S. production growth. U.S. crude oil output is expected to rise by 300,000 barrels per day to 9.3 million barrels a day. The EIA had previously expected production to rise by 400,000 barrels per day.

Despite a colder than normal November, the EIA expects home heating costs to fall this winter compared to last year. Weather forecasters do not expect a repeat of last year's consistently low temperatures, and prices for propane and heating oil are much lower than last year.

Middle class squeeze: Why areas with good jobs have hard-to-afford homes

BY JOSH BOAK
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — It's the new career trade-off:

Around the country, areas with the strongest job markets increasingly have some of the costliest homes. And areas with the most affordable homes lack a solid base of middle-class jobs that attract workers.

College graduates and younger families have been clustering in coastal cities such as New York, San Francisco and Seattle, where incomes are generally ample and solid middle-class jobs plentiful. Yet studies and government data show that homes in these areas have become prohibitively expensive.

The result is that the dream of home ownership for many is proving frustrating, being deferred or abandoned, even for people with comfortable incomes.

"This great mismatch is hurting middle class people who would like to be homeowners," said Nela Richardson, chief economist at the real estate brokerage Redfin.

Roughly 40 percent of households in New York, San Francisco, Seattle, parts of Connecticut and Colorado, and Washington, D.C., earn more than $100,000 annually, compared with just 22 percent nationwide, according to the Census Bureau.

Areas that do offer inexpensive housing across the Midwest's industrial corridor — Akron, Ohio, say, or Fort Wayne, Indiana — lack the same breadth of career possibilities.

This trend has likely helped hold back U.S. economic growth. Cities with the strongest job markets would grow even faster if more people could afford to live there, noted Jed Krisko, chief economist at the online real estate firm Trulia. The additional population would help spur further job growth, which, in turn, would strengthen the local economy and foster more middle-class jobs.

Two factors are getting in the way.

Tighter credit has made it harder to buy a home in the costliest areas, with a down payment of under 10 percent.

Leading up to the recession, mortgages with no or low down payments reached destructive excesses. Yet first-time buyers who have stable incomes are struggling to afford homes without these options, noted Nela Richardson, chief economist at the real estate brokerage Redfin.

Second, construction is running well below its pace from a decade ago. The government reports that builders are on pace to construct 1.02 million homes this year — about half the pace that prevailed in the early 1970s, when the oldest baby boomers were beginning careers.

Young adults continue to stream into many of the top job-generating areas despite the daunting housing costs. Nearly 52 percent of people who moved to the Bay Area over the past 12 months were millennials, according to Zillow. Similarly high percentages exist in New York City, Seattle, Denver and Washington.

Nationally, home prices are generally three times the size of annual incomes. Yet that ratio ranges from 3.5-to-1 in Washington to 7.1-to-1 in San Francisco. The challenge of shifting from rentals to ownership has become more problematic, particularly as younger workers look to marry and raise children.

Affordable housing still exists, of course, in many areas. Millennials have the money to buy nearly 80 percent of homes available in Akron, Ohio, and Rochester, New York, according to Trulia. Several Texas cities, buoyed by the energy boom, offer both decent salaries and home ownership. But most affordable areas lack substantial job opportunities.

Based on income, a typical family buying in Fort Wayne, Indiana, can spend less than 10 percent of their income on monthly mortgage payments.

But at the same time, government figures show that Fort Wayne has roughly the same number of jobs now as before the recession began in 2007, meaning that bargain-priced homes haven't fueled a surge of job-seekers.

In the hottest job markets, buyers typically brace for bidding wars and settle for less than they hoped.

When Jen Ewing left New York City two years ago, she figured housing would be reasonable in Seattle, where her husband had taken a job as a manager with Expedia.

"We thought we could get a beautiful four-bedroom house with a view," said Ewing, 38. "Then we got here, and that wasn't realistic at all."

They found a cute house on a quiet street and offered 10 percent above the asking price, only to learn that theirs was the lowest of six bids. For just under $500,000, they recently closed on a three-bedroom house a couple of blocks from a school for their two sons.

Lawmakers revive internet sales tax

LANSING, Mich. (AP)

— Michigan lawmakers are breathing new life into bills that would force retailers such as Amazon.com to collect the state's sales tax on Internet purchases.

The House on Tuesday prepared the legislation for a possible vote as early as Wednesday. Similar bills are pending in the Senate after a committee approved them last week.

Retailers with stores in Michigan must collect the 6 percent sales tax when selling items online. But Internet-only stores like Amazon don't have to assess the sales tax unless they have a physical presence in the state.

Traditional brick-and-mortar stores say Amazon has an unfair competitive advantage in selling tax-free goods.

Shoppers are supposed to voluntarily pay a 6 percent "use" tax for their online purchases when they file Michigan tax returns. But few do.

The Senate Fiscal Agency estimates that if the legislation is enacted, it could generate $50 million more a year in tax revenue for state and local governments. Legislators' interest in the bills comes as they are looking to increase gasoline taxes or re-direct tax revenue to improve deteriorating roads and other transportation infrastructure.

But the extra revenue generated by a sales tax on Internet purchases would fall far short of the $1.2 billion a year needed to bring roads up to par.

Deep water port under development in Escanaba

ESCANABA, Mich. (AP)

— Construction of a deep water port is underway in Escanaba that will allow for iron ore freighter repairs.

The Daily Press of Escanaba reports (http://bit.ly/1yfSuns) that the development by Basic Marine is on the city's north shore. Initial work includes dredging the property's shoreline to allow ships access to the docks and pier being built.

Basic Marine development manager Lyle Berro says it will be the only facility on the upper Great Lakes that will be able to accommodate repairs of a loaded ore freighter.

Initially, the company will be able to host two or three ships, but eventually wants up to 10 ships docked over the winter receiving repairs. The timeline for the project's completion depends on the weather.

Competitions seek ideas from Michigan innovators

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — A competition in Flint is inviting local innovators to pitch their ideas for a chance to win $5,000 in startup support and a shot at additional funding.

Spartan Innovations at Michigan State University's Innovation Center selected the Flint Area Reinvestment Office to host the GreenLight Flint Business Model Competition on Jan. 22.

Adrian Montague, consultant for the reinvestment office, tells The Flint Journal (http://bit.ly/1quZ4Uy) that the office has "established a good base of people" to pitch ideas.

The winner of GreenLight Flint will receive $5,000 in startup support resources and a seat at the GreenLight Business Model Competition on March 31 in East Lansing. At that event, participants will be able to compete for up to $50,000 to help start a business.

Participants will pitch their ideas or new startups to judges and have the opportunity to network with venture capital investors. The top prize is $25,000 along with several other prizes in different categories. There's also a GreenLight Port Huron Business Model Competition.

Sherman Otis Thomas is Veteran of the Month

The Veteran of the Month for December 2014 is Sherman Otis Thomas.

Born on April 17, 1919, in a farmhouse in Eveline Orchards, north of East Jordan, Mich., Thomas completed the eighth grade, graduated from Walker-Eveline School, the area's one-room schoolhouse, and graduated from East Jordan High School in the class of 1938.

Thomas, who had begun grafting trees at the age of 10, continued to work with his father, who was the caretaker of Eveline Orchards.

On June 30, 1940, in East Jordan, Thomas married Veronica "Peggy" Woodcock and for a short time he worked at The Willow Run Bomber Plant.

On May 12, 1945 he was inducted into the U.S. Army and entered into active service in Detroit, Mich. After basic training, where he qualified as a Sharp Shooter with the M-1 Garand rifle, and specialty training as a diesel mechanic, Thomas departed the USA on Nov. 29, 1945, and arrived in the European Theater of Operations on Dec. 10, 1945. He was assigned to the 191st Port Company in Italy where he performed major overhaul, maintenance and unit replacement work on marine diesel and gasoline engines used in troop carriers, landing craft, and sea going tugs. He directed the work of 120 diesel mechanic, supply technician and laborers handling marine repair work for the port.

On June 17, 1946, Thomas was promoted to the non-commissioned officer rank of Staff Sergeant and on July 9, 1946, he departed the European Theater of Operations and arrived in the U.S. on July 21, 1946. On July 30, 1946, at the Separation Center, Fort Sheridan, Illinois, Thomas received an Honorable Discharge and was awarded the following decorations and citations: The Victory Medal, The European African Middle Eastern Theater Medal and one Overseas Service Bar (representing six months foreign service.)

After he returned home, Thomas went to work for Clarence Healey's Chevrolet Garage in East Jordan (later purchased by Al Sinclair). In 1951, Thomas purchased and operated Sherrin's Pure Oil Service Station and AAA Wrecker Service on Main Street, south of City Hall, and also sold Oldsmobile cars and parts for the Howie Parcell Dealership, from Charlevoix, Mich., out of his service station in East Jordan. In 1961, he became the manager of the East Jordan Co-op for the next 20 years and was a member of the Rotary Club. He then worked for a short time for Central Oil in Gaylord, Mich.

Thomas gave back to his community by serving actively for 30 years in his local fire department, 12 of those years as Fire Chief, and 43 additional years as an honorary member. He was a charter member of the Jordan River Action Group and the Wild Scenic River Commission. He was an active member of The Fly Wheelers Club, near Walloon Lake, and The East Jordan Snowmobile Club. He supported veterans through his 69-year membership in American Legion Post 227 by participating in the Honor Guard Rifle Squad at military funerals.

On Oct. 8, 2013, Sherman Otis Thomas answered the final call and is being honored by his daughter, Lennie, son, Russel, and their families.

To honor a veteran, call the program chairman at (231) 588-6067 or on Tuesdays call (231) 582-7811 between 3:30-8:30 p.m. The ceremony may be witnessed at 6:15 p.m. on the first Thursday of each month in front of The American Legion Post located on the corner of South Lake and Main streets in Boyne City.

'Early warning' bills designed to save schools in financial peril

CRAIG CURRIER
(231) 439-9358 - ccurrier@petoskeynews.com

A proposal designed to rescue troubled school districts sooner in instances of financial distress is working its way through the state Legislature after a series of bills were passed in the state Senate last week. State Sen. Howard Walker, R- Traverse City, is sponsoring a series of bills that would improve financial reporting requirements for school districts and allows for the appointment of an emergency manager in cases where a distressed district doesn't submit a deficit elimination plan to the state.

"We've had a number of them that have spiraled down into emergencies and the Legislature has been forced to make emergency appropriations in order to fulfill our commitment to the students," Walker said. "We're focused on trying to develop a process so those types of emergencies and catastrophes don't occur."

The "early warning" system requires districts to file their financial documents with the state each July, allowing officials in the Michigan Department of Treasury to determine if revenue assumptions are accurate.

Those districts operating on a deficit would be required to file a deficit elimination plan. If a particular district failed to hold to that plan, an enhanced deficit elimination plan would be created. If that failed, an emergency manager could be appointed by the state.

"They are designed to create a process so that we can identify schools that are in financial distress," Walker said. "First, we identify them and then provide guidance, then help."

The bill package establishes deadlines for school districts and state officials regarding financial reporting in the summer. Those deemed to be in some form of financial trouble may also be required to file status reports at various intervals.

Critics of the early warning legislation say it creates an added administrative burden for school districts and amounts to more reporting of figures than it does financial assistance.

But Walker says the plan is to strengthen oversight of local school districts in order to prevent more serious problems in the future.

"The goal is never to get there," Walker said. "That's why it's called 'early warning.'"

BANKING WITH HEART SINCE 2005

Business in Pkine is essential, and it's no different for a heart specialist. But only in The Heart of Northern Michigan recognizes that the individuals we find with heart disease are more than just patients; they're people. We wouldn't want to lose a patient to a national bank, but I'm nobody to a banker in New York City. They wouldn't understand Pkine business, nor would they have any heart of McLaren Health Care or the research we do. Our relationship has progressed from checking with heart specialists with mortgage to business leverage for further growth and development. And it has become we're happy with them. When a bank does everything they can for us—on a personal and professional basis—it's obvious that our business and our bank are better together.

like the New Year's Bridge Drop and The Dogman Challenge fat bike race in the winter to help bring people from neighboring communities.

"You need to attract people from even your own region," Parr said. "If you don't have the snow, people from Chicago or Detroit aren't going to come up. But people in Northern Michigan might be happy that we're not buried in snow and check out some of the unique destinations around them."

Because Charlevoix has a seasonal economy, it can be challenging to make enough for one business owner to make it through the winter months.

"We need to have the mentality of if one of us wins, everyone wins," Parr said.

Council member Bill Superman said the businesses are leading the charge to bring more visitors to Northern Michigan. As a former business owner in Charlevoix, he knows a good year can sometimes be at the mercy of the elements.

"Around here, you need the sun in the summer, and the snow in the winter. Quite often that doesn't cooperate," Supernaw said. "Winter sports, snowmobiles and skiing, that's not as big or as attractive for us as the summertime, but there's still a market there that we can tap."

The local businesses should try and figure out creative approaches, Supernaw said, and they can seek help from the city.

"Everyone works together, but the resources during the winter to pull things off drops way off for the season," he said.

Seeing double: Spencer twins have smiled through many sports seasons

URBAN CENTER
Special to the Courier

CHARLEVOIX — Have you ever wondered what it would be like to have a twin? Someone that you shared a birthday with? Or share many of the same qualities together? Charlevoix High School seniors Sam Stewart and Spencer Stewart know the answers to all three of those questions.

Sam, the oldest of the two, was born a slim three minutes before Spencer on Nov. 15, 1996.

The brothers' relationship grew when both Sam and Spencer got involved in their first sport — soccer.

Many brothers or sisters don't enjoy playing on the same team as their counterpart for many varying reasons. However, Sam and Spencer didn't mind it one bit.

"I liked it because Spencer and I are close," Sam said. "He would always have my back if someone was being mean or cruel to me. It was fun because we got to interact with the same friends and the same group of people."

Spencer echoed his brother's sentiments.

"Playing on a team with my brother was awesome," he said. "I always had someone to pass to, who knew I'm going to pass it to him. Being twins and all there's a lot of chemistry just between us two on the sports teams we played on."

The last time the two were on the same sports team was in eighth grade for football. Now, Sam plays golf, while Spencer participates in both football and baseball.

When asked about the biggest challenge in golf, Sam's answer is relatable.

"The hardest part about golf is the mindset of always staying positive, so you can make those good shots," Sam said. "The mindset is the biggest thing."

Making bonds through golf differs from other sports.

"Some of the bonds you can make through golf is how a player acts when he hits a bad shot, or his personality if you don't know him that well, especially if they're on the opposing team," Sam said. "I try and cheer them up, and give him that positive mindset for when the next shot comes around."

Spencer on the other hand enjoys a not-so-quiet sport in football.

CHARLEVOIX — Many of Gaylord's boys basketball players starred for the Blue Devils on the gridiron this fall.

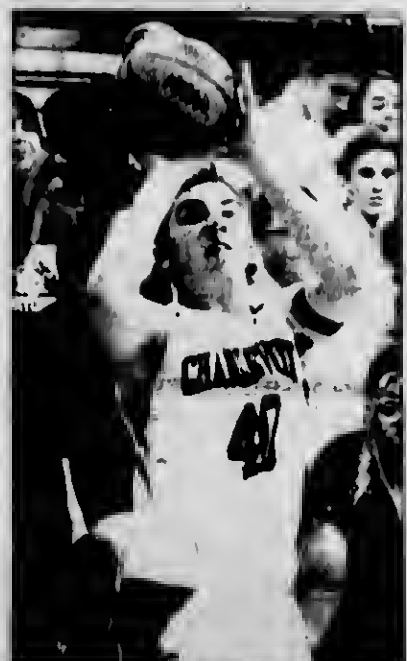

In Tuesday's 58-47 season-opening win over Charlevoix, Gaylord brought that intensity and physicality from the gridiron to the hardwood to make life difficult for the Rayders.

The Blue Devils won the rebounding battle and hounded Charlevoix all over the court with aggressive, physical pressure defense that forced the Rayders into costly turnovers and made it hard for Charlevoix to set up an offense.

"(Gaylord's) got a lot of big, strong kids, and they really used that to their advantage tonight," Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine said. "They rode us hard up and down the court and wore us down as the game went on."

Gaylord coach Tim O'Rourke credited the Blue Devils' defensive performance to effort and communication.

"We knew coming in guys would have their adrenaline pumping, and that could lead to mistakes, so we really focused on our system and working together than going for the individual play," O'Rourke said. "They hit a few 3-pointers on us, but we were able to make the adjustments

Offensive issues force loss to Glen Lake

CHARLEVOIX — Finding a new way.

Just two games into the 2014-15 season, the Charlevoix girls' basketball team is already tasked with finding a new identity on the offensive end of the floor.

Playing without senior leader Maddie Boss, the Rayders took a 47-36 loss on Monday night in the Charlevoix High School gym from Glen Lake in a non-conference matchup.

"(Maddie) was out today and I just felt like the girls have to find their own identity in the game without her and be able to find ways to put the ball in the bucket," Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw said.

The loss drops Charlevoix to 1-1 overall on the season.

first quarter with a 15-6 lead, proving the Rayders offensive problems early.

By the end of the first half, Glen Lake held a 28-14 lead on the Rayders, who would settle down at the half.

In the third, Charlevoix would outscore the Lakers 9-7, as Rayder guard Alexis Tribfeller began to take off on both ends of the floor.

"We had some moments of greatness," said Shaw. "Alexis Tribfeller scored 17 points and she had seven steals, three assists."

In such a deficit at the half, Charlevoix would be unable to come back in the fourth quarter, even with the Rayders taking the fourth, 13-12.

"We beat them in the second half, it was that first half. It was just hard to come back with such a deficit," said Shaw. "We dug ourselves a pretty big hole. Not that we didn't get the opportunities, because we definitely had lots of opportunities."

Ellie Way would add seven points for Charlevoix, while Hannah Zipp grabbed 10 rebounds. Olivia Storm and Rachel Nesburg would also each add four points in the game.

LMC PREVIEW

Lake Michigan boys preview: Rayders pushing for higher spot in standings

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
281) 439-9343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — The Charlevoix boys basketball team's 7-15 record last season obscured a team that improved as the season went on and took Lake Michigan Conference powers Boyne City and Traverse City St. Francis to the wire.

With an experienced and deep roster this season, Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine is hoping to turn a few of those close losses into wins, and push for a higher finish in the LMC standings.

"At the end of last season, we just started to gel, and our players started to commit to each other and to getting better," Erskine said. "A lot of the younger guys seemed to really start developing a rhythm at the end of the year, and that's something we're trying to build off of this season."

Leading Charlevoix's returners is junior Austin Putman, who led the Rayders in scoring last season and will be a crucial piece again this year.

Returning starter Nate Moon and sixth man Will Telgenhof will look to step into bigger roles as seniors, and Ryan Joy and Nick Jeakle will play a bigger part as well for the Rayders, which will lean heavily on its seven-man senior class.

"When you're in that junior slot, it's tough to get comfortable and find your role," Erskine said. "Now that they're seniors, I think they've picked it up a lot and really taken charge for us."

Sophomores Luke Buday and Kevin Pearl will split time between JV and varsity initially, but could play a big role down the stretch for the Rayders as new faces, Erskine said.

BOYNE CITY

Boyne City rampaged through the Lake Michigan Conference in the 2013-14 season, going a perfect 14-0 to clinch its first title since 1998.

Reaching the same heights won't be easy this season. The Ramblers have to find a replacement for 6-foot-5 post presence Rylan Carson, and also deal with being the target of every other team in the league.

Boyne City faces an additional challenge in that it got a late start to the season, as several members of the team were on the football squad that played into late November.

Charlevoix junior Austin Putman (43) led the Rayders in scoring last year, and leads a large crop of returners this season.

"We're getting off to a late start, but it's for a good reason," Boyne City coach Nick Redman said. "We've only had a week with the full team, but our players' attitude, effort and enthusiasm have been outstanding so far, and they're working hard to get where they need to be."

Though the Ramblers will be different without Carson, there's still more than enough talent to make a title run.

CMU signee and second-team all-stater Corey Redman is the headliner, and Boyne City expects big things from returners Cole Butler and Tanner Kruzel in the frontcourt, and Zach Napont and Dalton Gardner in the backcourt.

Redman said he expects Alec Hoaglund, Ben Halsted and Derek Willis to emerge as key contributors, and, with 14 players on the roster, he'll have no shortage of options throughout the season.

EAST JORDAN

While the Ramblers wear the crown in the LMC, there's no shortage of teams eager to seize it, and perhaps none more ready than the school just down the road, East Jordan.

Last season, the Red Devils upset the Ramblers in the district final on the way to East Jordan's first quarterfinal trip since 1953.

While the Red Devils have to replace leading scorer Noah Bacchus and five other seniors off of that 19-5 team, East Jordan returns two double-digit scorers in juniors

Jordan Weber and Donny Cutler, along with several other key contributors.

Weber and Cutler are part of a decorated 10-man junior class that has the Red Devils and coach Darrin Weber excited about the next two years.

"This junior class went undefeated all the way through middle school, and the last two years they've been split up with several on varsity," Weber said. "It gave all 10 of them a chance to get experience on the court, and now that they're back together they're really working well."

While the Red Devils lack the size of many of their opponents, East Jordan makes up for that deficit with strong outside shooting and speed, and, coming off a 14-1 summer and a full set of practices

Offensively the Blue Devils used a balanced effort, with eight different scorers.

Senior Steven Fitzek led the team with 13 points, and senior Collin Watters chipped in 10 points and 10 rebounds in the post.

Junior Jack Korte bit two 3-pointers and finished with nine points for Gaylord, and junior Jakovan Pryor-McCovery added six points and 14 rebounds.

The turning point in the game came in the second quarter, when the Blue Devils used a late surge to outscore Charlevoix 23-14 to go into the half up eight.

Much of the difference between the two teams offensively came at the free-throw line, where the Rayders failed to take advantage of getting into the bonus with six and a half minutes left in the half.

Charlevoix missed five free throws in that stretch, keeping them from hanging close to Gaylord in the closing minutes of the half.

"The second quarter was the difference," Erskine said. "If you take that quarter out, we're dead even with them the rest of the quarters, and that nine-point swing really made it tough to come back."

Charlevoix hung in the game thanks to junior Austin Putman, who hit back-to-back 3-pointers to keep the deficit at eight heading into the fourth quarter and finished with 21 points, but the Rayders couldn't close the gap.

The Blue Devils put the game away early in the fourth, running off nearly three minutes of clock on three possessions that all ended in a Fitzek layup to extend the lead to 14.

"We thought about running a stall, but that's come back to bite us in the past, and any time you tell athletes not to be athletic, you're usually asking for trouble," O'Rourke said. "Instead, we told them to run our sets deliberately, take care of the ball and keep looking for opportunities, and they did a great job."

Fitzek said the Blue Devils were able to make Charlevoix pay for their aggression in the fourth.

"They were coming after us hard trying to force a turnover, and we recognized that and were able to use that against them," Fitzek said. "We kept our composure, moved the ball around, waited for spots to open up on the floor and when they did we attacked."

Junior Walker Drost added six points and nine rebounds for Charlevoix, and Nate Moon hit two 3-pointers as well for the Rayders.

"We're a team that's got seniors who are stepping into new roles, and juniors who are really playing big minutes on varsity for the first time, so it's going to take some time for us to figure it out," Erskine said. "The one thing I've seen in both games so far from this group is great effort, and that gives me a lot of hope for the rest of the season."

"Football is a good sport. It shaped my character, and my trust in one another along with loyalty for others," Spencer said. "Life is like football, you just got to blow through the obstacles you may face in life. It's made me the man I am today."

With growing up with a sibling, let alone a twin, comes a lot of conflict between both sides.

"One thing about having a twin that is complicated is, for one, we don't agree on things," Sam said. "If I like something that he doesn't, it doesn't go over well. You also try and up each other in what you're doing."

Being right is something Spencer doesn't fold on.

"The problem with having a twin is you always have that conflict of being right all the time," he said. "If you like something and your other twin doesn't like it, you always have that instinct that you're right, and they're wrong. In our room for example, if one person doesn't like something about it, it throws off the whole atmosphere of our room, and you'll just have to deal with it, and be the bigger person and say it's fine."

Regardless of any conflict between the two, they both can find positive things to say about each other.

"The thing I like most about Spencer, is that even when we're fighting or arguing about things, we can still always have a good time," Sam said. "We'll come home and wrestle or joke around. He's just a big comedian."

Spencer chuckled at the question, yet gave his thoughts.

"One thing I like about Sam is that he's always motivated to do whatever he needs to do to get it done," Spencer said. "You always have someone to communicate with and just be around each other 24/7. It's just really great. I love his motivation."

The future holds similar ideas for the duo.

"My plan for the future is to attend North Central Michigan College," Sam said.

"Once I complete all of my courses there I plan on getting my master's degree at Lake Superior State University. I'll then go into the Police Academy and earn a bachelor's degree in criminal justice and hopefully become a police officer in the near future."

The two brothers look forward being with each other after high school.

"My plan for after high school is to attend NCMC and live at home free of college loans/debt," Spencer said.

"Due to recent events at my school, along with teachers giving me advice into what I should go in to, I'm currently undecided in to what career pathway I want to go in to. Whether it's special education, business, or editing and/or filming, I'm excited for the future."

Excitement is an understatement for these two brothers. Wherever they might end up, they will no doubt be smiling.

The two teams meet for the first of potentially three title-impacting clashes on Dec. 12 in Boyne City, both teams' second game of the season.

"I'm sure (East Jordan has) been practicing and working hard for weeks, so especially in that first game, they're going to be ahead of us in terms of execution," Redman said. "We've got to do what we can to close the gap in the practices we have before that game."

While the Ramblers and Red Devils are the favorites, both Redman and Weher are quick to point out that it's far from a two-team race in a stacked LMC.

Elk Rapids will be a legitimate title contender of its own coming off a 16-6 season and bringing back the bulk of its team, including potential D1 recruit Shae Somers.

And Traverse City St. Francis, Charlevoix and Harbor Springs all have talented squads that will push for a high finish.

The journey for both the Ramblers and Red Devils begins on Tuesday, Dec. 9, when Boyne City hosts Frankfort and East Jordan hosts Mancelona to open the season.

DDA: Can't afford payment promised to public library

(231) 439-9394 • mmikus@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Good intentions from a partnership between the Charlevoix Public Library and the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority continues to leave a bitter taste for both parties.

While the library continues to request that the DDA pay a promised amount of $600,000 over 20 years, the authority told the city council Monday that it lacks the revenues to complete its contribution.

Economic Developer and DDA director Bethany Pearson told the Charlevoix Courier that the current

"I'd like for this to not become an atomic bomb."

— Kirby Dipert, DDA board member funding available to the DDA won't allow them to pay their promised donation of $30,000 a year.

The authority has to pay its debt on a bond covering the East Park and Marina project, which occurred at the same time as buying the former middle school for the library.

"The DDA wanted to help the library, and at that point, our tax revenues had still gone up. Each year we were projected to bring more money," Pearson said. "Then the recession hit, and all property values dropped. It's just not equitable to make this contribution."

In 2004, the authority expanded its boundaries and purchased the former middle school building to preserve the building for a community space.

The library then worked with the DDA to secure the funding and suggested two plans to help the library cover the costs of the debt repayment. The DDA chose to donate $30,000 each year for 20 years.

The DDA paid the full amount each year, up until 2010, when the economic recession caused property values to bottom out. Suddenly the DDA had a continued obligation, and not enough revenues to pay.

Currently, the DDA's obligation lies with paying off its bonds on the East Park and Marina projects. If they were required to pay the $30,000, Pearson said the DDA will be unable to meet its obligations by 2020-21, five years short of its projected pay-off date.

City Council moves forward with outdoor seating for businesses

(231) 439-9394 • mmikus@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — The city council approved the language for a new ordinance allowing businesses to provide outdoor seating.

Businesses will have to pay $50 annually to allow the outdoor seating for food and dining establishments. Any seating and barriers placed on city property must also be removed during the winter months to allow for snow removal.

Council member Jeff Porter voted against the new ordinance, favoring a fee that reflects the square footage the business will use on the city's sidewalk.

The council plans to provide an exception for a business setting up outdoor seating where they don't provide the snow removal, because of a request from the Bridge Street Tap Room. Co-owner Phil Parr told council members they plan to keep their barriers up to allow outdoor seating and service year-round.

"If the city were to maintain that space, then we'd understand," Parr said. "But we maintain that space."

City planner Michael Spencer said the city could write the rules to allow businesses to leave their furniture and barriers up in the winter, so long as they meet certain criteria.

The council also dissolved the Airport Advisory Committee. Council member Shirley Gibson will meet with the city manager and airport manager to determine how to organize the new airport committee.

City manager Roh Straebel informed the council that the Michigan Municipal League offered training on open meeting law, freedom of information law and conflict of interests issues. The cost would be more than $800.

City attorney Scott Howard told the council he was willing to do the same training at his regular hourly rate, capped at a total of $700.

Even after the November election the Charlevoix Public Schools Board of Education has to fill one open position.

During the election there was one candidate, Douglas Bergman and two write-in candidates, Matt Peterson and David Moon.

They will join vice president Dick Joseph, Nancy Allison and treasurer Valerie Snyder.

The board will take applications and begin the vetting process in January, said Dick Joseph, vice president of the board.

"If nobody applies we'll move on and try to find somebody," he said. He said people have expressed interest in the open seat, but they didn't want to go through the election process, Joseph said.

Along with filling the open school board seat the board has had to fill the open for an interim superintendent position after Bob Gendron resigned. His last day was Nov. 26.

The board had a few candidates in mind for the position and the first declined the offer.

They then decided on Tom Stobie, who accepted their offer and began Nov. 27.

Stobie is from Frankfurt and was the superintendent of the Frankfort-Elberta Area Schools from 2004 to 2013.

Joseph said his contract runs through June 30 of this year.

"Hopefully we have someone (permanent) by then," Joseph said. "Possible candidates don't become available until the end of the school year. In May we will start interviewing."

Police offer reward in armed robbery case

STEVE ZUCKER
(231) 439-4344
szucker@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Police in Charlevoix are now offering a reward for information as they continue their investigation into an armed robbery of a gas station and convenience store late Sunday.

Charlevoix Police Chief Gerard Doan said his office is now offering a reward of up to $500 leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the armed robbery at the Charlevoix E-Z Mart Store. Today, Tuesday, an anonymous donor added another $2,000 to the reward amount, bringing the total to $2,500, Doan said.

According to an earlier police news release, the robbery happened at about 9:25 p.m. at the Charlevoix E-Z Mart, located at the intersection of U.S. 31 and M-66 on Charlevoix's south side.

Police said staff at the store reported that the suspect entered the store through the front door and demanded money from the clerk. The suspect did brandish a handgun. The clerk turned over an undetermined amount of cash and the suspect then fled the store on foot in the direction of May Street, police said. The suspect is described as a white male, 5-foot-9 to 5-foot-10, with lighter colored hair. The suspect was wearing black work boots, green mask, dark colored jacket.

On Monday, Doan said, investigators are still going through surveillance video from the store. He said a K-9 dog was called to the scene and was able to track the suspect for a distance, but then lost the scent in a nearby field. He said investigators have collected some physical evidence in the case, but did not specify what the items were.

Doan said he can not rule out that there could be a connection between a similar robbery that took place at the same store on March 26, 2013.

He said that case has not been solved, noting that little progress has been made in the 2013 case since DNA evidence collected in case was not a match to a suspect that had been developed.

Doan noted that in the earlier incident a different clerk was on duty, but that the time of day was similar (9:58 p.m.) and the description of the suspect was similar. The 2013 case involved two suspects and no gun was displayed by the culprits in that case.

Police are requesting anyone with information regarding this robbery to contact the Charlevoix Police Department at (231) 547-3258.

Winter Solstice

You may have noticed that the sun, when it appears at all, is very low in the winter sky.

Before people living in our northern climates understood the shape and function of our solar system, this was a serious concern. Something had to be done.

Groups of people built giant fires; sacrifices were made. And it worked. One day in what is now late December, the sun ceased its retreat. Solstice in Greek literally means sun stops.

That we celebrate the birth of Jesus in late December is at least partly the effort to connect that event to what was already a winter festival. No one has any idea specifically when Jesus was born, but connecting it to an already established festival was a fine idea.

EAR TO THE GROUND

The equinoxes in spring and fall and the solstices in the summer and winter are the most ancient festivals for human beings. We should certainly celebrate them, along with whatever special days have been attached to them.

I have put up the lights, I have made the fruitcake and the cookies. We will celebrate the return of the sun, or Son if you prefer. The sun is still the source of our life and it is well to be reminded of that.

We can only hope that our efforts will again lure the sun back from its southern retreat.

Deer harvest decline blamed on weather, other factors

MARK JOHNSON
(989) 732-1111

NORTHERN MICHIGAN — Harsh weather and small hunting numbers led to a significant decrease in the deer harvest totals for this past deer hunting season. According to Department of Natural Resources estimates, based on activity at deer check stations, deer processors and other observations and information, the 2014 deer harvest was down approximately 10 percent from 2013 in the Lower Peninsula.

Brent Rudolph, wildlife research specialist for the DNR, said a number of different factors were believed to have played a part in the decline in harvest numbers. "There were fewer hunters and fewer deer, certainly not as many deer as we have had in the past," Rudolph said.

Other factors he mentioned included a decrease in the number of licensed hunters prior to firearm deer season by approximately 3 percent compared to 2013, heavy snow in some areas and a late corn harvest.

Because farmers were not able to harvest the crop until later in the season, deer were able benefit from the shelter, protection and cover

"Any time there is a cost increase, there are some people who do not want to pay the increase."

— Brent Rudolph, wildlife research specialist for the DNR of the corn stalks.

Rudolph also pointed to a change in regulations in licensing as an additional reason for the harvest decline.

He said the DNR established a fresh set of regulations for 2014 to 2016, and with the new regulations come various changes and increases in licensing and other fees. These changes led to confusion and unwillingness from some hunters to pay the increased hunting license fee.

"Any time there is a cost increase, there are some people who do not want to pay the increase," Rudolph said. "They want to pay what they did before."

Heavy snowfall experienced during deer season also had a significant impact on the number of deer harvested.

The heavy snowfall and overall harsh weather experienced over the past two winters in the Upper Peninsula led the DNR to reduce the antlerless quota prior to firearm deer season, playing a part in the 30 to 40 percent decrease in firearm deer harvest from last year in the Upper Peninsula alone.

A very snowy November further decreased those numbers in the Upper Peninsula this year, and also decreased the numbers in the Lower Peninsula.

The heavy snow led to a reduction in deer movement and prevented hunters from driving deer out of swamps and other areas. Access to state land and other hunting areas was also hindered by the heavy snow, limiting the number of times hunters could go to the woods or preventing them from hunting altogether.

Despite the decrease, Rudolph said he does not believe it will have much of an effect on future management decisions.

"I do not see a dramatic impact at this point," he said. "It is good to have a good hunting season every year and we can certainly understand hunters' frustration when the season does not match their expectations."

"For now we will focus on the long term."

After these harsh winters, some work has been done with making stronger habitats to help protect the deer and wildlife from the harsh winter conditions, something Rudolph said will continue to be a focus of the DNR.

The statistics provided by the DNR were estimates and a complete assessment of deer harvest and hunting participation will be completed by using information obtained from the annual hunter mail survey.

Hunters who do not receive the survey by mail and who wish to complete it may do so by visiting www.michigan.gov/deer and selecting "Complete a Deer Harvest Survey Online" toward the top of the page.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

LOOKING BACK...

CHARLEVOIX - In the very early part of the last century, a small ice skating rink was laid down on the current parking area east of Dr. Voci's Clinton Street optometry office. This was done to try to get kids away from the ice of Charlevoix's three lakes. Many times this innocent fun had resulted in tragedy. The rink grew in popularity, resulting in a larger one laid down near the schools a block away in 1922. The city utilized the entire width of the block between Clinton and Mason Streets on the land that is now the eastern portion of the parking lot and landscaped grounds of the library. Every winter from 1922-1923 on, for decades the skating rink was one of the most popular places in town. On January 7, 1948 the Charlevoix Courier reported that since the rink opened for the season during the previous Christmas week, a daily average of 125 skaters had showed up. According to rink custodian Leslie Everts, they wore off half an inch of ice every day. Dahlquist's dime store donated the records, and the VFW supplied the amplifier and record player mounted in a window of the high school beside the rink. Many older Charlevoix residents can still recall skating around to those scratchy waltzes and fox trots whose sound wafted all over downtown. In the photo, to the left is Charlevoix's 1889 fourth schoolhouse which sat next to the high school, and came down in 1945. The white dots throughout the upper portion of the photo are light bulbs strung on wires the length of the rink.

Survey: E-cigs surpass regular cigs in teen use

BY LAURAN NEERGAARD
AP Medical Writer

WASHINGTON — Electronic cigarettes have surpassed traditional smoking in popularity among teens, the government's annual drug use survey finds.

Even as tobacco smoking by teens dropped to new lows, use of e-cigarettes reached levels that surprised researchers. The findings marked the survey's first attempt to measure the use of e-cigarettes by people that young.

Nearly 9 percent of eighth-graders said they'd used an e-cigarette in the previous month, while just 4 percent reported smoking a traditional cigarette.

said the report released Tuesday by the National Institutes of Health.

Use increased with age: Some 16 percent of 10th-graders had tried an e-cigarette in the past month, and 17 percent of high school seniors. Regular smoking continued inching down, to 7 percent of 10th-graders and 14 percent of 12th-graders.

"I worry that the tremendous progress that we've made over the last almost two decades in smoking could be reversed on us by the introduction of e-cigarettes," said University of Michigan professor Lloyd Johnston, who leads the annual Monitoring the Future survey of more than 41,000 students.

E-cigarettes often are described as a less dangerous alternative for regular smokers who can't or don't want to kick the habit. The battery-powered devices produce vapor infused with potentially addictive nicotine but without the same chemicals and tar of tobacco cigarettes.

The survey didn't ask about repeat use, or whether teens were just experimenting with something new. But between 4 percent and 7 percent of students who tried e-cigarettes said they'd never smoked a tobacco cigarette, noted University of Michigan professor Richard Miech, a study senior investigator.

"They must think that e-cigarettes are fundamentally different," he said.

E-cigarettes began to appear in the U.S. in 2006 but this was the first year that the Monitoring the Future survey asked teens about them. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has estimated that during 2013, 4.5 percent of high school students had tried e-cigarettes during the prior month, a tripling since 2011.

The CDC reported last week that 10 states permit the sale of e-cigarettes to minors. The Food and Drug Administration has proposed regulating e-cigarettes, including banning sales to minors; there is no timetable for final rules.

Midwest International receives renewed MIOSHA Certification

CHARLEVOIX — Midwest International Standard Products Inc. in Charlevoix, a manufacturer of dust control equipment, was recently awarded renewal of its respected Michigan Safety and Health Achievement Recognition Program certification from the Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The health administration established the award to recognize employers for outstanding workplace safety and health programs that distinguish them among their peers. The program is part of the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulatory Affairs.

"Midwest is to be commended for its continued focus on worker protection," said MIOSHA director Martha Yoder. "MIOSHA is pleased to renew this special recognition and to have a continued partner in workplace safety and health."

The award targets small manufacturers to help them develop, implement and continuously improve the effectiveness of their workplace safety and health management system. The program provides an incentive for employers to emphasize accident and illness prevention by anticipating problems, not reacting to them.

"It's been a pleasure working with the state of Michigan in improving our standards and techniques in workplace safety," said Midwest CEO Walter Pair. "Not only are we working in a safer environment, but doing so more efficiently with a heightened sense of awareness to ourselves and those around us."

The Onsite Consultation Program within the Consultation Education and Training (CET) Division operates the award. Worksites earn an exemption from "programmed" MIOSHA inspections on a yearly basis.

Onsite consultants work with employers to help them become self-sufficient in managing occupational safety and health. The MIO-SHA review team consisted of Bill Shane, retired senior safety consultant and Robert Dayringer, senior industrial hygienist.

Some of Midwest's new improvements include internal inspections and surveillance and the installation of improved equipment and processes. Midwest is a second-generation family owned company that employs 18 people.

William H. 'Bill' Winn, Sr.

William H. "Bill" Winn passed away Dec. 9, 2014, at the age of 92.

He was born in Hamilton, Ohio, on Jan. 12, 1922. His father died when he was 7 and he spent his formative years in an orphanage run by his mother. He was a student at Wahash College for two years until the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Like thousands of other young men, he enlisted in the Army Infantry spending most of his time in France and Germany. Following World War II he graduated from the University of Cincinnati with a degree in business.

On Sept. 13, 1942, he married June C. Hathorn. They were married 72 years, and she survives him.

Bill is also survived by his sister, Donna Sadler; sons, Bill Jr., John (Zita); daughters-in-law, Janna and Lolly; grandchildren, George (Connie) Winn, Brenda Winn, Billy (Melissa) Winn, Wendy (Bill) Taylor, Heidi (Kevin) Hall, Amy (Sean) Smith, Kenny Anderson, Zita Anderson; and 13 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death last year by his son, Charlie, and grandsons, Trent Winn and Taylor Winn.

Bill spent many years in the appliance industry in sales management. In 1971 he changed industries and became president of North American Sales and Marketing for Triumph, BSA Motorcycles. In 1975, he and his three sons, Charlie, Bill Jr. and John, formed Four Winns Inc. to manufacture fiberglass power boats in Cadillac, Mich. In only 11 years, the company grew to be the third largest in the world with headquarters in Cadillac including engineering, manufacturing and sales, and a satellite manufacturing in Athens, Texas, employing a total of more than 1,600 people. From the very first year the company made a profit, Bill insisted on starting an employee profit sharing program which grew into the millions until the family sold the company to Outboard Marine Corporation. He not only shared monetarily with the employees and community of Cadillac, he spent much of his time volunteering to make a better life for many, a trait he tried hard to pass on to all generations of his family. He wore a button that said RMA, Right Mental Attitude, and he was the epitome of that attitude. In 1978, our third year in business, we burned to the ground, losing everything. In 1980 consumer interest rates were 20 percent, Jimmy Carter proposed banning boating on weekends and our industry was hit with a 10 percent luxury tax on boats. While we were all frightened about our survival, Bill Sr. gave us hope and confidence and taught us to do more with less. He said you can't appreciate the good times unless you have experienced the bad. To the remaining employees we had, he passed out his RMA buttons and, as they say, the rest is history.

A family memorial will take place held at a later date. Condolence cards may be mailed to June Winn at The Terraces, 26475 S. Tamiami Trail, Bonita Springs, FL 34135. Memorial contributions may be made in the support of the Leukemia Research Efforts of Dr. Moshe Talpaz at the University of Michigan Comprehensive Cancer Center, c/o Office of Health System Development, 1000 Oakbrook Drive, Suite 100, Ann Arbor, MI 48104-6815; or the Michigan Chapter of the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society in Bill's honor. Bill lost his son last year to leukemia.

pay. Jeff Porter, 1st Ward council member, asked about the need to have a director for the DDA, pointing out the salary and benefits could help cover the authority's commitment to both the bond and the library.

DDA chairman Dan Barron said the director's work has secured alternative funding for the DDA's programs. "About $120,000 in funds were brought in because we have a director," Barron said.

City manager Rob Straebel added that Pearson also does city wide economic development.

Other city council members said they felt the DDA continued to show good faith for the library, since the two work together on projects such as the winter farmers market. They took no action during the Monday council meeting.

Library director Valerie

Meyerson told the Courier prior to the meeting that she believes the DDA wants to keep contributing, but without any agreement written out, the library has to bring up the issue so it's not forgotten.

"To be honest with you, if the DDA had the money, they'd pay it. They know the value the library has to the downtown. That's why we partnered with them from the beginning. If they don't have the money, they don't have the money."

"But you can't just let it get swept under the rug. I don't want us to roll over and say it's gone," Meyerson said. "We just want to make sure they make good on their word when they can."

Without the annual donation from the authority, taxpayers pay about .04 mills more, at about .76 mills, to cover the debt repayment. Meyerson said the DDA contribution does not affect the library's operating budget.

Still, members of the public questioned the DDA's word on paying when they promised to pay in the first place.

Kay Heise, a citizen and supporter of the library, pulled out a copy of a Charlevoix Courier news clipping and the minutes from the DDA meeting, citing that the board agreed unanimously to support the library.

"It doesn't say they might contribute, it says they will contribute, by a unanimous vote from the DDA."

Kirby Dipert, a member of the DDA board, suggested that any new leases or projects that generate revenue for the DDA could go to the library first, as an olive branch between the two community organizations.

"I'd like for this to not become an atomic bomb," Dipert said. "I do support the library, and I think it's important to make every attempt to pay what we intended 10 years ago."

STURGEON RIVER POTTERY
ARTFULLY GROWING SINCE 2000
When my parents first opened Sturgeon River Pottery, they were building artists who realized they needed to expand beyond their own work. They became a retail establishment and business grew like crazy. The Bank of Northern Michigan was integral during that time—giving advice, access to capital, and even coming to grand openings. When I took over the family business, it was clear our bankers could handle anything from a mom-and-pop shop to a multi-million dollar business. They've helped us grow to the next level, time and time again. After years of knowing them, personally and professionally, there's no question our business and our bank are better together.

WRESTLING

Charlevoix wrestling team takes second at Manton Invitational

CHARLEVOIX — Despite being shorthanded, the Charlevoix wrestling team took second place at the nine-team Manton Invitational Saturday.

The Rayders opened the season Dec. 10 with a 42-30 victory against Mancelona and narrow 35-34 loss to Onaway in a tri meet at Onaway. On Dec. 12, Charlevoix lost 51-30 at Rogers City.

The team will improve once a pair of key athletes — state qualifier Sam Hovie (160 pounds) and sophomore Malcolm Williams (145) return. Hovie is currently ranked No. 3 in the state by michigangrappler.com. Both are nursing injuries suffered during football season and should return to the lineup soon.

took second place. Senior Devin Largent (215) and sophomores Jordan Chernauckas (112) and Camden Alden (125) each took third place. Senior Spencer Bruce (heavyweight) took fourth place.

Coach Mike Hinkle said he is looking forward to having the full squad back on the mat.

"We have a great team this year, but this first month of the season has been brutal, in addition to our injuries, we've had illness," he said. "Sophomore and regional qualifier Camden Alden returned to training this week after a two-week hiatus due to mononucleosis. He trained for two days, and then had his first match with state champion Joe Traynham of Onaway. He lost the match, but wrestled very well considering the circumstances."

Rayders get defensive in victory over East Jordan

DREW KOCHANNY
(231) 439-9345

CHARLEVOIX — They've had better looking final scores, but a win in the bouks will always be good enough.

The offenses of the Charlevoix and East Jordan girls' basketball team's failed to quite show on Tuesday night, as the Rayders squeezed out just enough for a 33-31 Lake Michigan Conference win.

Charlevoix improved to 3-1 overall, 2-0 in league, while the Red Devils dropped to 2-3 overall, 1-1 in conference.

For Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw, the win wasn't pretty to watch, but it came as one that her team gutted out in the end.

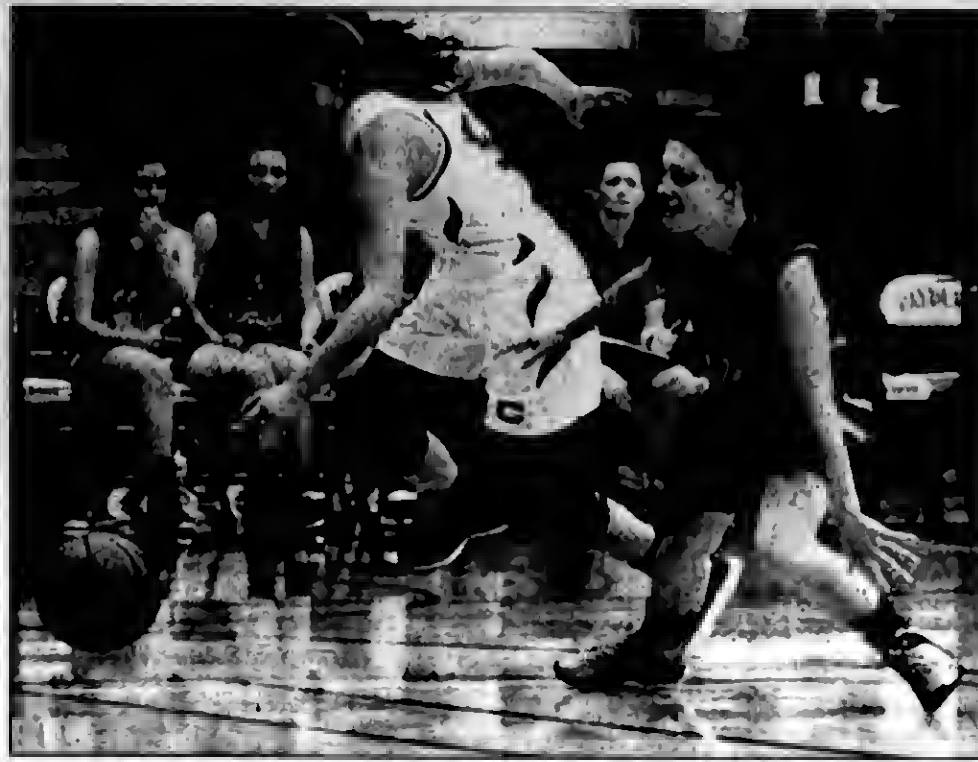

"It was a great team effort," said Shaw. "East Jordan played great press and they've got tough kids even though they're young, they're athletic. They fought for every point but my girls held their composure at the end."

The Rayders led at each of the quarter breaks, taking the first by a narrow 7-6 score.

For Shaw, it was clear early the Red Devils defense would give them some fits on the floor on the night, but it wouldn't help that the shots they did get open for, just weren't finding the bottom of the net.

"I thought defensively we did well on the press," said Shaw. "Offensively, we just didn't shoot very well. I thought we got some good looks, we just shot really poor."

East Jordan fends off late rally from Charlevoix

EAST JORDAN — The Charlevoix boys basketball team was the latest victim of East Jordan's ability to close games.

For the second time in less than a week, East Jordan fended off a furious late rally by its opponent with clutch play in the final three minutes to pull out a win, this time knocking off Charlevoix 65-53 to improve to 3-0 on the season.

"(Winning these games comes down to) just hitting our free throws, and being more patient with our offense," East Jordan junior Jordan Weber said. "When (Charlevoix) made their run, we were rushing our shots and taking bad shots, and it hurt us."

"When we do what we're supposed to do offensively, it makes everything else fall into place."

Much like Friday's win over Boyne City, East Jordan's victory was clinched at the free-throw line.

The Red Devils went 14-of-20 in the fourth quarter against the Ramblers on Friday, and against Charlevoix Weber and junior Donny Cutler combined to go a perfect 10-for-10 from the line in the fourth to take away any chance of a Rayder comeback.

It looked early on as if the Red Devils might win going away.

Behind strong first half performances from Weber, who finished with a 33 point, 11 rebound double-double, and Cutler, who added 19 points, eight rebounds and five assists, East Jordan scored the first nine points of the game and led 31-13 at the half.

East Jordan carried that momentum into the third quarter, but Charlevoix got a shot in the arm when senior Ryan Joy hit a buzzer-beating foul shot from mid-court at the end of the third to cut the deficit to 15.

That shot appeared to put the wind back in the Rayders' sails, and, coupled with East Jordan running into foul trouble early in the fourth quarter, allowed Charlevoix would lead again by one heading into halftime, 16-15.

At the end of the third quarter, the Red Devils, a team comprised of four sophomores and a pair of freshmen, would tie the game up at 24-all, putting the pressure on the Rayders in the fourth.

Clearly the more experienced team, as they were led by senior Maddie Boss with 15 points in the game, Charlevoix would pull out of the game with the two point win late.

Back from knee injury which sidelined her one game this season, Boss provided the leadership the Rayders missed when she was gone.

"I think time will get her confidence back," said Shaw. "But I think it brings some confidence to the team too. They're used to looking for her."

Olivia Storm added nine points and four steals for the Rayders, while Alexis Tribbelfner had five steals and four assists. Kourtney Putman had five rebounds.

Leah Davis had four steals and Ellie Way and Hannah Zipp each had four rebounds.

Leading East Jordan, Kaitlyn Hines scored 12 points and Lindsay Schroeder added eight points.

The Rayders will head into the holiday break with a bit of momentum with the win, as they next travel to St. Ignace for a non-conference matchup on Tuesday, Jan. 6.

East Jordan will next travel to Johannesburg-Lewiston on Friday, Jan. 9.

Charlevoix 52, Elk Rapids 35

ELK RAPIDS — After returning from an injury, Maddie Boss scored a game-high 14 points and added four steals, while Alexis Tribbelfner added 12 points for the Rayders during a Lake Michigan Conference win on Friday over the Elks.

"Maddie (Boss) showed a lot of heart tonight playing with the injury," Charlevoix coach Liz Shaw said. "We rallied and played great team defense."

Charlevoix led after the first quarter, 14-5.

The Rader lead stretched to 31-15, at halftime.

"Our press was causing Elk Rapids problems," Shaw added. "We took advantage of a lot of steals and easy baskets because of it."

Also for Charlevoix, Leah Davis scored eight points, grabbed four rebounds, and had five steals, while Olivia Storm scored eight points. Kourtney Putman added six rebounds, and Tribbelfner had three steals.

For Elk Rapids, Emily Huher scored nine points.

For Titus, Lauren Shepard and Olivia Vollmer scored four points each. Also Allison Sape and Alex Baron scored.

For Klinger, Lauren Jensen and Kate Klinger scored four points, while Katherine Wagner also scored.

Seventh- and eighth-grade preseason league

Charlevoix to claw its way back into the game.

After a scoreless first half spent mostly on the bench with two fouls, Charlevoix junior Austin Putman exploded in the second half, going for 14 points and six rebounds to help the Rayders cut the deficit to five points with three minutes remaining.

Nate Moon chipped in 11 points and six rebounds as well for the Rayders, and Ryan Joy added nine.

"To play in this league, you've got to come play every single night, and go hard for 32 minutes, or you're going to get beat," Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine said. "Tonight, we got great effort for 16 minutes, but for the first 16 we didn't show up to play. The biggest difference (in the second half) was just that we were more aggressive attacking the basket, and better about finding the open man. It comes back to effort and energy, and we need to show it for an entire game if we want to win games."

While Charlevoix got rolling, East Jordan's offense stagnated for most of the fourth quarter, and it took a big 3-pointer from Weber with under two minutes to play to get it rolling again.

"When we're playing our best, we're making the extra pass," coach Weber said. "Tonight we shot the ball a little too early, and we didn't get as many second shot attempts as I'd like."

"We're still a young team, mostly juniors, and hopefully we can learn from tonight that when you've got a team down, you can't relax, or it might come back and bite you."

Charlevoix (0-4, 0-2 Lake Michigan Conference), meanwhile, is off until Jan. 13, when the Rayders host Cedarville.

The long layoff gives Charlevoix a chance to build on the positives of its start and work on its problems, Erskine said.

"We've played four really good teams, and we've had a chance in all four games," Erskine said. "There's a lot we're doing right that we can use as a foundation; now it's about finding consistency and continuing to get better."

Elk Rapids 78, Charlevoix 62

ELK RAPIDS — Shae

Somers scored 25 points, Adam Troutman added 17, and Miles Star had 12 as the Elks got past the Rayder Dec. 12 during a Lake Michigan Conference game.

For Charlevoix, Kenen Borths scored 12 points and Will Telgenhof added 10 points.

Elk Rapids jumped out to an early first quarter lead, 24-15.

Charlevoix cut the lead to two points mid way through the second quarter, but Elk Rapids would streak to a 49-32 halftime lead.

"We are young, and we make some young mistakes," Charlevoix coach Bret Erskine said. "They (Elk Rapids) have a balanced attack on both ends of the court, and it gave some problems."

The Rayders equaled the Elks scoring in the second half, but the damage was done.

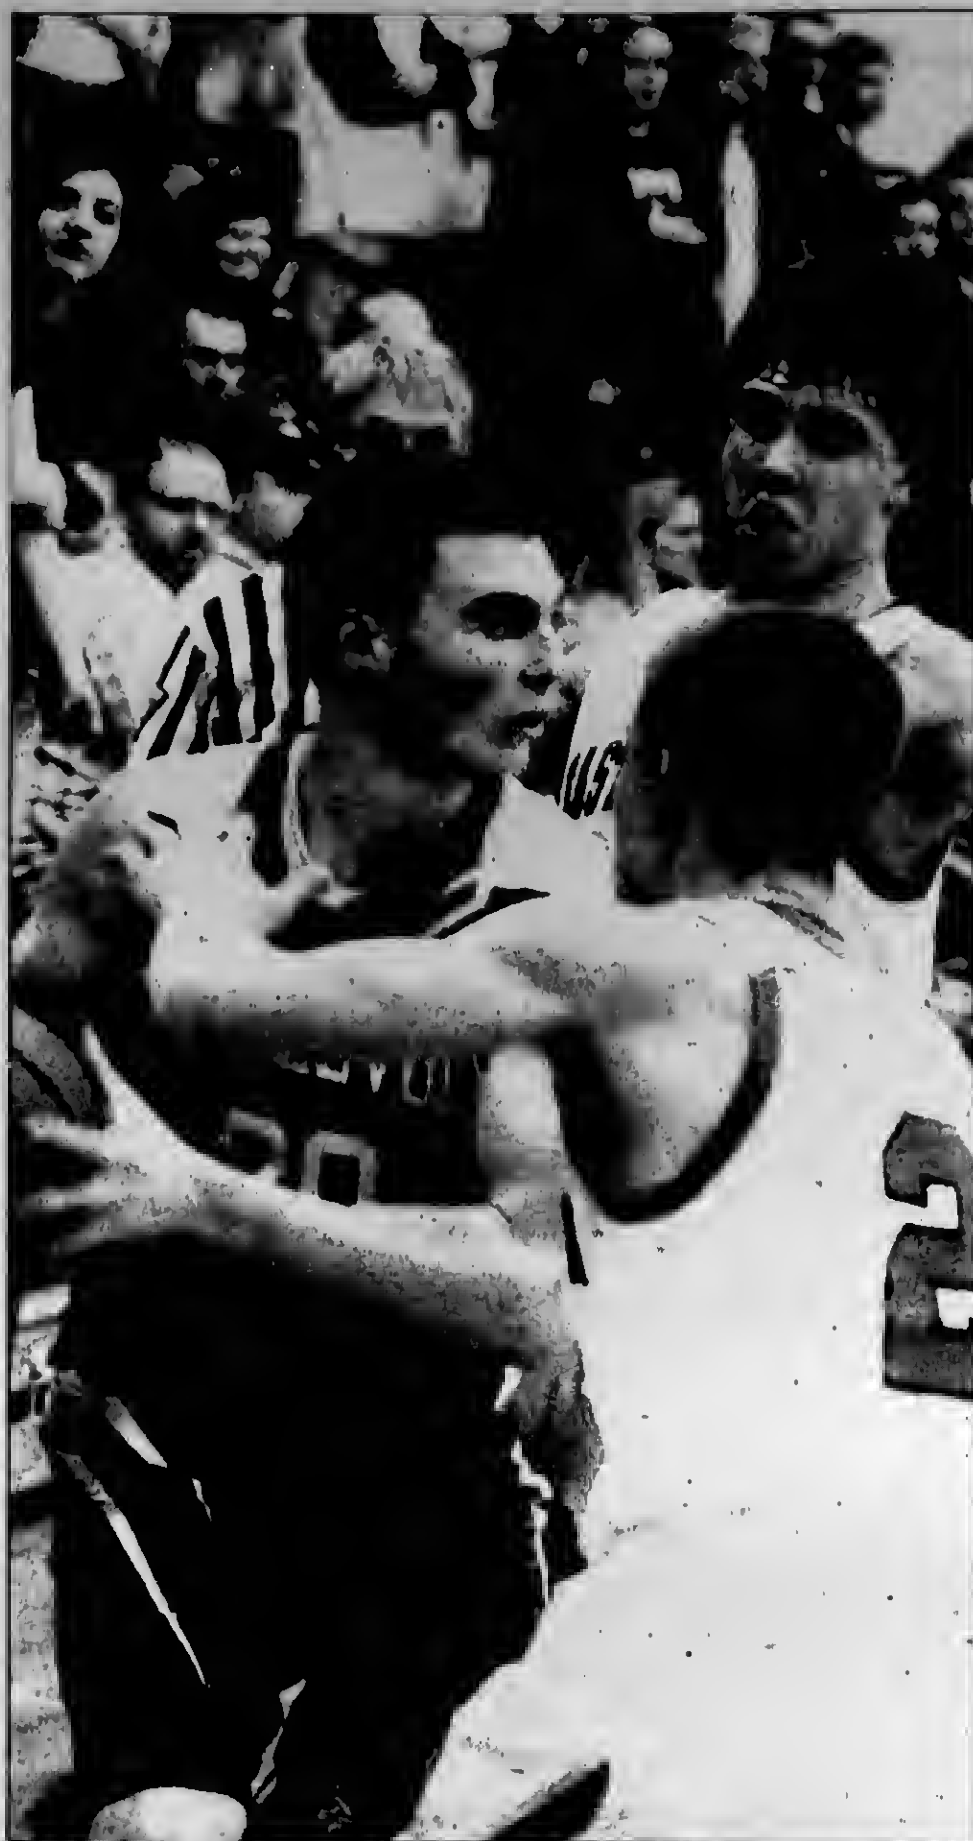

"We played a solid second half," Erskine said. "However, the late second quarter run for them, was too much."

Charlevoix is 0-3 overall, 0-1 in league. The Rayders will host East Jordan on Tuesday, Dec. 16.

Straebel considered for Petoskey manager position

MATT MNIKUS
(231) 439-9394 • mmnikus@petoskeynews.com

Charlevoix city manager Rob Straebel is on a short list of interviewee candidates for the Petoskey city manager position.

Petoskey officials plan to interview four candidates, including Straebel and three from downstate.

Straebel said he has kept the city council and city manager informed of the process.

"Obviously I'm looking forward to the interview, and we'll see where this all goes," Straebel said.

The expected interviewees also includes Roseville city manager Scott Adkins, former Detroit Planning and Development director Robert Anderson, and Lake Isabella village manager Timothy Wolff.

Consulting firm The Mercer Group helped Petoskey field candidates for the open position. More than 40 people applied to the position, and Mercer found 11 of those to be leading candidates.

The Petoskey city manager position became available after Dan Ralley resigned earlier this year to pursue employment in Ohio. City finance director Al Terry has been covering the manager duties since then.

Charlevoix mayor Gabe Campbell said he understands Straebel's interest in looking for another position, and wishes him luck.

"I'd kind of hate to see him go," Campbell said. "I like Rob. I think he's doing a good job."

"If Petoskey is lucky enough to get him, they're getting a good man. I'd like to see him stay here, but he's got to do what's best for him."

Christmas project wraps up another season

ANNE KELLY
special to the Courier

Prior to the Dec. 17 Christmas Performance of the Charlevoix Elementary School children, principal Doug Drenth thanked the parents for helping his students raise almost $1000 ($982) so that they could purchase toys for kids in need, and deliver them into the hands of The Charlevoix Christmas Project.

"I'm just so proud to be part of a community who does this," he said. "If children learn how to be compassionate, they have learned the most important lesson we could teach them."

Compassion, coupled with the spirit of the season, inspired more than 100 volunteer adults, teens and children to participate in the annual Charlevoix Christmas Project. The Christmas Project has become a model of efficiency.

Bethany Lutheran Church in Charlevoix, served as a storage, organization-central and distribution headquarters, to assure that all went well for area seniors and children this Christmas.

It was definitely a success, according to Mary Eveleigh and Rebecca Jeakle who headed the food and gifts part of the operation and co-ordinated other committees.

More than 200 families and 400 children were served. The project engaged churches, youth groups, school children and community folks from all walks of life, some of whom begin to plan in October each year.

The week prior, community volunteers could be found packing boxes of food, organizing toy tables, coat, hat and boot rooms, a craft center and a teen room in the church community center. Many of the toys and games had been collected locally from the Toys for Tots collection centers around town.

Clothing and toys for specific families had been bagged and tagged as a result of the "Giving Tree" at St. Mary Church and the Episcopal Church's "Angel Tree." Charlevoix State Bank participated by asking for hats and mittens for their annual "Mitten Tree."

Shoppers took care of any tags left on the trees lest any child should go without. School children and youth groups pitched in. The hallway tables were overflowing with the generous donations from individuals, businesses and thrift shops. They provided one more opportunity for clients to pick up seasonal decorations, household implements and gently used toys. Perishable foods: turkeys and hams were brought out on the day of distribution, Friday, Dec. 19. Potatoes and apples had been washed and sorted. The doors were open for "business" from 9 a.m. until 3 or 4 p.m. Clients had been awarded a "ticket" for the day, chosen by application or recommended through area agencies, churches or schools. By showing the postcard sent to each recipient-to-be, people were able to receive a box of the makings for an entire Christmas dinner and breakfast the next morning: canned and boxed items, perishable items, and a turkey or ham. Families "shopped" for their families in the centers provided with toys, games, craft kits, clothing, gift cards and decorations. Project volunteers were on hand to orchestrate the flow of people, many of whom began lining up at the door at 8 a.m. Others carried items to cars for recipients. Still others made home delivery runs for shut-ins; that part of the operation based at the Charlevoix Community Reformed Church.

BANKING WITH HEART SINCE 2005

Business in Peoskey is changing, and it's not different for a heart specialist. Not only is The Bank of Northern Michigan changing its name, but the relationship we have with them is even stronger. They're growing, up-to-date. We certainly could have gone to a national bank, but the quality is a factor in New York City. They wouldn't understand Peoskey business, nor would they have our heart of Michigan. It's about the relationship we've built. Our relationship has grown from checking and savings accounts to a mortgage to business loans. And it has become a partnership. When a bank does everything they can for us—as a personal and professional bank—it's obvious that our business and our bank are better together.

Officials turn down tobacco ban

CRAG CURRIER
(231) 430-9368
ccurrier@charlevoixnews.com

CHARLEVOIX — Smoke 'em if you got 'em. People may continue to light up on Charlevoix County-maintained beaches at Whiting and Thumb Lake parks after the county board of commissioners declined to support a recommendation from its parks department that tobacco use be prohibited in those areas.

The proposed ban was as much about reducing littered cigarette butts as it was moving smokers away from non-smokers and children sharing the beach, county parks director Ross Maxwell said.

"We spend an hour at each beach a week and we pick up cigarette butts, you have to," Maxwell said. "It's just disgusting. If we can keep the beaches clean, the beach is sort of like a playground and the kids are running all over. You've got a group of people there smoking and they're just sticking them in the ground like it's a giant ashtray."

Larry Sullivan was the lone commissioner supporting the move as his motion to approve the ban didn't receive a second from any of the other four board members present at a meeting Wednesday at the county building in Charlevoix.

"I do commend the parks committee in that they did not take a position that all parks should be tobacco-free, it's merely the beaches," Sullivan said. "Cigarette butts and cigar butts on the beaches, it's probably the number one form of litter. I don't see a need for it."

But none of the other commissioners were ready to prohibit tobacco use on the two county-owned beaches.

"I don't think we're ready for this and we need to wait," board chairman Joel Evans said.

Evans didn't dispute that smoking is a public health problem, but said it isn't the role of county government to stop people from doing so.

"I think everybody would agree here that smoking is not good for you," Evans said. "We want to do what's best for Charlevoix County, but I think we all would agree also that sometimes government gets to telling us all what to do."

As it is written, the resolution would make county-owned beaches

"100 percent tobacco-free." The proposal includes cigarettes, cigars and smokeless tobacco, Maxwell said. It also seeks to ban the use of electronic cigarettes.

Maxwell said the resolution was modeled after one adopted by the city of Charlevoix with additional input from the Health Department of Northwest Michigan.

County commissioner Chris Christensen said the resolution was "convoluted" and "over-reaching." "I agree that the litter is the issue, but I think this policy jumped the tracks," he said.

County attorney Bryan Graham told board members if they eventually seek to ban tobacco use at the two beaches, they should do so with an ordinance rather than a resolution, which amounts to little more than a suggestion and is not an enforceable policy.

"If you truly want to regulate this with some teeth, then you have to do it by an ordinance," Graham said. "The county has limited ordinance authority, but it does when regulating your own property."

The Flint Journal. Dec. 14.

Shrink Carriage Town historic district to expedite revitalization

The Carriage Town neighborhood in the heart of Flint is a unique and significant part of this city's rich history, and revitalizing the area makes sense in the grand scheme of a Flint comeback.

Carriage Town is more than 100 years old and was once the center of Flint's early carriage-making industry, making it one of Flint's oldest neighborhoods.

Unfortunately, parts of the venerable district are overcome with rampant blight, and while preserving the historical integrity of parts of Carriage Town makes sense, we agree with a new report that suggests shrinking the boundaries of the historic district by about 10 blocks would expedite progress.

As it stands, Carriage Town property owners need the permission of Flint's Historic District Commission before construction, renovation, demolition or movement of structures can occur. The historically recognized district lies north of the Flint River between Fifth Avenue, Saginaw Street, Atwood Stadium and Begole Street.

Shrinking the boundaries would remove unnecessary hurdles to development. Too often, individuals can get caught up in the mindset that "if it's old, it's worth saving," and that simply isn't always the case.

Many of the vacant houses in the portion slated for removal from the historic district are beyond reasonable repairs. In some cases, making historically appropriate improvements or restorations requires extra costs to the property owner and maintaining the architectural integrity of the structure just isn't a realistic goal for every home in the district.

There are properties in the district that are worth preserving — such as the American Indian burial ground — and we urge supporters to lead the way on getting historic designations for those areas on a case-by-case basis.

As for Atwood University, which is also within the portion slated for removal from the district, we urge Kettering University — it's new owner — to continue pushing for improvements at and around the iconic Flint landmark. Kettering has already proved itself to be a superior steward of the stadium, and we hope that continues well into the future.

Carriage Town's history should be preserved, but it should be done in a way that doesn't impede the possibility of new development or blight elimination in the neighborhood.

As a community, we need to balance keeping what is worth saving with letting go of the past and embracing what is possible.

The Mining Journal (Marquette), Dec. 14. U.P. projects good use of Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund

The Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund Board recently recommended five Marquette County development projects for funding, among a dozen Upper Peninsula projects and four acquisitions totaling nearly $24 million.

Statewide, the board recommended 69 projects and acquisitions totaling $24.7 million, which will now be reviewed by the state Legislature and sent to the governor for his signature. Acquisition grants totaled $18.2 million and project development grants $6.5 million.

We're pleased with the announcement and are wholly supportive of the trust fund, which puts money from interest earned on the proceeds from development of publicly-owned minerals toward public acquisition of lands for resource protection and outdoor recreation and public outdoor recreation development projects.

The five latest projects recommended for funding in Marquette County totaled $240,000 and included Lions Field trailhead and park improvements in Chocolay Township, a Malton Road non-motorized trail in the city of Ishpeming, Grouse Enhancement Management System trailhead sites in south Marquette County, interpretive signs for the Iron Ore Heritage Trail and pathway connections and trailhead amenities at Schwemwood Park in Marquette Township.

These projects are all worthy of funding and some — like the Iron Ore Heritage Trail — associated improvements — continue work begun years ago to create the 48-mile trail showcasing the area's mining history. The trail continues to grow in popularity.

The grouse improvement funds will help the Michigan Department of Natural Resources further work on one of its most recent initiatives, which involves setting up several GEMS hunter trails in Michigan.

Over the years, there have been trust fund grants approved for all of Michigan's 83 counties and Marquette County has seen many improvements from the funding. This year is no exception.

We look forward to seeing work begin on these projects with their completion aiding the area in providing greater recreation opportunities for residents and visitors to the region alike.

Politics, not science, driving Obama's climate agenda

During a visit to California earlier this year, President Barack Obama linked the lengthy drought there to climate change. "A changing climate means that weather-related disasters like droughts, wildfires, storms, floods are potentially going to be costlier and they're going to be harsher," he said.

But scientists, led by those in the federal government, say climate change had nothing to do with the Golden State drought. A report by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration lays the blame on natural variations in the weather — not climate change.

In fact, NOAA's Martin Hoerling suggested the drought may be an argument against accepting some climate change predictions.

Weather events in California for three winters are "not the conditions that climate change models say would happen," he noted.

Will Obama heed the scientists he is so fond of claiming support his climate change agenda? Don't bet on it — because for Obama, it is the politics that are really settled.

The Detroit News. Dec. 15.

Give the Great Lakes a boost

The U.S. Senate should pass the Great Lakes Restoration Initiative Act of 2014, a critical piece of legislation that keeps Great Lakes renewal efforts moving ahead.

The act authorizes $300 million annually for five years to support a relatively new restoration program that has already proven its worth. The House has already signed off.

Over the past five years, the initiative has invested more than $1.6 billion to restore the Lakes by cleaning up toxic pollutants, restoring fish and wildlife habitat, fighting invasive species, and reducing run-off from cities and farms.

Jordan Lubetkin, of the National Wildlife Federation's Great Lakes Regional Center, says his group is happy with the proposed allocation of $300 million, especially because earlier this year some members of Congress tried to reduce the amount.

The Great Lakes are among Michigan's most valuable assets, as well as the nation's.

The economic numbers speak for themselves. Michigan ranks fourth in the nation in the percentage of jobs associated with industries related to water, at 718,700. The Great Lakes states benefit from and contribute to the national economy through a $7 billion fishing industry.

Also, the Great Lakes provide more than 1.5 million jobs to U.S. citizens with more than $62 billion in wages. The most recent tourism figures, of which the Great Lakes are a critical element, show that in 2012 about 3.8 million visitors were attracted to the state and they spent $1.1 billion.

Initiatives funded by the act protect drinking water, clean up toxic pollution and keep beaches safe for swimming, for the more than 30 million people in the region.

In the long run, the cost of not funding the programs now will be much greater, as pollution and other problems escalate. The act creates jobs and economic benefits.

Todd Ambrose, campaign director of the Healing Our Waters-Great Lakes Coalition, says the bill strengthens federal Great Lakes restoration efforts.

"The Great Lakes Restoration Initiative is producing results in communities across the region, but more needs to be done," he says.

While the act authorizes the $300 million for the initiative, Congress must still include it in next year's spending plan. It's a worthwhile investment for a resource so vital to the entire nation.

Charlevoix's Lewis Grand Opera House

Ede Remenyi was born in Hungary in 1828. He went on to become one of Europe's most renowned violinists. In 1848, he befriended 15-year-old musical prodigy Johannes Brahms, soon to make a mark as one of the world's leading composers. They toured together, with Brahms as accompanying pianist, in 1853. During their friendship Brahms absorbed Remenyi's extensive knowledge of gypsy music, which showed up in many of his compositions including his fiery Hungarian Dances for four-hands piano, then orchestra. Several years later, the violinist accused Brahms of plagiarism when he thought he recognized some of his own melodies in the music.

Remenyi went on to become soloist to Queen Victoria in 1854, then court violinist in Vienna for Hapsburg Austro-Hungarian Emperor Franz Joseph in the early 1860s. Remenyi took up residence in the United States sometime after 1879. During one of his many tours, Ede Remenyi appeared in Charlevoix in 1897 before an enthralled audience that packed the Lewis Grand Opera House next to the channel beside the bridge. The violinist died during a recital in San Francisco in 1898.

COMMUNITY Highlights

CHARLEVOIX — The employees at Charlevoix Area Hospital recently took a little time out of their normal schedules to celebrate this special season with each other.

Whether they were in professional clothes, lab coats or scrubs, the halls were filled with employees enjoying some holiday festivities.

The hospital's management team honored the employees by not only hosting an open house with all day-treats for everyone, but by making a $10 donation in each employee's name to a local charity.

Employees stopped by the administration offices and were asked to fill out a brief form, indicating their choice of one of four charities: Charlevoix County Humane Society, Antrim County Animal Shelter, Women's Resource Center and School Kids' Wish List. The forms included a space to write funny stories about pets or what they wore to school or what the worst present they received from a spouse was.

For instance, one employee shared that her dog was a "craiglist chihuahua" that turned out to be a terrier mix and another employee shared that the worst Christmas present he got from his spouse was Ziploc bags.

For more information about Charlevoix Area Hospital, visit cah.org.

Library to host farewell Open House for Valerie Meyerson

CHARLEVOIX — The board of trustees, Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library and staff ask the public to join them as they bid a fond farewell to long-time director Valerie Meyerson.

A farewell open house has been scheduled from 4-6 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 6, in the community room at the Charlevoix Public Library, 220 West Clinton St., Charlevoix.

Meyerson came to Charlevoix in 2001 and was instrumental in creating the Charlevoix library that the community utilizes today. Under her leadership, a successful capital campaign in 2004 led to the community's support for the renovation of an historic downtown school into the current public library in 2006. The remodeled building now houses up-to-date book collections, electronic resources, audio visual materials, separate children's creativity and learning centers, teen areas and meeting and community rooms just to name a few of their resources. The library has offered hundreds of programs, concerts and children's events for the surrounding area. Meyerson's vision and leadership have made the library the "living room of the community."

She will begin her new position as director of the Petoskey District Library in February.

Dwain Abramowski, Amy Conk and former staff member Jessica Dominic will provide music and refreshments will be served for those who wish to drop by and wish Valerie Meyerson good luck and to say thanks for all of her hard work.

Zonta donates to Women's Resource Center

CHARLEVOIX — Women's Resource Center of Northern Michigan recently accepted a donation of food, supplies and a financial contribution from The Zonta Club of Charlevoix.

The food and supplies will help restock pantry shelves at the Safe Home which provides support and shelter to survivors of domestic abuse and their children. The financial donation supports the WRCNM's Educational and Employment Services which offers academic advising, educational scholarships, job search assistance and career guidance to those looking to enter or re-enter the workforce.

The donations reflect the club's focus on awareness and prevention of violence against women and align their service activities with Zonta's international campaign, called "Zonta Says NO to Violence Against Women."

Event honors Bay Township veterans

An area cemetery committee recently hosted a Wreaths Across America wreath laying event in Charlevoix County during which each of the 41 veterans interred in Bay Township's three cemeteries were recognized and honored during special ceremonies.

The cemeteries included were: Dyer, Oaklawn and North Bay.

Organizers said 28 people attended the Dec. 13 event, many of whom were the relatives or descendants of the deceased veterans being honored. The event was sponsored by the Bay Township Area Cemeteries group. The group was formed by the Bay Township Cemetery Committee in collaboration with the Horton Bay United

OBITUARIES

Berta Meyerson Molasky

Berta Meyerson Molasky, of Petoskey, Mich., formerly of Detroit, Mich., died on Dec. 20, 2014.

The funeral was 10 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 23, at Ira Kaufman Chapel in Southfield, with interment at Beth Abraham Cemetery.

She was born July 14, 1933, in Detroit, to Benjamin Tauber and Anne Metliss Tauber. Berta passed away peacefully in Petoskey surrounded by family and friends.

She was raised and lived most of her life in the Detroit area. After graduating from Detroit Central High School, she attended University of Michigan and Wayne State University, graduating from Wayne with a BS in education, Pi Lambda Theta, in 1954. Continuing with her lifelong commitment to learning and education, she added an M.A. in English in 1959 and an education specialist degree in reading in 1982, both from Wayne State. She was A.B.D. for a Ph.D. in education.

She taught auditorium and reading for the Detroit school district from 1954-1962. She returned to teaching after raising her children, working for Oak Park Schools from 1978-1992 as a reading specialist.

You could often find Berta at the Bridge Club, and she earned a Silver Life Master in 2011. She also enjoyed tennis, skiing and sailing. Berta traveled overseas extensively, visiting dozens of countries over the course of her life, and every continent except Antarctica. She enjoyed hosting and assisting the Meyerson brothers at their restaurants, The Scotch & Siroin and The Trio. Berta was a voracious reader, and was a patron of the Detroit and Traverse City symphonies. A huge fan of all Detroit and University of Michigan sports, she especially loved the Tigers and almost always had the game on the radio or television.

She donated countless hours of her time as well as financial support to many charitable groups such as CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocate for Children-Guardian ad litem), National Council of Jewish Women (president), Charlevoix Hospital and Garden Club (volunteer).

She retired and spent her latter years "Up North" in Charlevoix and Petoskey alongside her family. More than anything, Berta enjoyed being a central part in the lives of her family. Her children and beloved grandchildren inherited her dedication to her community and public service; they are all active community members.

She was predeceased by two husbands, Gerald Meyerson (married from 1961-1980), and Marvin Molasky (married from 1990-2009).

Berta is survived by brother, Joel (Shelley) Tauber; sister-in-law, Shelby Tauber; lifelong friend and confidante, Barbara Mayer; children, Benjamin (Nicole Dewey) Meyerson, Valerie (Tom Johnson) Meyerson, Joshua (Mary Jean) Meyerson, Emily (Harry Kitchen) Meyerson; grandchildren Jeremiah and Anne Johnson, Max and Gabriel Meyerson, and Amanda Kitchen.

Berta knew what she liked and was not afraid to ask for it. Many local restaurants knew her as the lady who liked her coffee decaf and extra hot, and ordered her French fries very well done.

There will be a memorial service at the Temple B'nai Israel in Petoskey at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 4, 2015.

It is suggested that those who wish to further honor the memory of Berta Meyerson Molasky do so by making a contribution to:

PROJECT

ties' most vulnerable individuals and families, is the culmination of many months of meetings, organization and hard work orchestrated by dedicated volunteers, who continue the precedent set more modestly many years ago in the basement of the Charlevoix Congregational Church. At that time the Community food pantry was housed there. Three ladies, who oversaw the distributions of the pantry, decided that there was a real need to help financially strapped families with the burden of Christmas dinner and gifts for their children. The late Mary Helen Riggle, Rita Orlovski and Lucy Martin spearheaded the effort which eventually grew into the Christmas Project it is today.

"In the beginning," said Maxine Bergmann, a long-time volunteer at the food pantry, "we took names of people in need from those that frequented the pantry."

The Food Pantry eventually moved from the Congregational Church, and the Christmas Project was organized in a succession of roomier locations: the American Legion Hall and the VFW were two of these. The Project then became more ecumenical and involved area churches of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association.

"The people in Charlevoix are wonderfully generous," Bergmann said. "They have always been willing to pitch in and help and dig deeper for donations."

This year, Mary Eveleigh of Charlevoix took over the reins as chairperson of the project. Longtime resident, Bev Boss, who grew the project into what it is today, is critically ill and was unable to be in charge for the first time in over 10 years. She received play by play reports about the progress of operations from Eveleigh and Boss' daughter, Barbara Meyers, who has joined her mother each year to help the week before the event. Volunteers who were recruited by and have worked on the project with Bev over the years, seemed to be doing so with additional generosity as a tribute to the lady who made the Christmas Project a major community event in Charlevoix.

"Bev Boss has been an inspiration, encouraging everyone to do their part," said Rosemary Horton, who worked on the project with Bev for many years. "She knew everyone in the community and everyone knew her for her amazing efforts for the project. She had that personal touch and made people and organizations happy to donate each year. She was a real spark plug! You couldn't find a person who didn't love her."

Janice Dietrich also worked under Bev's direction.

"She was magic," Dietrich said. "She hit everyone up for money and organized every detail and did it in the sweetest way possible."

"Here's a Bev Boss story," said Nancy LaCroix who has been working on the project for several years. "A person came in and told her that all her daughter wanted was a pink bike. An hour later, someone came in with the wished-for bike."

Eveleigh summed up the sentiments of all those who participated: "People are just so grateful for what they receive," she said. "They shake your hand and many have tears of appreciation in their eyes for the burden that the project has lifted from their shoulders. We all feel so blessed to help."

Methodist Church.

The program, which began at Dyer Cemetery, included the presentation of the colors presented by the American Legion Post 228 Color Guard followed by prayer by post chaplain Joe Gerant. Bay Township resident, township board and cemetery committee member and project group leader, Georganna Monk, gave tribute to the U.S. veterans being honored, which included a brief history of the Wreaths Across America project and the significance of Bay Township's participation in this international event.

Township resident George T. Lasater then spoke briefly to those in attendance, saying, "It is an honor to be present today and to see this taking place here in Charlevoix County. Bay Township should be very proud that they are the first, and I hope that the other townships and cities will now take notice and follow suit. I hope that one day soon we will see all of our Charlevoix County veterans being honored in the Wreaths Across America program." At noon, taps was played and a minute of silence was observed.

At that time, wreaths were distributed to the 18 veteran gravesites at Dyer Cemetery. The group then moved to the North Bay Cemetery where taps was again played and a moment of silence observed — followed by the distribution of wreaths on the 22 veteran graves in that location. The group then gathered at Oaklawn Cemetery where taps was played the final time and the last wreath was placed on the one veteran grave in that location, that of Civil War veteran, Edward D. Park.

Those being honored in the event included U.S. veterans of the following wars and conflicts: Civil War (13), World War I (four), World War II (10), Korean Conflict (four), Vietnam (two) and peace time service (two). At present, there are seven Bay Township veterans whose personal and military service details are unknown.

Sam Hovie poses with his parents and a banner celebrating his 100th win shortly after pinning Boyne City's Mac Alexander in 1:31 to reach the milestone in an LMC Tri on Wednesday at Charlevoix High School.

Hovie earns 100th win Charlevoix tops Frankfort, Boyne City

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — By his own admission, Sam Hovie isn't close to being in wrestling shape.

That's a scary thought, given the Charlevoix senior's performance in Wednesday's LMC Conference tri-match hosted by the Rayders.

Hovie pinned both Frankfort's Brandon Cox (2:49) and Boyne City's Mac Alexander (1:31) to help the Rayders beat the Panthers (45-18) and the Ramblers (48-18) to go 2-0 on the night.

The second pin also gave Hovie the 100th win of his Charlevoix career, a milestone the senior had been waiting a year to reach after finishing his junior season with 98 wins.

"It was great to get it done," Hovie said. "It's been a goal of mine for a long time, and I had to wait to have a crack at it, so it feels really good."

Despite the victories and the milestone, Hovie, who is just returning from a quad injury that caused him to miss two football games and the first week of the wrestling season, was critical of his own performance.

"It was good, but not anywhere near good enough," Hovie said. "This injury has really kept me from getting training in and getting in the kind of shape I'd like to be."

"Most of the night I was just exhausted, and I wasn't able to be as aggressive as I would have liked. I think it's going to keep getting better with more training time, so I'm hoping to keep improving."

Charlevoix coach Mike Hinkle said he was confident Hovie would reach the 100 win milestone from early in his career.

"He's a good kid, and he deserves it," Hinkle said. "He's always the first in the weight room and the last to leave, always the one running extra, and pushing the other guys on the team to another level."

"We're just hoping to get him in shape, so he can get back to the state meet and hopefully medal as a senior."

Hovie, who qualified for the Division 4 state meet last year and is ranked third in Division 4 at 160 pounds by michigangrappler.com, wasn't the only Rayder wrestler to have a big night.

Cam Alden, Spencer Bruce and Mick Hinkle all won two matches on the mat as well for Charlevoix, and all three pinned both their opponents.

Wrestling at heavyweight, Bruce pinned Juan Wiltson of Boyne City in 26 seconds and Carson Richards of Frankfort in 40 seconds, and Alden (125) pinned Parker Stolt of Boyne City in 2:41 and Jack Morrow of Frankfort in 57 seconds.

Mick Hinkle (189) pinned Gabe Huffman of Frankfort in 1:01, and Max Burke of Boyne City in 3:26 to round out the Rayders' double-winners.

Charlevoix's Tyler McClellan (130) pinned Chandler Turnhull of Boyne City in 1:36 to earn a win as well, and Jeremy Chernaukas (103) rallied from a 7-1 second period deficit to beat

New Charlevoix Sports Network to produce live broadcasts of Charlevoix sports

JAMES GENSTERBLUM
(231) 439-9343
jgensterblum@petoskeynews.com

CHARLEVOIX — What started as an attempt to keep broadcasts of Charlevoix basketball games alive is turning into something even more exciting for commentators Allen Telgenhof and Scott Boss.

Longtime radio announcers for Charlevoix's football and basketball teams on WMKT, the pair reacted fast when the radio station cut live broadcasts of the games this winter due to declining sponsorship and rising costs.

Wanting to ensure that Charlevoix fans would have access to live broadcasting for their sports teams, Telgenhof and Boss started the Charlevoix Sports Network last month with the intention of livestreaming Rayder games over the internet at CharlevoixSports.net.

"We just knew what a big deal it was to the people of Charlevoix to be able to listen to these games on the radio," Telgenhof said. "We did some checking on broadcasting games over the internet and decided we wanted to give it a go."

So far, the network has broadcast three Charlevoix boys and girls basketball games, including road clashes at Elk Rapids and East Jordan.

Telgenhof said the support of the community, both from individuals and from businesses, has been crucial to getting the broadcasts off the ground.

"When the community heard that there weren't going to be any more broadcasts, we had people coming out of the woodworks to try and help us get this going," Telgenhof said. "Parents were coming up to us and saying 'We'd throw in $50 if it'll help you get this thing going.'"

"We tried to shy away from that as much as possible because we didn't want to feel like we were charging people for content, but the business support has been great as well. As soon as we said we would try it, the community really came in to help out almost immediately."

Even though the broadcasting is still in early stages, it's already caught the attention of several people, including Telgenhof's and Boss' former employer, WMKT, which reached a deal this Monday to broadcast Charlevoix Sports Net content on the air and bring Rayder basketball back to the airwaves.

"It works out well for both of us because we get to continue having our broadcasts on the radio and selling that to our sponsors," Telgenhof said. "And from their perspective, they get to broadcast these games at a significantly reduced cost because we're producing the content and our overhead is much less than theirs was."

Even though Charlevoix sports are back on the airwaves, Telgenhof said there's still a lot of advantages to the new, web-based format the Charlevoix Sports Network is using.

"One of the big things about what we're doing is that we're able to archive all of our broadcasts, so now people can go back and listen to it on the website, download it and save it," Telgenhof said. "Additionally, it allows us to do other sports besides football and basketball."

"Because our costs are minimal compared to what they used to be, we're able to do a lot more events than we did previously. If we can get one parent to sponsor, we can cover the costs of doing an event live."

One thing Telgenhof is especially interested in doing with the new format is a podcast on Charlevoix athletics.

"We'd like to do something with a sports talk-style format, where we're talking to area coaches, sportswriters and players and putting that on the web," Telgenhof said. "We're thinking about trying a lot of different things and seeing where it goes."

"We've got a lot more flexibility to try different things and experiment a little bit here than we did when we were employees of the radio station, and we want to take advantage of that to produce interesting content."

Interested readers can visit www.charlevoixsports.net to learn more about the network and listen to both live and archived broadcasts.

The network also has a Facebook page, under charlevoixsportsnetwork, and a Twitter handle, @ChxSportsNet.

SPORTS

Charlevoix's Tyler McClellan (top) tries to maneuver into a position to pin Boyne City's Charler Turnbull during their 130-pound match in Wednesday's LMC Tri at Charlevoix. The Rayders won the dual 48-18.

Ben Tiesworth of Frankfort in a 13-7 decision for the Rayders, who improved to 3-2 in duals on the year.

"We're getting back into it, and hopefully another starter for us, Malcom Williams, will be back on Friday," Hinkle said. "We've got a couple of guys who will be coming back soon as well that'll allow us to fill some of the holes in our lineup, and be more competitive as a team."

"I'm pleased with what we've done so far, and looking forward to continued improvement."

Boyne City had no 2-0 wrestlers on the mat in the tri, as the Ramblers' lone winner against Charlevoix, Will Calo (215) received a win by void in Boyne City's 42-24 win over Frankfort.

Calo pinned Devin Largent in 3:46 to earn a win in a back-and-forth match during the Charlevoix duel.

Stolt (125), Carter Wilmot (152), Burke (189) and Wilson (285) each won a match for the Ramblers against Frankfort.

Stolt pinned Ezra Bechler in 1:06, Wilmot pinned Levi Hubbard in 0:41, Burke pinned Huffman in 1:26 and Wilson pinned Richards in 4:48 to help the Ramblers pull away for a victory.

"Charlevoix's a good, solid team and well-coached, so if we can go out and be competitive against them with all of the young guys we have, it's good for us," Boyne City coach Bob South said. "Against Frankfort, we got the momentum early with Juan winning and setting the tone, and our young guys really fed off that enthusiasm."

"They're working hard and doing great, and when we're matched against teams who are on our level, you're seeing that progress, even if it's not as evident against a team like Charlevoix."
